Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, December 10; Agra, December 8; Calcutta, December 7; and Madras, December 6.

THE one salient topic of the week in India was the tremendous wigging administered by the Viceroy in Council to nearly all the engineers concerned in the erection of certain military buildings at Allahabad. Last June a part of the new Gun Carriage Factory fell in, with a loss of several native lives. The press took up the matter, Lord Mayo's attention was drawn to the statements made in the papers—such is his own confession—and forthwith a Committee of Inquiry was ordered to report, not only on the ruined building, but on the new barracks in the same place. For one of the consequent General Orders we must make room next week; the other will appear, if possible, in an early issue. In these two documents the Press of India may find some reward for their long warfare against the Public Works Department. From the Committee's report it appears that the failure of the centre wall in the factory building was mainly due to the worthless mortar which had been used throughout all the block of buildings. The mortar contained only six per cent. of lime, and was largely composed of alkaline salts. Lord Mayo, guided by the report, proceeds to deal out his censures to the several culprits. Supervisor Bartram is to be removed from the department, as "thoroughly unfit for the place he holds." The same punishment is dealt out to Major Jackson, of the Bengal Staff Corps, who has been found "wanting in the qualities essential" for the post of a directing engineer, "particularly in energy and power of control." He trusted, moreover, too much to his subordinates, and seems to have shown "ignorance of the elementary principles of carpentering." Mr. Clarke, the present engineer in charge, is warned to be more careful in future, on pain of losing his appointment. The Superintending Engineers under whom the works in question went forward, Major Cobbe and Colonel Rose, are "replaced at the disposal of the Military Department," as having more or less signally failed in the work of supervision. The long services of Colonel Rose would have pleaded more strongly in his favour, but for "two other serious instances of failure in duty" lately brought to the notice of the Indian Government. Colonel Alexander, like the last-named officer, tries in vain to screen his neglect of du y under the plea of having been required to make only "a form l inspection." He has therefore been "placed in a grade lower than that in which he would otherwise have appeared." Colonel Hodgson's duties were "mainly administrative," but he too never used his eyes, or else he must have discovered for himself the bad quality of the mortar used. He also failed to secure efficient supervision of the work in hand, and to him is mainly due the blame of retaining in their posts officers who "were physically unfit for the proper discharge of their duties." Ready therefore as he is to appreciate Colonel Hodgson's many high merits during a long course of service in the Public Works Department, Lord Mayo cannot absolve him, as head of the department, from blame for a failure for which his subordinates have incurred so heavy a punishment. In a final paragraph his Excellency avows the great sorrow with which he has "reviewed this deplorable history of negligence, incapacity, and corruption." We need hardly add that the issuing of this stinging Resolution has caused a great stir throughout India.

THE other Resolution of the Indian Government deals with the Report of a Special Committee on the new barracks and officers' quarters at Allahabad. Seven kinds of flaws in these buildings were pointed out, all alike "discreditable to the officers" engaged on them, while in one instance, that of the verandah walls, the work was found radically defective. Besides leaky roofs, bad plaster, defective drainage, and other scamped work, the foundations were too shallow, and a bad settlement of the walls took place over a blind well. If some of the walls did not actually fall down—about which there are conflicting statements—they were taken down to prevent their falling. The officers' quarters were "run up hurriedly," and one of them will "probably have to be almost entirely rebuilt." In commenting on these things, the Viceroy in Council declares that his strictures on "the negligence and incapacity" of all concerned in the gun-carriage factory failure are "applicable, although perhaps in a somewhat less degree, to the case of the new barrack buildings." Among the culprits is Major Cobbe, who has already received his punishment. Another of them, Mr. Henessey, the executive engineer, has been reduced to a lower grade. Major Whish gets severely blamed for his great carelessness, and will have a mark against his name in the departmental lists. Colonel Rose appears as a delinquent on this scene also. Altogether, it is a very long time since two such outspoken manifestoes have been issued from the Viceregal council-room.

THE trial of Ensign Gilbert is so far ended that he has given in his defence, and the prosecutor his reply. What the finding of the Court will be we need not waste time in guessing; but one thing comes out in the evidence clearly enough. It is possible that Ensign Gilbert committed a gross breach of military discipline, for which he may have to suffer; but it is morally certain that his commanding officer deserves much the heavier punishment of the two. He seems to have a decided talent for provoking his men and officers into something next door to mutiny, not with coarse language, but with the finer weapons sanctioned by modern requirements. Your thorough-paced martinet, who worries his men with long drills and wounds sensitive young officers with polished taunts conveyed in meaning tones, is the worst possible foe to true discipline. The only refuge from such tyranny consists in a habit of callous indifference which sensitive people, even privates, sometimes fail to acquire soon enough for their own good.

IN his letter of November 30 the Calcutta Correspondent of the Times quotes an important witness to the present state of popular feeling in India.

"A couple of days ago"—he writes—"a question worth mentioning was put to me by a very grave and serious man newly returned from a long tour inland. He said—'Supposing that we have a war with Russia, will the Indian Government retain the 3½ per cent. income-tax?' I replied that I supposed it would, as a 'war tax.' 'Then,' said he, 'you will have to take the consequences. I was here during the worst time of the Mutiny, and I saw a great deal not easy to forget; but I never knew the native feeling anything like as bitter as now.' I believe that this is correct, and it is just as well stated. If our rule here is rudely challenged, we shall need, as our second requirement, real statesmanship in finance."

According to the latest information from India there is every reason to believe that this particular source of ill-feeling will speedily be removed, or at least diminished, by the reduction of the income-tax to its old rate of one per cent. When the new financial arrangements first indicated by the Times telegram of last Tuesday come into play, we shall not be surprised if the question of an income-tax be left entirely in the hands of the local Governments, which have doubtless by this time learned how far the tax in question is suited to the habits and feelings of their native subjects.

AT the opium sale of December 5 the average price of Bahar opium was Rs. 1,178, and of Benares opium Rs. 1,140 a chest.

THE new financial scheme of the Indian Government is announced in a telegram of December 31, as already published in the Government Gazette. Henceforth the Local Governments are to be entrusted with the sole management, outlay included, of their own affairs in respect of jails, registration, police, education, the medical services, printing, roads, civil buildings, and other public works. The sum of £4,688,711 will be divided among them for this purpose from the Imperial Treasury. If more funds should be wanted by any of them, the balance will have to be raised by local taxation.

ACCORDING to latest telegraphic news Yakoob Khan was still a fugitive in Persian Seistan. Mr. Campbell's appointment to Bengal is said to have evoked no public expression of opinion.

A TELEGRAM of January from Lahore just received reports the sad intelligence of the death, on New Year's Day, of Sir Henry Durand, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, by a fall from his elephant as he was riding along the Tank frontier of his province.

THE appointment of Mr. George Campbell, of the Bengal Civil Service, to the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal, in succession to Sir W. Grey, is no more than a just tribute to the past services of a remarkably able, hardworking, active-minded, and hard-headed civil officer. It would be easy of course to make jocular allusions to the magic of a family name and to hint at motives which have probably had nothing whatever to do with the selection of a Campbell for one of the highest posts to which Anglo-Indians can usually aspire. But in the first place it must be remembered that the appointment in question rests with the Indian Viceroy, not with the Secretary of State, and in the second place we should be puzzled to pick out a fitter candidate for the post from among the names continually started in the Indian papers. In all his former appointments Mr. George Campbell has given abundant proofs of administrative talent, genuine statesmanship, and great capacity for the hard work of which, as Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, he will certainly get his full share. He has always been something more than a mere Bengal Civilian, although most of his official services have been rendered to Bengal. Before the Punjab Campaign his letters as "Economist" advocated the policy of annexation which the issues of that last struggle with the Sikhs made inevitable. His work on "Modern India" increased his reputation for political breadth of view and close acquaintance with the working of our administrative systems. To him was afterwards entrusted by Lord Lawrence the difficult task of reporting on the great Orissa famine, a task fulfilled by him with thoroughgoing researchfulness and sound judgment. His labours as Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces were cut short by ill health, which his subsequent stay in this country has, we trust, repaired, so far as to ensure him a fair chance of proving his entire capacity for the laborious duties of his new post.

MR. ABDOOLLAH has addressed to us another letter on the subject of English Education in India, in reply to Judge Banerjee's comments on a former essay of his, which appeared in our columns some months ago. Having already declined to give further space to a controversy which Mr. Abdoollah himself has set the example of carrying beyond seemly bounds, we see no reason to withdraw our refusal on behalf of a letter which mainly reiterates with fresh emphasis the old charge of literary theft against Muthura Prasad Misra, now Head Master of Benares College. Mr. Abdoollah again declares that twenty-five years ago Muthura Prasad, "in order to gain a pecuniary prize, copied, with some few verbal alterations, an entire page from Johnson's "Rambler," besides playing a similar trick with Paley's "Natural Theology." The passage from Paley may be seen, he says, in the Report on Public Instruction in the North-Western Provinces for 1845-6, "entered as the composition of Muthura Prasad Misra, and rewarded with a prize and scholarship." Mr. Lang, of the Mofussilite, exposed the theft in 1847, and the culprit's attempt to clear himself proved a signal failure. All this may be true, although we have heard from other quarters a different explanation of the alleged theft. But even on Mr. Abdoollah's showing we fail to see that Muthura Prasad palmed off the borrowed passages on his examiners as his own, or that merely by so doing he gained a prize which he did not deserve. That however has nothing to do with our correspondent's assertion that the present system of English education in India is not unjustly believed by all classes of society to have for its primary object the making of proselytes. Of the prevalence of such belief there is no sufficient evidence. It may to some extent prevail among the Mohammedans, who, like the Romanists in Ireland, look with an evil eye on all schemes of popular instruction that ignore the supreme authority of their own particular creed. But among the Hindoos in general such a belief, if it ever widely existed, must by this time be fast dying out. We know at any rate that numbers of Brahmin children sit in the Government schools side by side with children of other castes, that the number of pupils learning English increases markedly year by year in every province, and that in Bengal especially the one object, as a Director of Instruction reported some years ago, for which as a rule the people are willing to pay, is "to secure for their children a knowledge of our tongue." Does this look like the prevalence of a belief in the proselytising purposes of the Government? As for the alleged justice of such a belief, we deny it altogether. There is nothing whatever in the present system of Government and State-aided schools to warrant the suspicion of any secret design on the part of the Government against any of the popular religions. If some of the pupils fall away from their fathers' faith, that is their own business for which their consciences, not the Government, is answerable. To accuse them of wholesale infidelity is the last resource of religious fanaticism. Aspersions on their loyalty are equally out of place in view of the notorious fact that during the Mutiny, no native who had learned English in a Government school took part with the rebels, to whom indeed they were objects of little less dislike than the Feringhies themselves.

GUARDS.—It appearing that in some infantry regiments in this presidency the colour sergeants do not perform guard duties, the C. in C. in India directs the attention of commanding officers to paragraph 307 of the Queen's regulations, the provisions of which must be complied with in future.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

INDIA IN 1868-9.—II.

SINCE the discovery of the indigeneous tea-plant in Assam in 1830, the tea-culture of India has gradually spread from Assam to Cachar, Darjeeling, Kemaon, and Kangra. After some years of successful tea-growing in Kemaon, the Government in 1850 started two small nurseries in the Kangra Valley. Two years afterwards a larger plantation was authorised at Holta, which in 1860 yielded 29,312 lbs. of tea, at an average of 2s. per lb. by public auction, and 3s. 4½d. by private sale. In due time private enterprise took over the work which Government had thus prepared for it, and in 1868 as many as 2,635 acres on the lower slopes of the Chumba range were laid under tea, the yield of which in that year amounted to 241,332 lbs., fetching an average price of 2s. 2d. a-pound. The actual yield per acre averaged 91·6 lbs., but with skilful farming an acre of tea bushes could turn out 250 lbs. of tea. Some indeed of the plantations already yield about 200 lbs. to the acre, at a cost of a shilling a pound. Of the four markets for Kangra tea, the London market offers necessarily the smallest profits. Among the natives and the Anglo-Indian residents the demand is steadily increasing; but the Persian Gulf and Central Asia hold out the most alluring prospects to the Kangra planter. Plenty of labourers are at present to be had in the valley at the rate of four rupees a-month, and the Government is carrying "a difficult and costly road" through the tea-districts to the British frontier.

In the year under review more than two and a-half million Chinchona plants were growing on the Nilgherry Hills, nearly half of which were permanently planted out. Some of these had a girth of thirty-two inches near the ground, and were already twenty-four and a-half feet high. The highly-cultivated bark is evidently superior to the wild sorts, and its medicinal virtue increases up to a certain point with the growth of the plant. The red bark flourishes almost everywhere, and yields plenty of the febrifuge matter, whereas some other varieties, if richer in quinine, "require more special conditions for their development." Mr. Broughton has found it cheaper to extract the alkaloids from the green bark, and recommends the taking of the harvest between January and March, when the air on the hills is driest. In this year also the Government began to grow Ipecacuanha as a remedy for that other scourge of Indian climates, dysentery. The progress of the Forest Department was also very satisfactory, and the system of training young men for it by a course of two years in France and Germany will in due time furnish India with a band of experienced foresters equal to the growing capacities of a service which has to supply the railways with all their requisite timber.

The amount of coal yearly raised in India has increased steadily from 61½ lakhs of maunds in 1858 to 127¼ lakhs in 1868. The total yield for the latter year amounted in English measures to 547,971 tons, or about 30,000 tons in excess of the previous year.

During the year the Geological Survey pursued its researches into the Chanda coal-fields. It ascertained the general continuity of the coal in the lower sandstones, and in spite of its varying thickness the general result was satisfactory, some beds showing a thickness of forty-one feet seven inches. Another fruit of this year's surveying was the adoption of means for supplying the large station of Umballa with pure wholesome water from the lower ranges of the neighbouring hills. Further researches convinced Dr. Oldham that the great drainage basins of India date back beyond the first beginnings of the great plant-bearing series of beds. In Madras Mr. King completed his report on the area occupied by the quartzites, slates, limestones, &c., of Kuddapah and Kurnool, which, geologically isolated from the surrounding country, appear to represent in the south the older portion of the great Vindhyan series. On the Bombay side Kutch was thoroughly examined in 1869, and a map of the whole province along with a report embodying the latest researches has been prepared by Mr. Wynne, who has since gone to examine the geology of the Punjab. During the same period Mr. Theobald completed his survey of the Prome district up to the British frontier.

A full description of the great Vindhyan series in North-Western India appeared in the seventh volume of the Geological Survey's Memoirs. Stretching northwards from the Nerbudda Valley through the district of Jubbulpore, and forming the whole of Rewah north of the Sone, this great series spreads far into Bengal; the picturesque cliffs of the Rhotasgurh hills marking its limits on the left bank of the same river. Turning westward by Sasseram, Chunar, Mirzapore, and somewhat south of Allahabad, its outer line sweeps in a great curve southwards by Kirwee, Bijawar, across the Beas, whence it takes a northerly turn to Gwalior, Agra, and Futtehpore Sikri. From thence it again bears southward as far as Neemuch. A corresponding series covers a wide area in Madras and stretches into Berar and part of Hydrabad. These old and interesting rocks are divided into several groups, each marked by its own lithological features, but all alike displaying "a wonderful constancy of mineral composition."

The results of the Grand Trigonometrical Survey for this year comprised the measurement of a base line near Cape Comorin, of seventy-two principal triangles covering an area of 6,508 square miles, besides 6,615 covered by secondary triangles. Surveys were also carried out in Kattywar, Guzerat, and the districts of Kumaon and Gurhwal. Major Montgomerie's Pundits made large additions to our knowledge of the regions beyond the Himalayas. One of them made his way to Rudok, the capital of North-Western Tibe, about nine miles from the Pangong Lake. Thence going eastward, he crossed an immense plain, 15,000 feet above the sea, and of a dazzling whiteness from the salt that everywhere encrusted its surface. Borax was found in the greatest abundance. The Pundit afterwards took the bearings of Lake Mansarowar. Another Pundit got behind Mount Everest and surveyed 1,190 miles in that direction. On the North-Western frontier a Mohammedan gentleman, Mirza, whom Pottinger had once brought away with him from Herat, and who has since been employed in the British service, ascended from Badakshan along the Upper Oxus to Sirikul Lake. Thence he proceeded by Tashkurgan over the hills to Kashgar, but, baffled in his efforts to reach Khokan, he was obliged to make the best of his way home by Yarkand and the Karakorum Pass. His journey from Sirikul to Kashgar is altogether new in the history of modern explorations, and will probably throw some light on Marco Polo's journey from Europe to China.

According to the Revenue Survey returns for the year, 19,369 square miles were surveyed in the twelvemonth, at an average cost of £4. 10s. 3d. the square mile. In Oudh 1,181 square miles were surveyed, leaving 1,500 only to finish the work. The survey of Hazara was completed. Colonel Johnstone, who conducted this survey, explored some 400 square miles of hitherto unknown country during the three weeks of the Hazara campaign, and ascertained the true course of the Indus between Astoor and the Black Mountain. In Sindh an area of 5,891 square miles, mostly desert, was surveyed about Omerkote and in Thurr and Parkur. Lieutenant Barron's survey of Luckimpore on the Assam frontier was a work of no small labour. He had to cut through the thickest jungles and depend almost wholly on imported labour. He strongly urges the need of defining our boundary in this direction, with a view to keeping the peace between the native tribes who are always quarrelling with each other inside our own frontier.

The Topographical Survey aims at supplying data for fairly accurate maps, at a low price and on a moderate scale, of wild, hilly, unfruitful tracts within our own boundaries, and of the native States under our protection. In this way much useful information is quickly gathered and cheaply applied to purposes which under a costlier and more elaborate system it would take a century to carry out. Surveying parties were at work in Rajpootana, Central India, the Central Provinces, Lower Bengal, and Vizagapatam, on ground not hitherto fairly mapped, nor even generally known to Europeans. The 16,801 square miles surveyed in 1868-9 cost £2. 3s. 10½d. per square mile, or eight shillings a mile more than the average of the previous year. The quantity of fair mapping already done represents an area of 18,265 square miles, besides a somewhat larger amount of rough mapping. During the last quarter of a century nearly 600,000 square miles in all have been surveyed, an area nearly five times the size of the British Islands, more than twice and a-half that of France, and more than double that of Austria. Well may the Surveyor-general point to such an achievement as "worthy of comparison with similar undertakings in other European countries."

The study of Indian Archæology has of late years found an enlightened patron in the Indian Government. India is rich in architectural monuments of the four main religions which have there held sway—the Hindu, the Buddhist, the Jain, and the Mohammedan. Indian sculpture, especially the Buddhist, is worth studying for its illustrative richness, if not always for its artistic beauty. In this branch of art the Mohammedans naturally do not shine; but two specimens of Mohammedan sculpture have been recovered from the hiding-places where for some time they had been lost to sight. The Mohammedans on the other hand may claim all the honours of excellence in the use of glazed and coloured tiles and of inlaid marble-work on white and black grounds. Of old coins and monumental inscriptions India has enough to reward research. In 1867 Lord Lawrence urged on the local governments the importance of preserving and making known to the world the extant specimens of Indian archæology. His efforts in this direction have been studiously encouraged by the home authorities, who have proposed to carry out a regular archæological survey under one central head. With the help of such guides as General Cunningham, Colonel Meadows Taylor, and Mr. James Fergusson, such an enterprise cannot fail of success.

In the way of Sanskrit literature, the year under review shows some promising results. Dr. Bühler ascertained the richness of Guzerat in Sanskrit books, and himself managed to collect a good many old books and copies. His catalogues of existing libraries have also proved the existence of many rare Vedic manuscripts, and even of a few books of which no copies had hitherto been obtainable. Dr. Kielhorn's researches in the Southern Mahratta country have likewise borne fruit, although they have convinced him that not much of new learning is to be found in a country which has imported most of its Sanskrit books from Northern India for the last two centuries. He also regrets to find a marked decay of scholarship among the present race of Shastris, and suggests that the Government should try to collect and publish as much of the extant traditional Scholia on old Sanskrit writings as the best of the remaining Shastris can supply.

THE CALCUTTA PANICS OF 1857.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Will you oblige me by inserting in your journal the annexed copy of a letter, which I have addressed to the Editor of the Indian Daily News, with reference to certain alleged "mis-statements" and "mis-representations" of the conduct of the European residents of Calcutta in May 1857, contained in the second volume of my "History of the Sepoy War?"—I am, yours faithfully,

J. W. KAYE.

THE ALLEGED CALCUTTA PANICS OF 1857.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "INDIAN DAILY NEWS."

SIR,—I have read, in the overland edition of the Times of India of December 3, the following paragraph containing a quotation from your paper:—

"Elsewhere we publish certain correspondence of interest regarding the days of '57 in Calcutta. Dr. Mouat corrects misapprehensions as to the extent of the panic that prevailed in Calcutta at that time. The Indian Daily News remarks:—'The letter of Dr. Mouat has reference to an interesting period of the history of Calcutta, and it has some historic interest beyond what pertains to this city. Mr. Kaye will no doubt be looked upon as an authority in the future, and his mis-statements had better be corrected while there are living witnesses of what really took place. Dr. Mouat was in the city all the time, and was in a position to know the facts of the case, and the state of feeling both of the authorities and the public. Representations have been made as to the number of people who, during the alleged panic, took refuge on board ship. The number of these was so limited as to furnish presumptive evidence against the charge or imputation of general panic, whatever particular inferences may be drawn on individual cases. It is to be hoped that means may be taken to correct the errors or misrepresentations of Mr. Kaye in a form less fleeting than the columns of a newspaper. No one is better able to do this than Dr. Mouat, and we trust he will not lose sight of it.'"

The correspondence referred to is not in the paper from which this passage is taken, and I have not yet been able to obtain access to it. But I should be very much surprised if I were to learn that Dr. Mouat had accused me of mis-statements, for no one knows better than he the pains I have taken to possess myself of trustworthy information relating to the alleged "panics" in Calcutta. One of my principal informants is Dr. Mouat himself, who, at my request, some years ago, very kindly noted down his personal recollections, which I have now before me. And I hardly think, Sir, that if you had had before you my volume at the time of writing the remarks quoted above, you would have charged me with "mis-statements." My words are:—

"The panic in May has, perhaps, been overstated in the recital. But stories are still current of Christian families betaking themselves for safety to the ships in the river, or securing themselves within the ramparts of the fort, and of men staining their manhood by hiding themselves in dark places. But these manifestations of unmanly fear were principally among the Eurasians and Portuguese, or what are described as the 'lower order of European shopkeepers.' That some people left their homes in the suburbs, that some took their passages to England, that many bought guns and revolvers and lay down to rest full dressed and full armed is not to be questioned." [And to this a note is added, which contains an extract from the Friend of India of the 28th of May, stating that "the ships and steamers in the river had been crowded with families seeking refuge from the attack, &c., &c."]

If you will do me the favour to verify these quotations by a reference to my volume, I think you will acknowledge that the words "mis-statements" and "misrepresentations" are quite inapplicable to anything I have written. It might, perhaps, have been better if you had referred to the book before using such words in connection with the writings of one who owes any little reputation he may enjoy to a general belief in his sincere desire to speak the truth, and his laborious efforts to ascertain where it is to be found.

And here, Sir, I would ask your permission to observe that I withheld from publication in my second volume a chapter already in type, descriptive of the month of June in Calcutta, in order that I might institute further investigations into this very subject of the alleged panic, and especially of the famous "panic Sunday." These investigations I am now pursuing; and I shall esteem it a favour, if you will allow me to invite, through your columns, all who have any information to afford, to oblige me by forwarding it to me, to the care of my publishers, Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co., 13, Waterloo-place, London.—I am, yours faithfully,

Penge, Surrey, Dec. 30, 1870. J. W. KAYE.

HORSE ALLOWANCE TO SURGEONS.—As the rates of grade pay laid down for medical officers include, in the case of surgeon or surgeon-major, allowance for one horse in addition to British pay and the Indian allowances of relative rank, it is notified that any extra horse allowance hitherto passed to such officers when attached to field artillery shall cease from Jan. 1, 1871.

Notices of Books.

A Manual of Hindoo Law for the Use of Students and Practitioners. By Standish Grove Grady, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Recorder of Gravesend, Reader on Hindoo and Mahommedan Law, &c., to the Inns of Court. Wildy and Son, London ; Advertising and Printing Company Limited, Madras.

We are glad to find that the Reader on Hindoo Law, &c., to the Inns of Court has turned his attention to the long-felt want of a work specially prepared for the use of law students, vakeels, the Civil Service, District Moonsiffs, and Sudder Ameens, &c., in India, and has published an elementary work embodying the principles in a popular and concise form of the whole subject of Hindoo Law. Mr. Nelson, a member of the Madras Civil Service, in his report as examiner in Hindoo Law for the Special Test Examination held at Madras, deploring the want of an elementary work bringing the law down to the present date, says, "With regard to Hindoo Law, as great changes in what is so called have been introduced by the High Court during the last few years, and candidates must necessarily be much confused by these changes, I would suggest the advisability of examining in future in certain selected cases reported in the High Court Reports. Sir Thomas Strange's work is now well-nigh obsolete, and quite below the level of modern inquiry, and I cannot but think it unwise to hold it up to candidates as the be-all and end-all of Hindoo Law."

We think, and no doubt Mr. Grady thought so too, that it would not be productive of satisfactory results to adopt Mr. Nelson's suggestion of examining students in selected cases taken from the High Court Reports. Hence the publication of this Manual of Hindu Law.

In this little work, which is published at such a price as to bring it within the reach of all candidates for judicial appointments in India, our author has treated the whole of the subjects of Hindu Law, including the law of contract, with the Statute of Limitations, set out at length, in so full and succinct a manner as to bring within a bird's-eye view the whole scope of Hindu Law. He opens the subject with a chapter on the sources of the law, a reference to which he has facilitated by appending, in tabular form, the different schools and the works recognised in each of them ; and the work is crowned by a full and ample index, leaving out nothing likely to make it what it professes to be, a manual of Hindu Law, specially adapted for the use of those who require to learn the principles of the law, unencumbered either by vague generalities on the one hand, or too minute references to cases not involving principles on the other. The author has attempted to supply the place of Strange and MacNaughten, by preserving all therein that is truly law. He has pointed out those doctrines which are not supported by the authorities cited, and has added the principles of recent decisions without encumbering the work too much by reference to the names of cases, which often tends to perplex and distract the student. He has added a chapter on the Principles of Hindu Law of Contracts, including all the decisions to be found in the High Court Reports. We can say that the candidates who go up for the annual examinations held by the Government of India, for the office of Pleaders, Moonsiffs, Sudder Ameens, and other judicial appointments, will find in this volume all that they may require. The judicial staff will also find it a valuable vade mecum in Court when deciding cases in which they require to refresh their memories by referring with rapidity to principles which are not so accessible in more copious works.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE PENAL CODE AMENDMENT ACT.

The Indian Daily News is quite in accord with Mr. F. Stephen in his remarks on the freedom of the Press. But there is also another side to the question. We do not ask for privileges, but the fact that the press is a power in itself is no sufficient reason for denying to it that protection by the law which is given to all other classes of her Majesty's subjects. The press is a means of redressing many wrongs ; it ought not itself to be subject to exceptional wrongs from others, without a remedy being afforded, which we regret to see that Mr. Stephen has not attempted, at least publicly, to deal with. The fact of its being difficult does not remove the injustice of not doing it. The freedom of the press, says the learned gentleman, consists of saying whatever we like, so long as we do not violate the law. We accept this position, and ask for no exceptional privileges ; but we do claim rights that are not given to us. Mr. Stephen, replying to the remarks of the native press, said that the press in the Presidency towns is under English law, and people who want to know what they may do should read English newspapers. He referred to the income-tax, and what had been said of it by the English press in India ; and, seeing that Government had no objection to the criticisms passed and the opinions given, they will have no cause for alarm. The people may not say things the obvious intention of which is to produce a rebellion. It is difficult to define what is a man's intention ; but every man who writes or speaks is supposed to know what he intends, and any one who has no evil intention rarely or never mistakes himself. The hon. gentleman sought to illustrate this by referring to the familiarity of friendship, which we all understand and expect, and the familiarity which is intended as insult. This analogy and argument might hold good were the parties one and the same individual ; but in a mixed assembly it is not likely that the impressions would be as readily or as distinctly conveyed, as in the prompt understanding of friendship which is a second self. And as a rule, the Judge who presides at a criminal trial will not be a man who has heard the expression constituting the offence, and he may derive very different impressions from a second-hand delivery, through a third party, from those that the words would have originally conveyed. Then, again, when the words are written, "the familiarity of friendship" cannot well be distinguished from that of insult ; and some allowance must be made for the fact that all men who write are not such scribes as the accomplished journalist and legislator. In reply to the argument that no such law was required, Mr. Stephen said a man had been convicted for preaching a jehad, and it was not to be permitted that men should preach the duty and merit of war against the English Government. This was further shown in the case of the Wahabees. This had shown a defect in the law, and it was proper that the defect should be supplied. Altogether the hon. member made his case good, as against the objections urged against the measure.

The Englishman holds that in the Mofussil any over-zealous or ill-tempered magistrate will now be enabled to crush a vernacular paper, the tone of which happens to be disagreeable to him. The mere fact of the paper being viewed with disfavour by the great man will prevent the timid and the ignorant from subscribing to it —as under the late regime was the case in France—and the proprietors of vernacular journals are for the most part poor men, whose sole source of livelihood is the little sheet they not only write, but often print or lithograph with their own hands. To such men the frown of the magistrate is utter ruin. Only the other day the Patriot noticed an instance of the kind. Some ill-advised journalist had written some silly nonsense against the Government, but in a style that could have influenced neither sane man nor idiot, and yet the local demi-god had threatened to prosecute him with the utmost rigour of the law. True, Mr. Stephen tells us that the touchstone will be the "intention" of the writer, and nothing could be fairer if there were any means of discovering men's secret motives—but how is that to be done ? In the Mofussil a magistrate is virtually prosecutor, witness, and judge, and from his decision there is practically no appeal for a poor friendless man, unless the members of the Indian press unite and form an association for the purpose of mutual protection.

GOVERNMENT AND THE PRESS.

The Englishman thinks it is always unfortunate in India when the English press is compelled to place itself in opposition to the Government. Its motives are sure to be misrepresented by the ruling classes, and misunderstood by the natives. This has been singularly illustrated in the agitation which has been raised from one end of India to the other on the subject of the income-tax. At first the Government boldly declared that the opposition to the tax was exclusively confined to the European portion of the community, and this monstrous falsehood—the product, we trust, of ignorance rather than of intention—was duly repeated by that portion of the English press which seems peculiarly susceptible to Simla inspirations. When, however, the universal discontent which was agitating the country could no longer be denied, it was asserted with an equal absence of truth, that the disaffection of the natives was stimulated and produced by the factious tone of the English press. Now we do not for a moment mean to deny that opposition to the Government in India is calculated to have a most mischievous impression upon native minds. Anything that lowers the prestige of the Government in the minds of its Indian subjects is of necessity to be deplored. They are not yet sufficiently advanced to understand constitutional opposition, and are apt to mistake the candid criticism of the acts of public men for absolute disloyalty to the State. It is this consideration that places an English journalist in an unfortunate dilemma. He has the alternative of choosing between two evils. He must either lower the prestige of the Government, which he is most anxious to uphold, by denouncing a policy of which he cannot honestly approve, or he must tacitly acquiesce in the propriety of measures which the general voice of his fellow-countrymen condemn. If he adopts the former course he exposes himself to the charge of stirring up a factious opposition; if he chooses the latter he runs the risk of encouraging the Government to persevere in measures which may bring the country to ruin. There can, however, be no doubt which alternative it is his duty to elect. If the acts of an absolute Government are to be unquestioned they must likewise be unquestionable. We should utterly fail in our duty were we to neglect to point out the errors of our rulers. No journal in India ever willingly goes into opposition. The non-official portion of the community is too closely connected with the ruling classes, and too conservative in its political principles to tolerate any needless resistance to the Government. There is an instinctive feeling in every man's mind that it is our duty to hold together. It was to this feeling that Lord Mayo owed the generous and ungrudging support which he received on his first arrival in this country. We shut our ears to the unfavourable comments of the English press at home, and unreservedly gave our confidence to a nobleman whose private virtues were admitted, though his public career had exhibited but little capacity for rule. We generously gave him credit for the future vigour of his administration; and it was gratifying to observe that his Excellency appreciated this support. During the financial panic of 1869, when the income-tax was suddenly doubled in the middle of the year, the Viceroy repeatedly expressed his acknowledgments to the press for the support he had received in what was then supposed to be a trying crisis. It was only when the unreal nature of that panic was discovered, only when it was ascertained that the year had ended with a surplus, instead of a deficit, and that an odious tax was to be retained when the ostensible cause for its imposition had ceased; it was then, and only then, that the public grew alarmed, and refused to place any further confidence in Lord Mayo's administration. He let slip his opportunity, and he is now paying the penalty for the want of statesmanship he has displayed.

THE VICEROY AND THE P. W. D.

The Englishman hopes that the officers of the Public Works Department will lay to heart the severe reprimand addressed by his Excellency in Council to their colleagues at Allahabad. It should be all the more keenly felt in that it was well deserved, though the system, as generally happens, is quite as much in fault as the officers more directly concerned. It must still be within the recollection of our readers how a fatal accident occurred in June last in one of the buildings in course of construction at the Gun Carriage Factory at Allahabad. At the time of the accident—we quote from the Government Resolution published in Saturday's Gazette—"the west compartment had been roofed in; the centre compartment was about three-fourths covered; and the walls of the third compartment were finished, but the roofing of it had not been commenced. Twenty-two work-people were employed in terracing the centre compartment, when the whole roof of this compartment gave way, owing, it is supposed, to the failure of the centre wall, and eighteen out of twenty-two work-people who had been on the roof fell with it, and had to be extricated from the ruins. Of these eighteen, four were reported to have died by the 1st July, and seven others to have sustained serious injuries. The walls of this building were begun in February 1868, and finished in September of the same year, but were left unroofed till February 1870, owing partly to delay in the supply of timber, and partly to the reduction made in the Public Works grant." The italics are our own. That brief sentence is an epitome of the manner in which this particular department usually conducts its business. Had the erection of this building been undertaken by a responsible firm, we may be sure that they would have taken care to have had the beams and rafters for the roof ready to be put up as soon as the walls were completed. The reduction in the grant did not take place until a year after the walls were finished, so that we are reduced to the conclusion that it takes the Public Works Department upwards of eighteen months to obtain timber for roofing a building 170 feet long by forty-five feet wide. That admission is the condemnation of the Department, without leaving the smallest loophole for mercy. The accident, however, is mainly attributed to the badness of the mortar, which not one of the four Superintending Military Engineers successively in charge of the Allahabad Circle appears ever to have inspected. This mortar was doubly bad; it was composed of kunkur burnt with cowdung cakes, oopla, and pounded brick, soorkee, in the proportion of one part of the lime to one part of the latter; but then the very lime was adulterated, being largely mixed with wood ashes, and the refuse of soap-boiling operations. Now let it be borne in mind that this abominable trash was used not for a few days, but for fully six months, and our readers will be able to appreciate at its true value the supervision that is exercised by the Superintending Military Engineers attached to this department.

DRESS.—It is notified that the helmet to be worn by officers of the Royal Engineers is that prescribed for infantry in G.O. 175 of 1870. The colour of the turban to be garter blue.

STATION TALK.

INDORE, Nov. 24.—With the approach of the cold weather the summer birds have taken their flight and left us to

The noiseless tenour of our way.

The Agent returned a few days ago from Agra, whither he had gone to meet the Viceroy on his return from Rajpootana; and last week he started again on his annual tour. The Chief Engineer and the Controller, P. W. D., have also followed suit. The 2nd Assistant Agent, whose departure on leave I announced in one of my previous letters, returned about a fortnight ago, and immediately went into camp. Thus the only one left us is Captain Berkeley, the 1st Assistant Agent. The whole of the Railway staff has taken the field to select a new line. The line selected by Mr. Campbell, the Superintending Engineer, did not give, it appears, general satisfaction at headquarters, as some who think they know better are of opinion that an easier and cheaper route can be found. The line from Khundwa to the Nerbudda has been settled; but from the Nerbudda to Indore, owing to the ghauts, is the debateable ground. It appears that some years ago Engineers of the P. W. D. had surveyed for a road three lines—the burra jam, the chota jam, and the mota jam, and these are now to be re-examined. I have more than once had to notice a decrease in the staff, but this time I have to note an increase in the person of Mr. A. C. Cregeen, Executive Engineer, from Simla. There is a bazaar report afloat, and I give it for what it is worth, that there has been a fracas at Mhow between some sepoys and the bazaar people. Probably your Mhow correspondent will be able to give you the correct version. The Maharaja of Gwalior's son has just passed through the station on his way to school at Poona.

CENTRAL PROVINCES, Nov. 28.—The Chief and Judicial Commissioners have resolved to make a circuit over the provinces during the cold weather; there can be little doubt that much good will come out of their tours. Mr. Melville will, after personal inspection of the several courts, and after ascertaining their weak points, be able to give them the benefit of his experience in the Punjab. His long, searching rulings on points of law which have already been submitted for his decision, have made a very good impression on those who are concerned in having careful expositions of the laws furnished them without running the risk of being dubbed troublesome for making references, or of receiving a laconic reply by way of snub. Litigants seem satisfied that Mr. Melville is a patient man and will allow every appellant to have his say, and those who know the natives will readily understand how much they value this gift in a judicial officer. Colonel Keatinge has gone down to the Godavery district, accompanied by his able Secretary, Mr. W. B. Jones, to inquire into that tax business, regarding which the Times of India made so much by declaring that the income-tax had been stopped in the provinces, whereas the fact was that the collection of the tax was only stayed in one district. Telegrams were immediately sent off from Nagpúr contradicting the Times' version; and other papers were authorised to give the true story, and to tell the public that the Chief Commissioner was about to visit the Godavery district. The Times of India will doubtless now turn round and require Colonel Keatinge to follow up the true story with the whole truth about the suspension of the income-tax in the Godavery district. Leaving the Godavery district, Colonel Keatinge will go down to Cocanada and thence by steamer to Calcutta, to confer, it is said, with the Supreme Government on some important state questions. The conjectures as to what they may be, have led to many persons believing that local taxation and territorial distribution will form the principal if not the only topics. So that there seems a chance of Jabalpúr going back to the N.W.P. after all; and of Bombay absorbing Nágpúr. All this will of course result in the creation of a new Chief Commissionership for Chattisgarh and the certain districts on the eastern coast. So far as Jabulpúr is concerned, it is worthy of note that ever since the G.I.P. Railway has been opened, Nágpúr has been, postally, further removed from Jabalpúr; and whereas Jabalpúr can communicate with Allahabad in ten hours, a dák from Nágpúr is delivered at Jabalpúr on the third day. This may be remedied when the new railway arrangements come in force, i.e., from the 1st proximo; for then the "Bombay" train will reach Jabalpúr at three P.M., and the Post-office must have an evening delivery. But that even will not be so convenient as the communication with Allahabad, the train from which will arrive at Jabalpúr in the morning, and for Allahabad leave in the afternoon of the same day. Yet I do not argue that territorial distribution hinges on this point alone; there are others, though, which tell in favour of a connection with the N. W. P. suitors, for instance, from Jabalpúr, Mundla, Dumoh, Sagar, and Nursingpore will find the Allahabad High Court nearer than Nágpúr. It is said, however, that the Government contemplate territorial redistribution on the score of economy more than with any other object. The idea is beyond my comprehension, so I will not go out of my depth. Travelling has apparently given Colonel Keatinge practical assurance of the necessity for village sanitation, for he has asked his district officers to give their earnest attention to the matter during the marching season, and to enforce the rules which have been laid down for water supply and vaccination particularly. The provinces are very much indebted to Dr. Townsend, the Sanitary Commissioner, for having brought forward the question of village water supply. He has insisted on one well for every 200 of the population for their drinking purposes. These wells are to be protected from all pollution; and, where wells do not exist, or, from the rocky nature of the ground, cannot be easily supplied, streams and other water-sources for drinking purposes are to be protected from pollution. Dr. Townsend has proved that cholera raged in its worst form just where the water supply was most neglected. The filthy habits of the natives in fouling ground in and around that village, and more especially in the vicinity of water supplies, are more to be blamed than anything else for the cholera and small-pox which recently scoured the country; and I fear nothing short of a Sanitation Act will meet the great difficulty which has to be combated in this respect. The simplest plan would probably be to throw on the shoulders of village headmen the responsibility of village sanitation in addition to their other existing responsibilities; and to empower local governments to quarter a Conservancy Establishment on villages which are recusant towards the sanitary law. If we can do this, by existing law, for the protection of property, surely the justification would be infinitely greater for the preservation of life.

HILLS NORTH OF DEYRAH, Dec. 2.—The cold weather has returned once again, the season for those noble sports that impart health and vigour to the body and generosity to the mind. Some years ago when out shooting in the hills I had a hard day's work in search of a bear with cubs. She had been seen for days in succession, but like many other things when sought for, cannot be found! Bhoop Sing, a paharee, reported to me that he had repeatedly seen lady bruin and her cubs, and that if I would only come and have a beat at her, I should in all probability kill her. Off I went. Every khud and precipice was beaten high and low, likely patches of jungle in which her ladyship and family might be enjoying their siesta were beaten, but in vain! So I returned to the village I intended passing the night at about sunset, very tired from a nine-mile walk from the station, besides being on my legs all day beating. I had scarcely reached the village, when up came one of the men, reporting that a cow had been killed by a leopard about midday, that they had kept watch over the kill to prevent it being eaten, and that the leopard would in all probability come at dusk to pitch into beefsteaks! Sitting up over a kill is generally a very certain and sure plan of obtaining a shot. I took a hasty meal from a basket of food which had accompanied me, changed my clothes, and set off to the spot where the cow was lying. Bhoop Sing accompanied me. As there were no trees at the place, a kind of hiding place had been hastily erected behind a rock some twenty paces from the cow. It was dusk when I got there. The cow was a white one, and showed well from the distance where I intended sitting. I must here mention that, owing to my having sent my battery of smooth-bore to a friend out tiger shooting in the Dhoon, I was compelled to borrow a gun, a double-barrel, a sixteen bore. I had never fired a shot with it. As was my custom for night shooting, I dropt two balls into each barrel, crept into our hiding place, and sat perfectly quiet. It was full moon, but I knew Luna would not rise until seven or eight o'clock, and until she topped a high hill behind us it would be at least ten or eleven o'clock before she would shine upon the carcass. We had scarcely sat a quarter of an hour when I saw something in a crouching posture, steadily creeping towards the cow! It was the leopard. I allowed it to begin eating, when I took a steady aim and fired, but off sprang the leopard apparently untouched. Loaded sharp and had just capped, when the beast returned, fired again and again, in succession eight times, missing every time she came; I could scarcely credit the brute returning so sharp and so frequently, but 'tis a fact that after the eighth shot she went off. We sat steadily until daybreak, and on going up to the carcass, found I had repeatedly struck the cow close to where the leopard had been tearing it. I was very much disgusted, and went back to the village. After making a cup of tea, &c., started for the station, leaving the gun and ammunition with Bhoop Sing, who was resolved to sit up again, as he made sure the leopard would return at sunset. I am at a loss to imagine how I missed so many shots. I've frequently killed leopards at night, but then I had my own guns, so attributed the many misses to my firing with a strange one. The following day, about twelve o'clock, one of the villagers arrived with the gun. The leopard again came at sunset, Bhoop Sing had fired twice at it, and missed both shots! He begged I would send one of my own guns. Luckily that morning they had been sent up from the Dhoon. I loaded with a heavy cartridge in each barrel, and sent the paharee off, wishing him luck. To my surprise the next day I spied four men carying a dead leopard slung upon a pole and Bhoop Sing strutting behind, proud as a peacock at having shot it! A female it proved to be. He told me that at sunset the beast came as usual, when he fired, killing it the first shot! The cartridge had taken effect on the neck and had lodged within the circumference of a tea cup. It was apparent that the leopard had a cub which was being suckled by mamma, and that was perhaps the reason of her being so voracious and returning so frequently to the carcass after being fired at. I've seldom seen or heard of a leopard or tiger standing more than one shot, scarcely ever two, but this animal was killed after the eleventh discharge! A few days after Bhoop Singh brought in the leopard cub, which had been killed with a large stone by one of the paharees of the village.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE REDUCED OVERLAND POSTAGE.—The reduction of postage on letters to England, via Brindisi, to eight annas (from ten annas eight pies), beginning with the present mail, has given much satisfaction.

ACCIDENTS.—Two accidents are reported from the Kangra Valley. Mr. Sparks, of the Soongal plantation, has broken his arm, his horse having fallen with him. Mr. John Mackay has been drowned in the river Beas.

THE CHIEF OF PUTTIALAH.—The Maharajah of Puttialah is expected in Calcutta very soon. A Chapter of the Star of India will be held on his arrival, to invest him with the Order which has already been conferred upon him.

RAILWAYS.—The Chord line of the East Indian Railway was to be opened for general traffic on the first of January. The advertisement mentions the distance (sixty-four miles) which will thenceforth be saved on the journey to Calcutta, but says nothing about the time. The Secretary of State is reported to have virtually left the railway gauge question to the decision of the Government of India.

RELIEF FOR SICK AND WOUNDED.—A large and influential meeting of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce was held in Calcutta on the 28th November, the Hon. Bullen Smith in the chair, to consider the advisability of an appeal to the public for subscriptions in aid of the relief of the sick and wounded during the war, and of the widows and orphans of those lost in the Captain. A committee was appointed to superintend the working of both charities.

A PLENTIFUL HARVEST.—A letter from Sepree refers to the present condition of that part of the country, and the prospects of the future in respect of food for the people in the following terms:—"This district was swept by famine and cholera last year, and the effect upon the population and quantity of land under culture is most apparent, yet such a season of plenty as this has not been known in India for ten years. Jowari is so abundant wherever seed was dropt, that the cultivators, without railways, are unable to put it in a selling market. Wheat and gram will find their way, for Bunjarras crowd the road. Altogether the crops of this year will supply means for extending cultivation in the next. The dearth of cattle has been a heavy blow, but the bounty of the sun and soil has supplied every deficiency."—Pioneer.

LEGISLATIVE.—At a meeting of the Viceregal Council at Calcutta, on Dec. 2, Mr. Stephen introduced his new Bill to amend the law on limitation of suits, which was referred to a committee to report upon in two months. He also introduced the Bill for the registration of criminal tribes and eunuchs, which was also referred to a committee. Sir Richard Temple then introduced his Bill to transfer the surplus funds of the Small Cause Courts to the Imperial revenue, and an animated discussion followed, in which Mr. Chapman, Mr. Ellis, and Mr. Bullen Smith opposed the principles of the Bill, and Mr. Stephen, Sir Richard Temple, and Lord Mayo supported them, and the Bill was ultimately referred to a committee. Mr. Chapman introduced a Bill to extend the Prisons' Act of 1870 to Coorg, and after Mr. Inglis, the new member of Council, had been added to the committees on several Bills, the Council adjourned till December 9.

TEMPLES AND TEMPLES.—In Sir Henry Bulwer's Life of Lord Palmerston, we learn that the greatest of the Temples refused the Chancellorship of the Exchequer. The reasons which he assigned are so appropriate to others in a like situation, yet so little likely to occur of their own accord, that we may be doing a service in reproducing them here:—"I own," wrote Lord Palmerston, "one's vanity and ambition would lead him to accept the brilliant offer; but it is throwing for a great stake, and where much is to be gained very much also may be lost, I have always thought it unfortunate for anyone * * to be put above his proper level, as he only rises to fall the lower. Now, I am quite without knowledge of finance." This is certainly unlike the language of certain Indian Chancellors; but then there are Temples and Temples.—Pioneer.

AFGHANISTAN.—Yakoob Khan, as we anticipated, has made for Seistan, but, contrary to our expectations, he appears to have with him a large body of troops. According to a deserter from his ranks he is accompanied in his flight by about "four or five thousand sowars and foot men, whom he has organised into one infantry and two cavalry regiments," the infantry being, all of them, deserters from the Ameer's forces. The last place of his encampment was Killa Mulkhan, about two stages from the frontier of the independent territory of Seistan, and he must, therefore, be in the close neighbourhood of the Persian forces. The Commissioners appointed by the British Government for the settlement of the Seistan dispute will, we suppose, be on the scene very soon, and Yakoob Khan may, therefore, find his aggressive policy opposed from an unexpected quarter.—Pioneer.

PERJURY.—As a sequel to Mr. Kirwan's trial and acquittal at Lahore, one of the chief witnesses, Hurree Mull, agent to Jumal Khan, the Chief of Leghari, has been committed to the sessions for perjury. The Chief himself and Nund Ram have been ordered by Government to remain at Lahore until further orders.

MORE REDUCTION IN THE P. W. D.—The Indian Daily News hears that a proposition has been made, probably by the energetic Uncovenanted Assistant Secretary to the Government of India in the Financial Department, to make some further reductions in the Department of Public Works. He appears to be of opinion that the number of executive engineers, assistant engineers, and subordinates in India is unusually high, and should be reduced by abolishing some of the divisional circles of public works. It has been proposed that where two circles are contiguous, one of them should be abolished. For instance, the Raneegunge Circle is so near to the Patna Circle that the executive engineers of the two circles frequently meet on their inspectional tours. The Financial Member of the Council, with some of his colleagues, has approved of the suggestion. But his Excellency his Viceroy, while concurring in the views expressed by the members of the Council, was of opinion that the Department of Public Works should be thoroughly remodelled, and intimation would be made to her Majesty's Secretary of State to that effect.

BURDWAN.—The Reverend R. P. Greaves, of the Church Mission Society, has died of fever, contracted whilst pursuing his duties at Burdwan. The progress and effects of the fever in Lower Bengal are fearful, if we may rely upon the accounts received respecting it. The following is from the Mirror :—"That prompt action is necessary to put a stop to the progress of the epidemic fever in Lower Bengal is evident from the following fact which has been placed at our disposal. Chokdigee is a flourishing village in the interior, lying some twenty miles to the east of Burdwan. This place boasts of a large school entirely supported by local contributions, and attended by upwards of 200 pupils, who flock to it from surrounding villages in the neighbourhood. Times are so far altered, however, and the locality so far affected by the epidemic of late, that no more than sixteen or twenty boys are found to attend the school. The entrance class has had to be done away with, and the instruction itself closed till the arrival of better days. This speaks for itself. We should seriously ask, how long will this state of things be allowed to continue ?"

THE FURLOUGH RULES.—The following military letter from the Secretary State for India is published in the Gazette of India. It is dated London, 26th October, 1870 :—I have considered your letter, No. 154, dated 10th June, 1870, forwarding an application from Lieutenant-Colonel ———, Bengal Infantry, which raises the question whether an officer who, up to his election of the Furlough Rules of 1868, had abided by those of 1796, can claim the benefit of clause 23 of the Rules of 1868, which allow a certain proportion of leave to count as service for pension. The clause in question certainly speaks of retaining a privilege heretofore granted, and officers under the Rules of 1796 had not the privilege referred to, but it was intended to lay down a general principle applicable to all officers accepting the new rules, as is shown by the Subsidiary Rule, section 34, page 3. Lieutenant-Colonel ——— therefore (who has, I observe, elected the 1868 Rules) will, on completing an "aggregate service" of twenty years, computed according to the method which has been adopted for counting service partly under one set of rules and partly under another, be entitled to count two years of leave taken since July, 1868, as service for pension.

THE CHUMBA STATE.—About a week ago we stated, on the authority of the Indian Public Opinion, that the subjects of the Chumba State were dissatisfied with the successor to the late Rajah. This we can now, on unexceptionable authority, assert is not the case ; nor is the new Rajah, Gopal Sing, the imbecile which our contemporary said he was, for, though, as we have said before, he is of indifferent intelligence, he can both read and write (no common accomplishments among Rajpoot Princes), and is wise enough to keep his money matters straight, and to avoid intrigues. His character is well known in Chumba, as also was the fact that he would, by the existing laws of succession, succeed in time to the Guddee, for the sunnd of the British Government, appointing "the brother nearest in age" to the late Rajah as his successor, is recorded in the Chumba archives. Nor has any discontent with this arrangement ever been manifested except by the other brother—Soochet Singh—a sulky and dangerous man, who has lived since 1860 on the bounty of the Cashmere Rajah, and steadily refused the allowance offered to him by the late ruler of Chumba, and who, on the death of his brother, attempted to stir up the nobles to dispute the succession. They, however, refused to do so, and Soochet Singh was compelled to retire to his sulky exile. The Indian Public Opinion in its issue, also publishes the above corrections, derived evidently from as authentic a source as our own.—Pioneer.

A NEW INDIAN MOVEMENT.—Our late visitor, Baboo Keshub Chunder Sen, seems to have been putting in practice some of his English experiences since his return to Calcutta. In company with some of his co-religionists, he has organised an "Indian Reform Association," for the promotion of the following objects :—1. Female Improvement ; 2 General and Technical Education ; 3. Cheap Literature for the Poor ; 4. Temperance ; and 5. Charity. Each of these sections is placed under separate managers, who also act in combination as a general committee, under the president of the society, Baboo K. C. Sen. The sections for Female Improvement and Cheap Literature have already commenced operations, and the new journal started by the latter section, the Sulav Sumachar, or Cheap News, is already a decided success. It is published weekly at one pice (less than a halfpenny), and "will contain, besides miscellaneous news, easy and short essays on moral, political, and social topics, and the biographies of great and good men." This journal is selling by thousands already. Morning and evening schools were shortly to be opened for the middle and labouring classes, where useful instruction of various kinds would be given. The prospectus is both practical and modest, and the scheme deserves the hearty sympathy of Englishmen. All persons who are interested in the objects of the society are eligible as members, irrespective of differences of race and creed, and we hope that some of our own countrymen in India may lend a helping hand to this praiseworthy undertaking.

OFFICIAL.—The Pioneer informs us that Mr. G. H. M. Batten, Under-Secretary to Government in the Financial Department, will succeed to the Deputy Commissionership of Customs, vacant by the death of Mr. Vere. It presumes also that it is intended that Mr. Batten should officiate for Mr. Hume, the Commissioner of Customs, now that the latter is acting for Mr. E. C. Bayley. In regard to Mr. Hume it remarks that "his elevation will occasion some surprise, if not consternation ; but he must be clever, thus to rise in spite of himself. It is never too late to mend, however ; and if Mr. Hume can be schooled into talking little and writing less, he may yet escape any grievous discredit to Lord Mayo's selection." The Englishman dubs the appointment of "an up-country civilian to take Mr. Bayley's seat at the Home Office," "another gigantic job —another insult to the Civil Service of Bengal." From the Pioneer we take the following :—"When a contemporary credited Mr. A. Mackenzie, of the Bengal Secretariat, with an ambition to succeed Mr. Eden, he was probably not aware that Mr. Mackenzie goes home in March next. Mr. Mackenzie might indulge in such an ambition with a very fair pretext, all the same." The Indian Daily News says, "Mr. T. H. Cowie, Advocate General, is expected at the Presidency at the end of this (last) week, when he will resume his post, Mr. J. Graham, who has so ably officiated as Advocate General during the learned gentleman's absence, will consequently resume his former post of Standing Counsel. Mr. G. C. Paul, who has during the same period held the acting appointment as Standing Counsel, takes his seat as Judge of the High Court. Mr. F. G. Marsden, barrister-at-law, will hold briefs temporarily for the Standing Counsel, until the return of Mr. Cowie."

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE ALLAHABAD PANIC.—An uneasy feeling sprang up about the middle of July, and originated chiefly in an anonymous letter addressed to the officer in command at the fort, warning him of an almost certain recurrence of the events of 1857. This, not much cared about at the time, was strengthened by a number of little incidents, which, trifling in themselves, indicated a feeling of intense discontent. Ladies were insulted by their servants, and so on ; and this in the midst of such a population as that of Allahabad, in a great part composed of Mahomedans, drawn from nobody knows where, or for what purpose, to this great central town, seems to have set rolling a ball which led to what everyone concerned must deplore. Finally a tradesman of Cannington (the European part of the town) waited on the General in command (Major-General Vaughan) and reported a circumstance which no officer would have been satisfied in disregarding. The tradesman's wife said that she had on the previous night overheard the servants discussing a plot to murder all the European men and reserve the women for a worse fate. This story was reported to both military and civil authorities. The servants had stated further in this conversation that nothing but rainy weather had prevented the plot from taking effect at an earlier period. Little importance, I am assured, was attached to the rumour by either the civil or military authority, but that part of the story I leave to the opinion of your readers. I fancy that it had a little effect. What is strict fact, however, is that Major-General Vaughan felt it his duty to take some military precautions, and the more so as both he and the magistrate seem to have been under the impression that the panic originated almost entirely in the withdrawal of the European Infantry from Allahabad, and in the fact that the European Artillery at the station was in such a position as to have no influence whatever on the bazaars or the native town ; in fact, the guns were scarcely ever seen. The General ordered that the field batteries should march out occasionally on to Cantonment-road, so that both the timid and ill-disposed might see that the station was not entirely denuded of European troops. Small bodies of cavalry also patrolled the town. This order, reasonable enough in itself, seems to have had exactly the opposite effect to the one desired. The people began at once to suspect that they were on the eve of the long expected outbreak. They assembled in each other's houses at midnight ; in some cases fled half dressed, and there was indeed a panic, which did not subside till Major-General Vaughan brought down a detachment of European troops from Cawnpore. I can say, also, that a place of refuge was provided by some one in command for the women and children ; and certainly if there was not discontent among the soldiers, there was something very like it, as viewed by the peaceful, or, say, timid people of Cannington. The real evil was in leaving such a station, one of the most important in all India, without European troops. I certainly do not think there was anything like panic on the part of the General commanding or of the troops, though there certainly was an undue appearance of precaution, a too apparent belief that the danger was real, while there could not possibly have been too much real precaution. The troops were uneasy from various causes, and the people caught the contagion of fear; in neither case a thing pleasant to think of.—Times Correspondent.

IMPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Dec. 7.—The market has gradually quieted since our last, and the tone at closing is dull. Grey Shirtings: Dealers have gradually withdrawn from the market, and now seem averse to do more than supply their immediate wants, feeling confident that they can, at any rate, supply themselves at any time on equal, if not more favourable, terms. Madapollams have been very quiet during the week. T-Cloths have been rather more inquired for, but we cannot note any improvement on late low rates. Jaconets: Medium makes of 39-inch continue in fair inquiry. Mulls: 44-inch are in demand and saleable, at a slight advance. Bleached Goods continue very inactive. Twist market is depressed all round.

EXPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Dec. 7.—Saltpetre: Since we last wrote we have heard of no transaction done in this article, owing to the advanced rates of freight. The stock is about 9,000 bags of Crude Saltpetre. Rice: A moderate business has transpired during the week in Table Rice at Rs. 2-6 to Rs. 3. In Ballam and Moonghey there is not much doing; we quote the price for the former Rs. 2-3 to Rs. 2-6, and for the latter Rs. 2-2-6 to Rs. 2-3 per maund. Karee Khearry and Kazlah we have heard nothing of. Linseed: The demand for shipments to America that we quoted last has abated, but the demand for England is still remaining in the market, and a moderate business has transpired during the week at Rs. 3-13 to Rs. 4-10, owing to scarcity of supplies from the interior. Rapeseed: Since we last wrote the inquiry for this article is very large, but owing to the paucity of stock we have heard of very little transaction done during the week for shipments. We quote the prices:—Yellow, Rs. 4-14 to Rs. 5; Mixed, Rs. 4-10 to Rs. 4-12; Brown, Rs. 4-8 to Rs. 4-10. Poppyseed: There is not much demand for this article, but the stock is large in the market. The holders are not accepting the prices that are offered by the buyers. Teaseed: Small transactions have been done for shipment since we last quoted. Jute: During the week the business transacted has been moderate, and the inquiry that prevailed before has lessened a little; prices for loose Jute are—Serajgunge, fine, Rs. 4-12 to Rs. 6; good, Rs. 5-4 to Rs. 5-8; middling, Rs. 4-12 to Rs. 5; common, Rs. 4-2 to Rs. 4-6. Raw Silk: During the week we have heard of no change to report. Silk Piece Goods: About 1,000 pieces of P.L.C. mark corahs have changed hands at Rs. 17 per corge.

PONDICHERRY.

The public buildings in the town of Pondicherry are in an excellent state of preservation, and would form excellent barracks. As a military station, indeed, it would be unrivalled in this presidency. It has a circumference of about six kilometres, and is divided by a canal with spacious avenues into two distinct portions: La Ville Blanche, inhabited by the Europeans and Eurasians, and La Ville Noire, given up to the natives, and the establishment of the Roman Catholic mission, which with their numerous churches, colleges and schools form a prominent feature in the place. Whether viewed from the anchorage in the roads, or more nearly inspected, La Ville Blanche at once captivates the new arrival by the smiling aspect of its houses and gardens, by its half European half Oriental air, by the regularity and cleanliness of its streets, but above all by its complete separation from the native town, an arrangement quite exceptional in India, and which makes at once its beauty and salubrity. Sir C. Trevelyan said of Pondicherry—"It is more European than any Anglo-Indian place; it is like a small continental town transported to the shores of the Indian Ocean." The French territory reduced to the exact limits assigned by the treaties of 1815 has a superficial area of 29,122 hectares, and, like ancient Gaul, is divided into three parts; these are named respectively Pondicherry, Villenour, and Bahour, the last containing ninety-three villages, many of them lying detached in English ground. The fertility of the soil is great; cotton, indigo, gingelly seeds, and grain of all descriptions are cultivated assiduously. Until quite recently spinning and weaving by steam were carried on to a considerable extent, there being several large factories, which are now at a standstill. About two centuries ago it was discovered by the Dutch that a good many tools had to be done in the way of exporting dyed calicoes to the Spice Islands in the East, receiving their produce in exchange. The French improved upon this idea, and succeeded in establishing an extensive market for their percales in Africa, chiefly at Mozambique and Senegal, receiving ivory and gold dust in return. The inhabitants of these regions, like those on the Coromandel coast, seem to prefer the coarse heavy cloths of the native looms to the lighter and more elegant fabrics of Manchester. The Pondicherry blue is considered one of the fastest dyes known, which is owing to certain chemical properties in the water and the earth, which the manufacturers of Rouen or Belgium have not as yet been able to supersede.

As regards purity, the water supply is not only unrivalled in India, but could compare favourably with that of most other places in the world. It is a fact that strangers visiting Pondicherry generally drink it in preference to any other beverage. The source from which it is drawn is about three miles west of the town, close to a tank called Mouttirey Paleom, to which the following legend is attached:—Ages ago, King Kichenarayer was travelling during the night with his Prime Minister, Appaziayer, when he perceived the house of a nautch girl, Aye, splendidly illuminated. Believing that he was in front of a temple he fell down and worshipped, but soon perceiving his mistake, he gave orders to demolish the house and excavate a tank on the site, that of Mouttirey Paleom. At the pressing entreaties of the beautiful bayadere Aye, she was allowed to construct at her own expense a well, and to give it her name. Such is the story which is narrated in a Latin inscription on the fountain in the Place du Gouvernement. The water is without colour, limpid, inodorous, and can be kept for a long time without spoiling. A chemical analysis gives a saline deposit of 0·086. Now water is quite drinkable which contains 0·10 to 0·20 of salt per litre. Inside the town there are many wells, the water of which is quite brackish, and when drunk occasions bowel complaints, dysentery and other diseases. The want of a water-supply was first perceived by Governor Dupleix, who, in addition to being a warrior, financier, diplomatist, administrator, and mathematician, was a bit of a hygienist. Time did not allow him to carry out his project of bringing water from the dancing-girl's tank, but the idea was carried on by M. Law de Lauriston, by Le Gentil, next Admiral de Verninac, and again by M. Durand D'Ubraye, successive Governors of Pondicherry, until it fell to M. Bontemps to complete the task. This will give some idea of the difficulties which being surmounted gave the town the purest water-supply in India. It was during the governorship of Admiral de Verninac that the handsome fountain on the Place was built, which inspired Major Ottely, an English cavalry officer on furlough, with the following mot:—"Pondicherry is a singular town, where are to be seen a fountain without water, a mint without coin, and an ice-house without ice:" a good hit at the French character, which is too ready to abandon projects before completion.

Thanks to the cleanliness of the town, the excellent ventilation whereby the sea breeze penetrates into the remotest corners, and the purity of the drinking water, the public health is very good. Cholera is very rare among Europeans, and such isolated cases as occur may generally be traced to some imprudence in eating or drinking on the part of the subject. Dysentery is also extremely rare. Liver complaint is unknown. During the past nine years only one case of abscess of the liver is recorded, the patient being a native. On the other hand, rheumatism, neuralgia, colds in the head, and pulmonary diseases are common among Europeans. The N. E. monsoon with its dry, cold sea breeze is not liked by the residents, who have a saying "vent du Nord—vent du mort." The pier and the beach promenade are deserted by pedestrians during its prevalence. The average number of rainy days during the year is seventy-two. Comparing this with other places it is found that in Senegal the number is thirty, at Bourbon 129, and at the Antilles 211. The cost of living is extremely moderate. The Governor expends about rupees four hundred per mensem, and other functionaries proportionally less. Should Pondicherry eventually become the head-quarters of an English force, the comfort and health of the British soldiers will be ensured. Private Jones will be enabled to marry, sign the pledge, keep a kitchen garden, and take in the Madras Mail, all upon his present pay.

Enough, we think, has been written to show that the overtures of the Provisional Government are well worthy of our consideration, irrespective of the inconvenience of having foreign Powers squatting in India. That France, for her part, does wisely in seeking to get rid of her possessions in the East and West Indies is beyond a doubt. For many a long day to come she must occupy herself in developing her internal resources, and can afford neither men nor money for her colonies, which, after all, never were worth much, either politically or commercially.—Madras Mail.

STATION TALK.

RANGOON, Nov. 22.—I have not written to you lately, for the simple reason that there has been nothing at all to write about. As usual at this season, when "the rains are over," we have had amateur theatricals, concerts, picnics, and such other indulgences to our feelings and passions as are permitted in polite society. The horizon, in Upper Burmah especially, begins to show indications of a coming storm, and the anti-King party are becoming sullen, and look as if they had determined on some stroke. Should an outbreak take place, and a conflict occur between the King's followers and those of the disaffected princes, I would not give much for the lives of British subjects at Mandalay. The Government is corrupt and rotten, and the Ministers are simply adventurers of the lowest grade, who would revenge themselves in the first place on the English, who have introduced the thin end of the wedge reform into their country, where till very lately duplicity and extortion reigned supreme, being freely practised by "Ministers," and winked at by the King, who thinks of nothing but the gratification of his sensual desires, and the acquisition of wealth by the power of tyranny from his over-taxed subjects. The priesthood are bitter against the English, in that some of the King's sons are sent to the S. P. G. school. Missionaries are often the pioneers of civilisation, but just as often they are the matches which light the torch of war and difficulties. The Shoay-Dagon Pagoda (the most revered in Burmah) is being re-gilded with gold leaf, and shines splendidly; the cost of gilding is estimated at Rs. 1,50,000. The top of the Pagoda is to be surmounted by a Tee of real gold, studded with jewels, which the King of Burmah presents. Above this is to be a wind vane, regarding the provision of which there is likely to be a row. The people of Pegu wish to put it up. The King of Upper Burmah desires to do the needful, while the Tahnies and Kalars are equally desirous of securing the honour, for whichever race puts up this indicator accounts itself the dominant or most powerful. I do not doubt that there will be a fight on the subject.—Times of India Correspondent.

THE HYDERABAD RAILWAY.—The object of the visit of the Chief Commissioner of Mysore to Calcutta is to consult with the Viceroy on the vexed question of the Hydrabad Railway.

JUDICIAL.—Sir Colley Scotland, says a Madras paper of the 29th Nov., is improving, but intends to go for a short change to Bangalore before resuming his seat in the High Court. It is stated that Mr. Kindersley was to return permanently to the Bench of the Madras High Court last week, the local Government having represented to the Government of India that his services were urgently required at Madras, where the business of the Court had greatly increased.

MILITARY RED TAPE.—A curious illustration of the rigidity of martial law procedure is reported by the Madras Times as having occurred at the Gilbert court-martial on the 29th ult. "When four o'clock struck it was understood that only one question remained to be put to complete the evidence in the case; but the Court either could not or would not sit the extra five minutes necessary to enable it to be put. So a score or so of gentlemen will have to assemble in fort to-day to hear this question put, and then adjourn to give the prisoner time to prepare his defence. If the proceedings of a court-martial were not far above criticism, we might be tempted to call this absurd. Only fancy a civil court sacrificing to-morrow in order to rise five minutes earlier to-day!"

A NATIVE ESTIMATE OF THE LATE GAEKWAR.

Terribly abused in some quarters, outrageously praised in others, it may be admitted to be the truth that, whether good or evil, he was the most remarkable native prince in Western India. A nonentity in his State, like some Rajahs, he was not. He himself was the State, and, make or mar, he had his finger in everything, from the duties of the dewan to those of the humblest village havildar. Of want of energy he cannot be accused, nor of inattention to business—in fact, it was his meddling imperiousness which stood in the way of obtaining or employing a good minister, for no man of talent and self-respect would submit to be an absolute slave. This was the secret of his liking for Bhao Scindia, a quick, sharp man, with no intellect but, much tact; no principle, but a good deal of good nature and pliability; no original ideas, but much common sense; no system of action, but much energy of execution—who formed a trusty, unhesitating tool, who lived but in his master's favour.

The principal accusations levelled against Khunderao have been those of cruelty, favoritism, sensuality, misgovernment, and, latterly, avarice. In each of these there is some, but not the whole, truth. Cruel by nature Khunderao was not, as any one who has any personal knowledge of him will declare, but recklessly severe against what he thought proved guilt, and unscrupulously revengeful when his passions were excited, he was . . . .

His sensuality was not sensuality properly so called. Abstemious in his private habits, hating the very name of spirituous liquors, addicted to violent exercise, he had yet a sort of passion for what we may call the refinement of sexual indulgence—the theatricism of obscenity by others, not himself. It was perhaps the worst feature in his character, and drew upon him criticisms he did not personally merit. His misgovernment, such as it was, was not the result of imbecility—but of design. A clue to all his public actions is to be found in a notorious speech he once made. "I am childless," said he—"when I die, my State will either go to my brother, who has twice intrigued to dethrone me, or to the English, the natural foes of native princes. Well! I will use my power so as to leave a name behind me for magnificence, and bequeath my territories in the condition of a squeezed lemon." It was the same with his avarice. He oppressed and robbed his subjects, not for hoarding, but to squander their wealth in the splendid pageantries, unheard-of gifts and ostentatious pomp by which he tried, as he phrased to "nam bunnana." But beyond this intense desire to acquire and spend every rupee in his dominions, he did not neglect to do what he thought good for his people's welfare. . . .

He has been accused of a leaning to Mahommedanism. The truth is, that he was of no religion at all. He had no more regard for the real doctrines of Mahommedanism than he had for the higher mathematics when he extorted a fresh lakh of rupees. "A son! A son! A son! will any God grant me a son?"—was his cry. "I will profess any religion by offerings to the Deity of which I may get a son." This idea that anything might be gained by propitiating Heaven with offerings was his pet superstition, and as the Mahommedan Soonee creed was the one which upheld it most strongly, he felt drawn towards it by sympathy. So far did he carry this preference, that while himself a nominal Hindoo, he persecuted the rival Mussulman sects of Wahabees and Sheeas.

Like many other able princes, both of East and West, he was strongly superstitious on certain points, while sceptical on most others. Like the King of Prussia, he believed himself the especial favourite of Heaven. "Assassinate me"? he would say; "if I was to drink poison, God would render it harmless." Nevertheless, he was suspicious, and believed in magic and omens implicitly. His weak point was his conceit. No flattery was too gross for him. He believed that he could rule better, prescribe medicine better, drill troops better, fence better, draw better, compose poetry better, criticise literature better, fight cocks better, tame elephants better; in fact, do everything better than any man in the universe, though he was slightly educated and had no extensive reading. It is said that on one occasion, when a shoemaker presented him a fine pair of shoes, that he said—"They were very good, but nothing like he could make if he tried." Physically, he was indeed pre-eminent in some respects. He was a superb rider, a beautiful shot, a good wrestler, after the Indian fashion. He was also a very good judge of Indian singing and dancing, and of all native arts, sciences, and manufactures. . . .

To the British Government he was uniformly loyal—not from love, but from a conviction that its star was in the ascendant, and that under its skirts was safety. At the same time he was terribly resentful of any interference by it in the affairs of his State. With that Government his well-known fidelity covered a multitude of sins, and it preferred to pass by many of his most reprehensible actions to undermining his attachment by encountering his passionate obstinacy.—Guzerat Mitra.

Miscellaneous.

SCARCITY IN PERSIA.—It is reported that there is at present great scarcity of various articles of provision in Persia, particularly at Yazd and Kheir, where the Persian Parsees are residing, and that consequently a large number of Parsees have left those places.

LEGAL.—Mr. John Duncan Inverarity (son of Mr. Inverarity, formerly a member of the Legislative Council) has been admitted as an Advocate in the Bombay High Court, by the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Bayley.

STEAM TO MAURITIUS.—The British India Steam Navigation Company is about to commence running a regular monthly line of steamers between Mauritius, Galle, and Bombay. Captain Beyts left on the 1st Dec. to take up the appointment of agent at Mauritius.

POONAH.—The investigation with regard to excessive expenditure in the Public Works Department is still going on at Poonah. On December 5 five persons were arrested at the Kurruckwasla water-works by the police, under warrants from Mr. Pritchard, amongst them being two Brahmin overseers and three contractors.

THE LATE RAJAH OF KOLAPORE.—A public meeting has been held at the Framjee Cowasjee Institute, Bombay, "to give expression to the grief felt by all classes of the people at the sudden and untimely death of the amiable and accomplished Rajah of Kolapore at Florence, on his way home, and to consider the best means of perpetuating his Highness's memory in the city of Bombay."

BOMBAY SCOTTISH EDUCATION SOCIETY.—Several months ago the committee of the Bombay Scottish Education Society, in consideration of the present small staff of teachers, resolved to send home for additional aid, and we are now gratified to learn that a second master and mistress have been selected in Scotland. The teachers appointed are Mr. and Mrs. Lumsden, and they are expected to arrive in Bombay about the end of January. Mr. Lumsden was for some time classical and mathematical assistant to the rector of Montrose Academy, and was afterwards appointed master of the Free Church School at Liberton, near Edinburgh. For the past year or so, since the second school was opened, which has proved so great a success, at Byculla, the strain upon the energies of the present staff must have been great; and we are glad to know that in the course of a few weeks each of the schools will have to itself a first-class master and mistress, besides the necessary assistants.—Bombay Gazette.

CLERICAL.—The Bishop of Calcutta left Bombay for Calcutta on December 6.

THE BOMBAY UNIVERSITY.—Of the thirteen candidates who presented themselves for the LL.B. examination in connection with the Bombay University, all have passed successfully:—I. Division.—Mahadew Chimnajee Aptay, Jamsetjee Ardaseer Dalal and Sudashew Wishwanath Dhurundhur. II. Division.—Gujanund Krishna Bhatwadeykur, Chundoolal Mathooradas Dowlutjada, Janardhun Succaram Gadgil, Ardaseer Framjee Ghaswalla, Gunputrao Mankur, Manockjee Nusserwanjee Nanavuttee, Nagurdass Narotumdas Nanavutte, Goculdas Kahandas Paruck, Rustomjee Merwanjee Patel, and Maneksha Jehangirsha Talleyarkha. All the above candidates belong to the Government law class. Of the four candidates who presented themselves for the M.A. examination, two have passed. The names of the successful candidates are Yeshwunt Wassoodew Athlay and Hormusjee Jehanghier Bhabha. The candidates belonged to the Elphinstone College.—Bombay Gazette, Dec. 10.

VERNACULAR SERMON BY THE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA.—The Bishop of Calcutta preached on Sunday forenoon in St. John's Church, Colaba, and in the afternoon to a congregation of about 150 native Christians in Christ Church, Byculla, the Rev. Mr. Reynell's. His Lordship, who addressed them in Hindustani, took for his text John chap. xvii. verse 6—"Main ne tere nám ko unadmión par jinhen tu ne dunyá men se mujhe diyá, zahir kiya hai: we tere the, aur túne unhen mujhe diya hai, aur unhon ne tere kalam par amal kiya hai." His Lordship impressed upon them the duty of manifesting to the world by a consistent walk and conduct that holy name and profession which they had taken upon them, and their duty to keep the word of Christ as having been given to Him out of the world. The discourse, which occupied more than half an hour, was listened to with marked attention, and at the close an offertory was taken on behalf of the Mission. The Revs. G. Ledgard and A. Bapoojee, the pastors of the congregation, were present. His Lordship preached in the evening in the Cathedral.

THE CLIMBING TIGRESS.—We append a letter anent the account we recently published of a tigress being shot down twice from the branches of a tall tree:—To the Editor of the South of India Observer.—Sir,—As I learn that various sportsmen wish the tiger story, quoted in your paper on the 10th November, authenticated, I have the pleasure to inform all it may concern that I shot the tigress in the way described. I may also say that I furnished the particulars of the account. The tigress went up a tree twice, once badly wounded. On the second occasion I saw it go up. My companion, who examined the tree with me afterwards, was of opinion that the height of the branch from which the tigress fell was forty feet, and not thirty, as I wrote, which makes the matter even more wonderful. The tree was perpendicular, about a foot in diameter, and with no branches for about twenty-five feet. Two active boys tried to climb it, and failed. I am not surprised at sportsmen wishing the story authenticated, as the tigress' performances were most marvellous. I have known tigers go up trees before, but never such a tree as the one described. I am now more than ever convinced that a tiger is nothing more nor less than a huge cat, and can, no doubt, do anything a cat can do. The tree in question will doubtless retain the double set of claw marks for years to come, so any curious or dubious gentleman may go and look at it—near Peermund. In fact, if very curious, he might endeavour to imitate the tiger's performances as to climbing and falling without the bore of being fired at. The length of the tigress was about nine feet six inches. Three or four days afterwards we shot another one, larger if anything.—Yours faithfully, H. L. CHRISTIE, Lieut.-Colonel. Club, Ooty, 1st December, 1870.—Bombay Gazette.

IMPORTS.—BOMBAY, Dec. 10.—The market generally has throughout been dull, and a decline in Grey Goods has again to be reported. The stocks in the hands of first holders and in the bazaar are believed to be considerable, and the inquiry for the interior has again been limited. Bleached Goods were more active in the early part of the fortnight, but have latterly been again dull, with little or no change in prices. Dyed and Printed Goods have continued dull, with a decline of 1 anna per piece. The sales which have taken place are as follows, viz.:—About 1,900 pieces Orange Cambrics, at Rs. 2-11 to Rs. 2-14; about 500 pieces Black and White Prints, at Rs. 2-13; about 500 pieces Blue Orange and White Prints, at Rs. 4-6; a similar quantity of Blue and Green Prints, at Rs. 4-11; about 700 pieces Black Prints, at Rs. 2-14; and about 1,800 pieces Orange Prints, at Rs. 3-7 to Rs. 3-11. Turkey Red Goods: The undermentioned sales have transpired during the fortnight, viz.:—About 6,000 pieces 7-8th Cambrics, at Rs. 3-15 to Rs. 5-6; about 7,000 pieces Mulls, at Rs. 3-5 to Rs. 3-13; and about 1,400 pieces Chintz, at Rs. 5-13 to Rs. 6-1. Grey Yarns: In the early part of the fortnight the market was more active, with an advance of ¼ anna per lb., but it has again been dull during the week just closing, and a decline of ¼ to ⅜ anna from the highest point has taken place. Metals: This market was also more active in the early part of the fortnight, with an advance of 6 to 12 annas per cwt., but it has latterly been again dull, and prices have declined 4 to 8 annas from the highest point. We have to report the following sales, viz.:—About 200 cwt. Copper Sheathers, at Rs. 41¼; about 300 cwt. Yellow Metal Bronzers, at Rs. 35-12; a similar quantity of Spelter Foreign, at Rs. 11-8; about 200 cwt. Spelter English, at Rs. 9-6; about 275 candies Iron Swedish Bar, at Rs. 41-4; and about 2,200 tubs Steel, at Rs. 7-12.

EXPORTS.—BOMBAY, Dec. 10.—Cotton: According to the telegrams received during the fortnight the price of Fair Dholleras in Liverpool continued pretty steady at 6¾d. down to 30th November, after which dull and depressed markets set in, the quotation gradually declining to 6 9-16d. The business done here has again been very small, but the advance, upon our quotations of 26th November, of Rs. 3 to Rs. 5 per candy, which ruled in the first week of the fortnight, has generally been maintained. The total purchases in Bombay for export in the whole fortnight amount to about 3,200 candies, among which were 1,200 candies of Dholleras and Bhownuggur at prices ranging according to quality, between Rs. 184 and Rs. 207; 525 candies of Dharwar, sawginned, at Rs. 208 to Rs. 210; 250 candies of Veravul, at Rs. 175 to Rs. 183; 235 candies of Oomrawuttee, at Rs. 185 to 186; 175 candies of Cutch and Joria, at Rs. 178 to Rs. 187; 175 candies of Ahmedabad, at Rs. 179 to Rs. 195; and 150 candies of Surat, at Rs. 205. The market closes quiet. New Crop: A few bales only have yet come from the interior. New Oomrawuttee and New Khamgaum, full-pressed, laid down in Bombay, are, however, offering at Rs. 210 per candy, less 5½ per cent. discount, and Hinguughat at Rs. 220.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

DIVISIONAL COMMANDS.

In modification of G.G.O. No. 1,030 of 1870, and in order to prevent any misapprehension, it is hereby notified that clause 4, paragraph 5 of that order, which lays down the circumstances under which a divisional command is considered vacant, is not intended to refer to leave taken by a general officer in India under the ordinary rules of the service, but only to the leave out of India or in India preparatory to such leave when in excess of the periods laid down in G.G.O. No. 952 of 1861.

APPLICATION OF THE MILITARY FURLOUGH RULES OF 1796.

Military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, dated India-office, London, Oct. 26, 1870:—

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor general of India in Council.

My Lord,—I have considered your letter dated June 10, 1870, forwarding an application from Lieut. col. ——, Bengal infantry, which raises the question whether an officer who, up to his election of the furlough rules of 1868, had abided by those of 1796, can claim the benefit of clause 23 of the rules of 1868, which allows a certain proportion of leave to account as service for pension.

The clause in question certainly speaks of retaining a privilege heretofore granted, and officers under the rules of 1796 had not the privilege referred to, but it was intended to lay down a general principle applicable to all officers accepting the new rules, as is shown by the subsidiary rule, section 34, page 3. Lieut. col. ——, therefore (who has, I observe, elected the 1868 rules), will, on completing an "aggregate service" of twenty years, computed according to the method which has been adopted for counting service partly under one set of rules and partly under another, be entitled to count two years of leave taken since July, 1868, as service for pension. ARGYLL.

EDUCATIONAL.—Mr. G. J. S. Hodgkinson is appointed to be secretary to the local committee of public instruction at Tirhoot, v. Rev. J. Greenfield, resigned. Mr. G. E. Porter is appointed to be secretary to the local committee of public instruction at Rungpore. Mr. J. Crawfurd is appointed to be a member of the local committee of public instruction at Rungpore.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The following officer has passed examination:—J. S. Carey, assistant engineer, 2nd grade, attached to Burrakur division, passed in colloquial Hindustani on Nov. 24. The subjoined have passed according to the departmental standard:—Mr. G. T. Macfarlane, assistant engineer, 1st grade, Mecan Meer division; Mr. H. L. Monk, assistant engineer, 2nd grade, Punjab Northern (State) Railway.

CIVIL FURLOUGHS.—The following civil servants have obtained furlough to Europe and leave of absence, on medical certificate (in November), under the Rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified:—Mr. C. Hordern, officiating deputy commissioner in Hyderabad assigned districts, has furlough for one year; Mr. Hordern availed himself of preparatory leave on Sept. 3. Col. J. Liptrop, infantry, for two years. Lieut. col. H. P. Babbage, Bengal staff corps, 3rd class deputy commissioner, Goojranwalla district, Punjab, for one year and twenty-six days, embarking at Bombay. ELPHINSTONE LAND AND PRESS COMPANY.—A meeting of shareholders of the Elphinstone Land and Press Company was held on the afternoon of Dec. 6, for the purpose, it was intended, of receiving the final report of the liquidators and passing a resolution as to the disposal of the books, accounts and documents of the company. Mr. Hamilton Maxwell presided, and there were only a very few shareholders present. The chairman explained that the deeds had not yet been returned, and so the only thing to be done was to adjourn the meeting. The meeting accordingly adjourned until the 10th January.—Bombay Gazette.

MAILS BY FRENCH PACKETS.—Information has been received from the French Post-Office that the Mails passing through France are at present liable to considerable delay, and that it is necessary, therefore, to despatch from London some days in advance of the usual time all correspondence intended for conveyance by French Packet from Marseilles, Bordeaux, or St. Nazaire. Under these circumstances, the public are recommended to post, at least a week in advance of the usual time, all letters for Mauritius, China, Brazil, Mexico, Cuba, &c., intended for conveyance by the French Packets. The Mail for Mauritius will, this month, be made up in London on the evening of Saturday, the 14th January, instead of on the 18th, so as to ensure, as far as possible, its arrival at Marseilles in time for the Packet. During the present uncertain state of the route through France, no correspondence, excepting that for Mauritius, will be forwarded by French Packet, unless specially addressed to be so sent.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY.—The report of the East Indian Railway Company for the half-year ending 30th June last has been issued. The gross earnings of the main-line in that period have been £1,438,055. 19s. 2d., against £1,356,194. 17s. 11d. in the corresponding half-year; and the net earnings have been £865,873. 11s. 4d., as compared with £832,481. 0s. 1d. After providing for the guaranteed interest, a surplus is left of £146,903 for division between the Company and the Government. Pending an adjustment of certain differences between the Secretary of State and the Company relative to the actual amount of surplus profits, the directors have received authority to draw £65,047, which will enable them to recommend a dividend of 5s. 9d. per cent., in addition to the usual guaranteed interest. The traffic in the first nineteen weeks of the present half-year shows, it is stated, an increase of £63,387 over the receipts of the same number of weeks in the corresponding half-year. With respect to the Jubbulpore line, it is stated that the gross earnings of the half-year have been £69,464. 5s. 8d., against £54,810. 7s. 6d. in the corresponding half-year. In addition to the agreement previously concluded with the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company for through traffic between Calcutta and Bombay, through booking arrangements have now been made with the Scinde and Punjab Company between Calcutta and Mooltan, and also with the Oude and Rohilkund Railway Company.

Home.

SCINDE, PUNJAB, AND DELHI RAILWAY.—We are informed that the Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Railway Company have already paid £870,000 to the credit of the Secretary of State for India on account of deposit and payments in anticipation of calls in respect of the £2,000,000 additional capital issued a few days since.

MANSION FOR AN INDIAN PRINCE.—A new mansion erected for his Highness the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh, at Elveden, near Thetford, Norfolk, is nearly completed. His Highness has already taken up his residence in the southern portion of it. It is in the Indian style of architecture, and the internal decorations are very elaborate and costly. The entrance, also Oriental in its character, is magnificent.

ROYAL NAVAL SCHOOL, NEW CROSS.—We draw attention to the recommendations of this well-known school, ostensibly for the naval service, but also affording high-class education, qualifying its pupils for any pursuit in life. The Lords of the Admiralty annually grant nominations for the navy. The Principal is the Rev. C. B. Slater, M.A. The advantages of the school have lately been thrown open to the sons of officers in the army and civil servants of the Crown.

BRITISH INDIAN EXTENSION TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The following reports the completion of the British Indian Extension Telegraph Company's line:—"I have the pleasure to inform you that a telegram has just arrived reporting the successful laying of the cable of this company between Singapore and Madras. This cable completes the telegraphic submarine chain from England as far as Batavia.—Yours truly, T. G. Glover, Colonel R.E., Managing Director. British Indian Extension Telegraph Company (Limited), 66, Old Broad-street, London, E.C., Dec. 30."

BANKRUPTCY.—An approximate statement of the affairs of Messrs. Pike Pittar and Co. was this day laid before a meeting of their creditors by Messrs. Harding, Whinney, Gibbons, and Co. The liquidation, it was stated, would prove favourable, but there was a probability of its being affected by the position of Messrs. Charles Nephew and Co., the correspondents in Calcutta. It was unanimously agreed that the meeting should be adjourned for further information as to that estate, and that Mr. C. J. Leaf and Mr. C. A. Stewart should act as inspectors in the meantime.

THE ROYAL ARTILLERY.—It has been decided that the mounted batteries of the Royal Artillery are to consist of 16 batteries of horse artillery and 40 field batteries, being an increase of six of the former and 20 of the latter. The increase in the field batteries will be carried out by the conversion of 20 garrison batteries, and the latter, we presume, will be filled up again by recruiting. The sufficiency of the augmented force may be a fair subject for discussion, but there can be no difference of opinion as to the importance of having each battery fully horsed. It is all very well in filing past after a review to take the horses from the cannon which have gone by the saluting point and hurry them into the rear to do duty over again, but this stage manœuvre might be found inconvenient in case of actual warfare.—Broad Arrow.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS FROM INDIA.—The Serapis, Indian relief troop steamship, Captain Grant, arrived at Portsmouth on Dec. 27, with troops and other military and naval passengers on board, from India, Aden, and Malta. The Serapis experienced fine weather as far as Gibraltar after leaving Alexandria on her homeward voyage. Since leaving Gibraltar she had to contend with head winds, and in crossing the Bay of Biscay met with a confused and heavy sea. The ship is said to have been greatly improved of late upon her old rolling propensities. The 1st Battalion of the 7th, on disembarking from the Serapis, marched into quarters in the Anglesea Barracks, Portsea. The order for the Borderers to proceed to Dover has been cancelled, and the regiment has gone to Portsdown-hill, where it will take possession of the line of forts along the hill's crest.

SUEZ CANAL.—Sir Daniel A. Lange sends the following relative to the Suez Canal:—"I enclose a telegram just received from Ismailia, with reference to the passage of ships. The receipts of the Suez Canal continue to average £20,000 per month. M. de Lesseps and the personnel of the Canal Company have, unfortunately, allowed themselves to be shut up in Paris. I have letters from him by balloon post till December 19. The letters sent viâ Marseilles, per pigeon post, had not reached him, as they are not alluded to.—I am, &c., yours very truly, DANIEL A. Spirit of the Home Journals.

LOCALISATION OF INDIAN FINANCE.

The Saturday Review observes that the finances of India, with exceptions so insignificant as not to require notice, have been controlled exclusively by the Supreme Government. The whole of a revenue which now ranks among the very largest in the world is carried to the credit of the Central Government of India, and disbursed to the provincial authorities in such proportions as it may determine, and under such rules as it may prescribe. The branch of the Indian Civil Service which has the finances for its special department is attached, not to the Government of the province in which its members may be on duty, but to the Government of the Governor-General, wherever he may be. When the period of the annual Budget approaches, each Provincial Government sends up a statement of its prospective requirements for the coming year, and the Central Government allots to each a share of the expected revenue, according to the state of its own resources and the exigency of the provincial demand. And in that great department of Indian expenditure which is concerned with the construction of Public Works, the detailed plan of the road, bridge, or building to be constructed at State expense must be so far submitted to the Central Government as to admit of its being scrutinised and criticised from the financial point of view. Such a system bears on its face the stamp of its origin. It was, of course, devised to secure economy. Yet the reproach which of late years has been most frequently brought against it is that it is wasteful. The Provincial Government collects the revenue, but it does not spend what it collects. There is no necessary or tangible relation between the money which it pays to the credit of the Supreme Government and the money which it obtains for expenditure on its own objects. Thus it is alleged that the motives to economy are doubly diminished, and the springs of thrift doubly weakened. The Provincial Government derives no advantage, beyond the satisfaction of its sense of public duty, in collecting the largest possible revenue; while, on the other hand, it gains a palpable advantage in popularity and prestige by squeezing out of the Central Government, by every sort of importunity, the means of providing liberal administration and splendid public works. The telegraphic intelligence of the change intended to be made purports to be founded on some unofficial communication to the Correspondent of the Times. It describes the new scheme as "giving to the local (i.e. the provincial) Governments full control over education, gaols, civil buildings, roads, and police," and as assigning permanently for these purposes from Imperial (i.e. central) revenues a total sum, which the telegraph has possibly misreported, but which is stated to amount to nearly five millions sterling. This sum is further mentioned as less by about £400,000 than the last annual assignment for the same objects. The meaning of the proceeding is that the Supreme Government of India strikes off certain entries from both sides of its ledger. It will no longer require the Provincial Governments to account to it for a certain portion of the revenues collected by them. On the other hand, it proposes to receive no demands from these Governments in future for funds to be expended on public education, on the construction of roads or gaols, and on the maintenance of police. They will pay for these objects as best they can out of the permanent allotment, but in case they cannot make this sufficient they are to be allowed to supplement it through the exercise of new powers of taxation. This fiscal reform will probably be thought by most persons in this country to be recommended by reasons too obvious for it to require express justification. The motives to economy appear to be at once restored. The Provincial Governments acquire an interest in collecting the largest amount of revenue, since the allotment made to them is probably so adjusted (though this is not clearly stated in the telegram) as to depend for its exact figures in some way on the aggregate of their total collections. At all events, they have the strongest interest in husbanding the permanent assignment and in its thrifty disbursement. Either it must be made to suffice, or it must be eked out by new taxes, very difficult to discover in India, very much disliked by the rulers as well as by the people, and in this case involving the provincial authorities in the unpopularity which has hitherto been a monopoly of the Central Government.

Mails to India, &c.

The Mails to all parts of India VIA SOUTHAMPTON, are now made up at the General Post Office, London, every Saturday at 8 A.M., and those VIA BRENNER and BRINDISI every Friday, at 6 P.M.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

CHALLENGE to the WORLD.—The Bristol Daily Times and Mirror, August 5th, has the following:—"Messrs. J. C. Swan and Co., of 16, Queen-square, in this city, have invented a pocket microscope, which is a marvel in all that such an instrument should be. It has great power, remarkable definition, and does not require focussing. The cheapness of the article will make it exceedingly popular when its merits are more widely known. It is called the 'Bristol Microscope,' and is a great credit to the inventor, as much for its extreme simplicity as its power."—The Western Daily Press says:—"The Bristol Microscope has a magnifying power of 20,000 times," &c., &c.—The Western Daily Telegraph says:—"The Bristol Microscope is the most compact and useful scientific instrument we have ever seen; it possesses extraordinary power, and is very easily managed," &c. The price of the Bristol Microscope is only 2s., or, free by post, with printed directions, for twenty-eight stamps.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is followed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

Are sureties of health to all nations, of whatever clime. They have given hope, relief, and comfort to millions. In irritation, debility, generated by excesses of any kind, or in general prostration of the system, their effect is eminently soothing, renovating, and restorative. They rapidly drive from the system the morbid cause of ailment, and renew in the frame its pristine animation, health, and vigour. They greatly increase the appetite, give tone to the stomach, assist the digestion, and impart elasticity to the spirits; their essence enters the circulation, and, carried through its courses, exerts its cleansing power on every organ. In the lungs they effect most striking changes, converting the impure venous into pure arterial blood, by which the whole frame is recruited.

REVIEWS OF THE 18-CARAT GOLD JEWELLERY AND WATCHES.

"The use of machinery in the manufacture of gold ornaments is of great advantage to the public."—Times, Oct. 19, 1867.

"By the introduction of machinery, 50 per cent. is saved in the manufacture of gold jewelery."—Standard, Sept., 1867.

"Articles of 18-carat gold are manufactured by machinery, and the result is a saving of 50 per cent."—Fun, Dec. 29, 1866.

"Mr. Streeter marks upon his goods the quality of gold supplied by him, which is a true guarantee."—Times, Sept. 18, 1867.

"Mr. Streeter makes his 'parts of a watch' in the same manner, saving an immensity of cost in labour, whilst at the same time he produces an accuracy of fit and proportion which can only be secured by machinery."—Daily News, Dec. 10, 1868.

"Mr. Streeter has already succeeded in producing by it well-made English Lever Watches which he can sell at a price as low as that at which an ordinary Geneva Watch can be obtained, with the greater advantage of durability."—Standard, Dec. 11, 1868.

"Mr. Streeter, of 37, Conduit-street, Bond-street, has followed the example of the Americans in producing his Watches by machinery, whereby a saving of one-third of the cost is effected."—Times, Dec. 18, 1868.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, December 17; Agra, December 15; Calcutta, December 14; and Madras, December 13.

THE Indian authorities are following up their raid against the Public Works Department by prosecutions of defaulting contractors and overseers. At Poonah it is an inspector, Mr. Sharman, who is to be tried for alleged misappropriation of money with reference to the Government House at Ganesh Kind. At Allahabad a contractor, Narain Dass by name, is prosecuted for his share in the downfall of the Gun Carriage Factory at that station. The latter has been admitted to bail for a week, and the Bombay High Court is discussing the former's claim to a like indulgence.

AT the meeting of the Calcutta Legislative Council on the 9th December, Mr. F. Stephen introduced a Bill to amend and abridge the Code of Criminal Procedure. In the course of his speech he expressed some natural doubts as to the successful working of the jury system in India. Sir R. Temple spoke on behalf of his Bill regarding the Government Paper Currency. In answer to Mr. Bullen's criticisms, he held out a prospect of introducing five-rupee notes, and declared that the means of coining five and ten-rupee gold pieces were all completed at the Mint.

LADY MAYO reached Bombay on the 13th December, accompanied by the Earl of Wicklow. After a rest of two or three days in Government House her ladyship was to start again for Calcutta. Sir S. Fitzgerald had already been absent some days on his tour through Kutch and Kattywar. From the 5th to the 10th his Excellency saw all the sights and shared in the amusements of Kutch, under the guidance of its hospitable Rao. His subsequent visit to Nowanuggar gave the Jam of that place a well-used opportunity of playing the magnificent host. On the 13th a hundred and twenty-five Chiefs followed him in state on his entrance into Rajkote, the capital of Kattywar. What with their elephants and bodyguards and the march of an English field battery, they formed a procession which local pride considered unsurpassable.

THERE is just a chance that poor Mulhar Rao may not after all succeed his brother as Gaikwar of Baroda. Formal notice of the pregnancy of Khandi Rao's widow has been given to the Bombay Government. It is just possible that a lady who had for years been childless may have suddenly taken a more prolific turn; but the coincidence of the alleged fact with the claims of a detested heir to her husband's throne must not be overlooked. The late Gaikwar by the way appears to have been a shocking spendthrift, who has died several millions in debt.

LORD NAPIER seems to have gone thoroughly into the work of inspecting the stations and troops upon his way down country. His ride from Simla to Mussoorie across the hills led him to the new station of Chakrata, where room can be found for two or three regiments at a height of 8,400 feet above the sea. One regiment already occupies this confessedly "charming" spot, whose selection was mainly owing to Lord Mayo. Another new hill-station, Raneekhet, lies on the road from Nynee Tal to Almorah, at a height of 6,000 feet above the sea, with one of the finest views of the Snowy Range in the background. In this place, which Lord Napier duly visited, there is said to be room for two regiments, if not more; most likely more, since there was for a time some talk of its supplanting Simlah as the summer seat of the Indian Government. It need hardly be added that wherever he went, the Commander-in-Chief turned a microscopic eye on all that concerned the well-being, physical and mental, of his troops.

WE observe that two-hundred and forty-one members of the Bengal Civil Service have petitioned the Viceroy to restore the rates of acting allowances to the proportion assigned by the Furlough Rules of 1868, and to fix the lowest furlough allowance at £500 a-year. If this latter concession cannot be granted, the petitioners pray that at least all those who entered the service before 1868 may enjoy the minimum of £500 fixed by the old rules. They further ask for what they consider their lawful share in the administration of the new Regulation Provinces, and for a larger share of political appointments than has of late years fallen to their lot. Another grievance springs from the new rules about privilege leave before furlough, which rules ought in their opinion to be modified. Some of these requests sound reasonable enough. In view for instance of the increased allowances granted to military officers on furlough and of the diminishing value of money both here and in India, it does seem hard that the old rate of allowance for civil servants should have been reduced in any item.

THE fortunes of Yakoob Khan are at their lowest ebb. To-day's telegram from Calcutta describe him as virtually throwing himself at his father's feet, if only he may be allowed to return in peace to Cabul. Shere Ali has agreed to pardon him on conditions whose fulfilment is not yet reported; but everything looked well for a final reconciliation.

WE learn by telegram that Mr. R. Davies, Chief Commissioner of Oudh, succeeds Sir H. Durand in the Government of the Punjab. Mr. Davies has for some time made an efficient Chief Commissioner, and his name has continually been brought forward in the local papers as that of a likely candidate for a lieutenant-governorship. His successor in Oudh is General Barrow.

No particulars have yet come to hand touching Sir Henry Durand's untimely death. It is supposed however that as the elephant he was riding passed under an archway, the howdah being too high was swept aside, and Sir Henry fell with fatal force to the ground. According to the telegrams he lingered through the night of the 31st ult. till the evening of the 1st January, rallying a little in the morning, but only for a short time. Sir Henry had for some weeks been travelling through his province, inspecting the frontier posts one by one, with the intention of spending New Year's Day at Peshawar. He was buried on the 4th with all honours at Dehra Ismael Khan, about seven months after he had been publicly greeted by Lord Mayo as Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab.

SIR HENRY DURAND passed through Addiscombe into the Bengal Engineers in 1828. His first step of rank was not gained till 1835. Four years later Lieutenant Durand threw up a good civil appointment to join the Army of the Indus and share the triumphs of Lord Keane's Afghan campaign. He made one of the little party who blew in with powderbags the gate of Ghuznee. Ill health drove him to England before the subsequent disasters of 1841. Returning to India in the following year, he became private secretary to the new Governor-General, Lord Ellenborough. Thenceforth, except in the Gwalior Campaign, the Second Sikh War, and the Mutiny, his career was altogether civil. In Tenasserim, Gwalior, Bhopal, Captain Durand proved himself always an able and upright officer. At the time of the Mutiny, Lieut.-Colonel Durand was acting as political agent at Indore. After presenting a bold front to the mutineers from Mhow, Durand and his small party had to make the best of their way towards Bombay. It was not long before he returned in command of the relieving column that scattered the rebels at Mundisore and captured the stronghold of Dhar. For his efforts in defence of Holkar's dominions he was made a C.B. in 1858. Besides his Cabul Medal he had already won like decorations for Maharajpore, Chilianwalla and Goojerat. To these were now added the Indian Medal for the Mutiny. When Sir Robert Hamilton went back to Indore, Colonel Durand was taken under Lord Canning's care. During his stay in England, whither he had been sent by the Viceroy to confer with the Home authorities about the reconstruction of the Indian Army, he was invited by Lord Stanley to enter the Council of India. Two years afterwards, in 1861, Colonel Durand generously resigned his seat in order that it might be filled by Sir James Outram. He returned to India however as Lord Canning's Foreign Secretary, a post never before held by a soldier. From thence in 1865 he rose to a seat in the Viceregal Council, which he retained until his last promotion to the government of the Punjab. A more manly-minded, honest, independent councillor Lord Lawrence did not possess, and the knighthood of the Star of India bestowed on him in 1867 did no more than justice to his great deserts. The same year saw him promoted to Major-General. His appointment in May last to succeed the widely-popular Sir D. Macleod in a post always reserved for the best men, was hailed throughout the country with ready approval. It was felt that none of the rival candidates came up to Sir Henry in special fitness for the task of governing a great frontier province with the firm hand of a soldier who was also a statesman; and to him had been entrusted the important process of welding the Punjab and Sindh into one government. With his premature death the old Indian Services have lost one more of their finest ornaments, and British India one of her ablest and most deserving statesmen.

THE financial reform announced in the Gazette of India carries us a long step forward in the direction indicated years ago by Mr. Bright. Henceforth the Local Governments will be empowered to spend in any way they please the money assigned them from the Imperial Exchequer for certain purposes hitherto defined and supervised by the Central Government. In respect of jails, schools, police, roads, civil buildings, and such like works, they are to be their own masters; making up if they please by local rates for any outlay in excess of the sums placed by the Central Government at their disposal. That this is anyhow a great improvement on the previous system, we have no doubt whatever. Nothing could well be worse than the principle of referring to one central department all questions of outlay for local purposes. Hitherto no local governor could hire a fresh chuprassie or peon for a few rupees a month, or lay out a few hundred rupees on a new building without the sanction of the Viceroy in Council. On works already sanctioned he might on the other hand spend practically as much as he pleased without formal reference to Calcutta. The new system will relieve the Central Government of all responsibility for matters of purely local expenditure, by leaving the local authorities to make the best use they can of the funds reserved to them for local requirements. The power that raises the money will henceforth be responsible for its employment. For what are strictly Imperial purposes, such as the army and the post-office, the Imperial Government will of course continue to provide. Local interests will no longer be hampered by any other conditions than the productive powers of the local treasuries, and a direct motive for economy will thus be applied to the provincial governors, whose taste for spending will necessarily be checked by the difficulties in the way of new taxation. For the fear expressed in some quarters, lest the new powers entrusted to the Local Governments should tend to promote extravagance rather than economy, we can see no sufficient grounds. On the contrary, they will more than ever be bound to cut their coat according to their cloth, for the possible extent of that cloth must always be better appreciated by masters living on the spot than by those who form their estimates hundreds of miles away. If any of them should happen to run into debt, they will do so at their own risk, with full knowledge of the difficulty of raising new taxes or borrowing loans to meet their shortcomings. The Imperial credit cannot be endangered by a due extension of local responsibilities, and there is after all no good reason why a local government should not go into the loan market on its own account, if the securities it can offer are such as capitalists would readily accept.

AN officer of the old Indian Artillery, writing to the Times, complains that, in spite of Colonel Sykes's successful motion on the Bonus Question, six months have passed without any sign of the promised result. We fear that the officer in question and his fellow-sufferers are too sanguine. They had better plead their cause again next Session.

IT is some months since we heard of a Thompson's road-steamer being sent out to India for trial over all sorts of ground. The great excellence of this particular kind of traction engine lies in the india-rubber tires fitted to the wheels, and protected with steel plates an inch and a-half apart from each other. The wheels can thus get a firm grasp of the ground, however soft, without sticking fast in ruts of their own making. For military purposes the invention, if it really answers, will be invaluable. It will solve the ever-recurring problem of dragging heavy field-pieces—guns of position, as we believe they are called—over any sort of country. In Indian warfare this kind of work has hitherto been done with the aid of elephants, costly animals, that need a large amount of provender. Of their great hauling power there is no question. One or two of them used to make nothing of a 24-pounder of the old pattern, and the fire of our 18 and 24-pounders at Goojrat told terribly on the Sikh ranks. Steam however, under proper conditions, may prove a cheaper agent than the elephant, even for India, while in Europe it has all the field to itself. The experiments made in this country with Thompson's road-steamer have already encouraged the War Office to institute further trials on its own account over Shooter's-hill. At Edinburgh in June last one of these engines drew two guns of fifty cwt. each in one hour over the six miles from Edinburgh to Dalkeith, and wheeled on a circle only eight yards in diameter. A few week's ago, at Lincoln, the road-steamer drew two omnibus-loads of passengers up and down a hill for several miles, turning short round, and stopping at a moment's notice on its way downhill. It drew a load of ten tons with perfect case over a hilly turnpike-road, and on ground that was both soft and slippery it sped along at a pace never slower than seven minutes to the mile. Its powers of easy turning were abundantly proved. At Woolwich Arsenal a paid instructor is daily employed in teaching soldiers how to handle the one machine which the War Office has already purchased for experimental purposes. In strength, combined with simplicity of construction and ease of handling, this road steamer is said to surpass all existing rivals.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, January 10, 1871.

RETROSPECT OF 1870.

IN times of unusual eventfulness, when new incidents are continually replacing the memory of the old, it needs no little effort of the mind to win back the recent past to its proper place in the sequence of events. It seems already an age since the Irish Land Bill became law, and Prince Alfred's visit to India appears like a remote tradition. Yet the former happened but a few months ago, and the latter occupied the first months of last year. Landing at Calcutta on the 22nd December, 1869, his Royal Highness went through a round of sight-seeing and public ceremonial, which ended at Madras on March 27, the day of his final departure for Ceylon. His welcome everywhere was worthy of the occasion. The great Calcutta Durbar, at which he was invested with the Star of India, brought together a most picturesque and splendid array of Native princes and English officials. He was royally feasted by the native gentry of Calcutta. The Rajah of Burdwan got up for him a hunting-party on a princely scale. Pig-sticking at Burdwan was exchanged for tiger-shooting and sight-seeing at Benares. The erewhile capital of Jehangheer gave him in its turn a brilliant greeting. More sport awaited him with the Rajah of Bhurtpore. The city of the Moguls and the capital of Runjit Singh displayed their best in his honour. On the 19th February he was received with gorgeous state by the Talookdars of Lucknow, who passed him forward to the care of Jung Bahadoor and the charms of elephant-hunting in Nepal. On March 7 the Prince played his part in the public opening of the railway through Jubbulpore. From the 12th to the 19th he was enjoying at Bombay hospitalities and shows unsurpassed by its Eastern rival. Nor was Madras at all behindhand in her efforts to honour and amuse the Prince during the last five days of his Indian tour, in commemoration of which the leading natives throughout the country have since vied with each other in the splendour or the usefulness of their public offerings.

Unluckily for the hopes engendered among the natives by the Prince's visit and Lord Mayo's financial retrenchments, Sir R. Temple's Budget Statement, delivered on the 2nd April, disclosed a deficit for the past year and announced an income-tax of 3⅓ per cent. for the year then beginning. The wrath aroused by the latter statement spread from one class of taxpayers to another; the haste with which the income-tax Bill was passed by a reluctant Council added fuel to the general bitterness; and the measures subsequently taken to enforce the law evoked a storm of murmurs and remonstrances whose echoes have not yet died away. Lord Mayo shared the unpopularity of his finance minister. Meetings in protest were held in nearly all the chief towns and stations of India; petition after petition was sent up by the Chambers of Commerce, and other bodies representing European or native interests in the three Presidencies; and the papers teemed with arguments, appeals, predictions; with angry demands for Sir R. Temple's recal, and earnest prayers for an early remission of the tax; with instances often but too well grounded of the hardship or the extortion involved in the collecting of it. But the Indian Government declined to remove or lighten the obnoxious impost, even after it was ascertained that the expected deficit had become an actual surplus. Their refusal provoked fresh outbursts of popular feeling, and the progress of this quarrel between the rulers and the ruled may be said to have formed the distinctive feature of the year in British India. But for this quarrel the year would have flowed away in perfect peace and unbroken attention to peaceful pursuits. There was no little war on any part of the frontier; no collision between the Government and any native prince, except the Rajah of Jodhpore, whose peevish insolence at the late Ajmere Durbar was at least sufficiently punished by Lord Mayo. Even the panic at Allahabad, to which an inventive telegram gave for the moment an alarming significance, proved to be no better founded than panics usually are. It lacked even the excuse of a clear connection with any popular grievance, and its only use was to draw from Lord Napier an unqualified denial of the mutinous movement alleged in its defence.

The nearest approach to a political disturbance in the past year was caused by a quarrel in the petty outlying State of Jinjeera between its Hubshie, or chief, and his discontented Sirdars, who, in his absence at Bombay, set up his son to reign over them. The quarrel however was peacefully adjusted in the middle of the year by the Bombay Government. Equal insignificance may be claimed for the plottings of Mahommedan Wahabis. Some arrests were made in various places, and a prisoner or two were tried and convicted of conspiring against the Queen. The prolonged detention of two other Mahommedan gentlemen without warrant or trial by the Government gave Mr. Chisholm Anstey an opportunity for pleading their right to the Englishman's privilege of Habeas Corpus before the High Court of Calcutta, and the question of law there decided against him will soon be argued over again before an English Court of Appeal. On the Hazara frontier the cause of peace and order has been strengthened by the act of tardy justice which reinstated Atta Mohammed Khan in his lands and chiefship of Agrore. The Wazeeries of Bunnoo indulged in one or two small raids on our outpost parties; but no serious outrage was recorded or avenged. In the Persian Gulf there have been disturbances which have no direct bearing on the peace of India. Some of the Bahrein peacebreakers were finally lodged in an Indian prison. At Muscat the year closed with a partially successful attempt of Sayad Turki, uncle of the late Imam, to drive the energetic Azan bin Ghez from the throne his arms had but lately won.

For a moment in the autumn a dark cloud seemed to hang over British India. When Russia formally repudiated an important clause in the Treaty of 1856, opinion in England spoke out in angry and defiant tones. Cooler-headed diplomacy however took up the matter, and the danger involved in a sudden burst of popular feeling has passed away, let us hope, for a very long season. Another cloud which threatened India's financial weal appears to have blown over; the opium revenue for the past year has given a handsome excess over the estimates. Trade, recovering steadily from its former depression, has felt a temporary check from the War in Europe; the looms of Cashmere for instance having been brought to a standstill by the siege of Paris. On the whole however India has prospered commercially and industrially during the year. Even of indigo there has been a fair outturn. The cotton crop of the past year was generally good, and the reports of the growing staple at the year's end were full of promise for the next harvest. Of wheat and most other grains there was a plentiful yield. The export trade in jute flourishes in spite of the War. Even the rice trade of Burmah has borne up fairly against the enhanced duty and the competition of neighbouring markets. Large crops of tea were promised from Darjeeling, and the tea-culture of Assam, Kangra, and Kemaon keeps steadily increasing. The coffee trade on the other hand has suffered from the reduction of English duties on its favoured rival, tea.

The principle of local taxation for local needs was extended last year to Bengal Proper by an order from the India Office, sanctioning local cesses for the maintenance of roads and schools in that province. As a sop to the recalcitrant zemindars, it has been arranged that the school cesses shall be levied on all classes connected with the land. A still more important step in this direction marks the close of the past year. It has been officially announced that henceforth the Local Governments will be empowered to spend at their own discretion a certain proportion of their respective revenues on roads, schools, jails, police, civil buildings, the medical services, registration, and several other items, hitherto supervised wholly or in part by officers of the Central Government. This new arrangement, which relieves the Imperial Treasury of a serious burden by enlarging the powers and responsibilities of the Local Governments, and so furnishes the latter with the best possible incentive to a careful economy, will come into force at the beginning of the next official year. To each government will be assigned its share of a total sum of more than four-and-a-half millions. For any outlay beyond that share it must look to recoup itself by local rates.

In his parliamentary statement on Indian Finance the Secretary of State pronounced a formal condemnation of that ill-considered scheme which has saddled India with heavy expenses for the building of huge two-storied barracks, with slated roofs that draw the heat, which their thick walls carefully retain throughout the hot weather. At his command the building of these palatial sun-traps has been discontinued in Upper India, where they were found to be sometimes ten degrees hotter than the barracks they replaced, besides proving, as at Allahabad, occasional hotbeds of disease. A special enquiry ordered by Lord Mayo into the state of the barracks and other public buildings at Allahabad has since ended in the passing of a severe censure by the Viceroy in Council on nearly all the Public Works officers concerned in the shameful oversights and failures brought out by the inquiry. In the presence of disclosures proving a sad dearth of competent men in the Public Works Department, the establishment of a Civil Engineering College in this country, under the able governance of Colonel Chesney, is an opportune effort to keep pace with the growing requirements of an important service. Young men from seventeen to twenty-one years old may there in three years or less receive a thorough training for the work of a civil engineer in India, with the certainty of good pay, gradual promotion, and a fair provision for their old age.

In the two great lines of public works, railways and canals, steady progress has been made during the year. In March the opening of the Jubbulpore line closed up the last gap in the chain of railway from Bombay to Allahabad and Calcutta. The first of the new State lines, the Khangaum Railway, which connects Bombay with the Berar cotton-fields, was opened by Lord Mayo three days before. By the year's end the Great Indian and Madras Railways had drawn so near each other that Bombay and Madras will be joined by links of iron in the spring of this year; only the Kistna river then remaining unspanned. By the opening of the great Sutlej Railway Bridge in October, the longest bridge but one in the world, the last link was completed in the line of rail from Bombay through Allahabad to Lahore. The line from Mooltan to Roree on the Indus is steadily advancing. The completion of the Chord Line on the East Indian Railway has shortened by several hours the journey from Calcutta to Bombay. A good deal of ground has been broken already on the State line from Lahore to Peshawar, and the railway from Indore across the Nerbudda to Mhow has at least been marked out by the surveyors. New works of irrigation have been pushed forward in Oudh, Bengal, Madras, and North-Western India. Lord Mayo's visit to the salt mines of Pindadun Khan in April bore swift fruit in an order for the laying of a tramway from the mines to Jhelum.

A month earlier his indefatigable Lordship had formally opened the newly-discovered coal-fields at Chanda, which promise in due time to supply half the Indian railways with cheap and good fuel. The full value of the bargain he struck with the Rajah of Jodhpore for a perpetual lease of the Sambhur Salt Lake to the Indian Government, will be realised as soon as the projected railways connect Rajpootana with the rest of India. Not less creditable to his diplomacy were the concessions won from the ruler of Cashmere in the interests of British trade with Central Asia. With regard to Mr. Forsyth's mission to Yarkand not much is certain except his failure to see the Atalik Ghazi, who had been detained by a war upon his further frontiers. As a commercial and scientific enterprise it is declared to have been a success. Mr. Forsyth's party suffered much on their wild way over bare mountain passes; but they all returned home safe. Mr. Hayward was less fortunate in his yet more venturous attempt to reach the Pamir Steppes. He was foully murdered not far beyond the borders of Cashmere.

The legislation of the year deserves some notice. The Punjab Tenancy Act, as sanctioned by the Duke of Argyll, defined the rights of occupiers which had been called in question by Mr. Prinsep's settlement. The Cotton Frauds Bill of the Bombay Government was opportunely vetoed by the Government of India. The Hindoo Wills Act, framed by Mr. Stephen for the suppression of perpetuities, became law in September. A general Act for the prevention of infanticide promises to deal yet more searchingly with a practice already grown less frequent. Another useful measure was Colonel Strachey's Bill for regulating the management of canal and drainage works in Northern India. In his Penal Code Amendment Bill Mr. Stephen assimilated the law of India touching sedition to that of his own country. An attempt to substitute a uniform metric system for the present varieties of Indian weights and measures has resulted in the adoption of the reform in public offices and on railways. At home the Indian Minister carried a Bill which empowers the Viceroy to legislate at need without his Council and to defy at pleasure a majority in his Council, and opens the Civil Service of India without an examination to any native selected by the Indian Government. A different fate befel the Lord Chancellor's scheme for strengthening the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council at the cost of the Indian revenue. The claims of Indian officers to bonus compensation were supported in the House of Commons by a clear majority, but nothing has yet been done towards executing its decree. The long-pending dispute between the India Office and General Whitlocke's troops touching a certain portion of the Kirwee booty was decided by Parliament against the latter.

An unusual number of high offices changed incumbents during the year. At the head of the Indian Army Sir W. Mansfield was succeeded early in the year by Lord Napier of Magdala. In May Sir Donald Macleod retired full of years and widely regretted from the post which his worthy successor, Sir H. Durand, was destined, alas! to fill for little more than seven months. Colonel Keatinge, our able Resident in Rajpootana, took the place of Mr. Morris as Chief Commissioner in the Central Provinces. General Norman succeeded Sir H. Durand in the Calcutta Council; his own place of Military Secretary being filled by Colonel Burke. Sir Barnes Peacock, editor of the Indian Penal Code, ablest and most respected of High Court Judges, gave place to Sir Richard Couch, after many years of eminent service both in the Council and on the Bench. In the last days of the year Mr. George Campbell succeeded Sir W. Grey in the well-earned post of Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. Colonel Daly was appointed to Gwalior, and Colonel Meade to Mysore. Mr. Rivett-Carnac, the Cotton Commissioner, received the reward of past service in his preferment to a new post—the Ministry of Trade and Agriculture.

Not less was the year remarkable for the deaths of natives of rank and note. In Rajah Deo Narain Singh of Benares, the English lost a loyal and powerful friend in need. Two native Hindoo princes, the Rajah of Kapurthalla and the Rajah of Kolapore, were carried off by a strange fatality, the former dying on his way to England, the latter on his way home to Bombay. They were the first two Hindoos of high rank who had dared to cross the "dark water" in defiance of old traditional rules. The one died in the fulness of honours received for loyal service to India; the other in the first years of a very promising manhood. The death of the Gaikwar of Baroda removed a prince whose loyalty was tempered with a good deal of self-will and more of vicious self-indulgence. A word is also due to the memory of Lalla Jotee Persad, the great contractor, who fed Lord Gough's armies during several campaigns, often for the time at his own expense.

Keshub Chunder Sen's visit to England marks a new stage in the spiritual progress both of England and India. The warm reception of the young Brahmo reformer by Englishmen of all sects attests the growth of religious charity among ourselves, while the movement led by the Bengali Baboo forms part of a much wider effort to shake off the worst traditions of a debased Brahmanism. The trials at Bombay on account of the Aurora frauds show, on the other hand, the dark side both of English and Indian morals. It is pleasanter to look at the fruits of commercial enterprise as evinced in the successful laying and working of the submarine cable which binds England to the East, and in the virtual completion of the tunnel through Mont Cenis. The fortune of war has lately decided the future of the Overland Route to India. With the adoption of Brindisi as the port of departure for the English mails, the rates of letter postage were reduced to a shilling the half-ounce. Sir G. Pollock's promotion to Field-Marshal, Colonel Goldsmid's mission as umpire between Persia and Afghanistan, the establishment of State Savings-banks in India, certain reductions in the armies of India, the excellence of the Indian art-works in the Working Men's Exhibition, Lord Lawrence's selection for the Chairmanship of the London School Board, the launch of ironclads for Indian harbours, the collapse of the commercial treaty with China, are all incidents bearing more or less significantly on the history of the past year in British India. Nor must we omit to mention the deaths of such Anglo-Indian worthies as Sir Herbert Maddock, once Governor of Bengal, and Mr. J. W. S. Wyllie, the young and gifted Foreign Secretary of Lord Lawrence.

INCOME-TAX ASSESSMENTS.

The Englishman points out that the assessments are made on the information of the chowkeedar, or some equally reliable individual, and the assessor in five cases out of ten never troubles himself personally to enquire into the circumstances of the people whom he chooses to consider liable to the tax. The consequence is that the poorer classes have been assessed wholesale. The great object of the assessors is to raise money; and they are perfectly unscrupulous as to the means. They believe, rightly or wrongly, that no amount of over zeal will bring them into trouble; but that low assessments and small collections will inevitably lose them the favour of Government. It is much to be regretted that the Government have taken no steps to discourage this idea. Though several cases of gross misconduct have been brought to their notice, we believe that in only one instance has an assessor been dismissed. There seems to be a painfully immoral tone about all income-tax proceedings. An unjust judge who gave an unjust judgment would be dismissed without a moment's hesitation; but no particular culpability seems to attach to a man for making an unjust assessment. But where is the difference between the two cases? The assessor, equally with the judge, has a judicial duty to perform; he has to determine, after suitable inquiry, the amount of a man's income; and if he makes an assessment without due inquiry, he is in a moral point of view as guilty as a judge who decides a case without taking the trouble to look at the evidence. The only difference between the two cases consists in the treatment which the respective offenders receive. The unjust judge is cashiered with ignominy and disgrace, while the unscrupulous assessor is pretty sure to be rewarded with a post upon the permanent establishment. These things ought not to be. No doubt the position of an assessor is in many respects an exceedingly unpleasant one; and the Government naturally feels that it is bound to support a man who has a disagreeable duty to perform. But such support ought not to be indiscriminately given; the interests of the public must equally be considered. The Government that refuses to punish an assessor who recklessly assesses the people right and left, rich and poor, without proof, and even without inquiry, simply makes itself a partaker in the assessor's evil deeds. It neglects its first duty of protecting the people. Had the Government at the commencement of the year made one or two conspicuous examples when acts of misconduct had been brought to their notice, we should have heard of fewer complaints of the iniquitous extortions committed under the name of the income-tax. In some parts of the country the people have been described as being in a state of actual despair. The very poorest have been assessed, and their household property, when sold to pay the tax, has barely realised the expenses of the execution. It is upon these poor people that the reckless proceedings of the assessors have pressed so heavily. Unfortunately the law has been so framed as to debar them from all hopes of redress. When prosecuted before the magistrate for non-payment of the tax, they are not permitted to plead their poverty, and however indignant the magistrate may believe them to be, he has no power either to remit the tax, or to excuse them the heavy penalty which the law awards on default of payment. These considerations should make the Government exceedingly cautious in the matter of these prosecutions. The rigour of the law can only be moderated by the action of the executive authorities. Before punishing a man the magistrate ought to be satisfied that the assessor had reasonable grounds for making the assessment. Half the oppression carried on under the name of the income-tax would be stopped if, before instituting a prosecution, the Revenue authorities were compelled to certify that the assessment had been made after personal enquiry by the assessor himself.

THE MEDICAL SERVICE.

The Delhi Gazette thinks that as continual dripping of water wears away a stone, so constant exposure of injustice may ultimately make an impression on the inflictors thereof. We therefore again refer to some of the grievances under which the medical service groans. Paragraph 2 of the Furlough Rules of 1868 distinctly states, "Leave taken under the rules now presented will not involve forfeiture of appointment." Paragraph 5 states, "An officer proceeding on furlough will be allowed to draw fifty per cent. of his salary." Paragraph 34 states, "Officers of the Indian military and medical services will notify their intention to accept these rules, or to adhere to those now existing, on the first occasion of their taking furlough." Nothing indeed could appear more plain and straightforward than the above, but the Indian Government cruelly issues after-orders, debarring medical officers from participation in the advantages of the furlough rules as above referred. G. O. Military Department, No. 5, of 1869, states, regimental appointments are not considered appointments, in the sense of the clauses quoted in the furlough regulations; consequently medical officers holding such charges have no claim to any portion of the allowance when absent on furlough to Europe, nor any lien on the appointment after departure from India. And a more recent order places civil medical officers in a similar position with regard to claim to re-appointment to their station. Again in the matter of privilege leave, medical officers as compared with all other classes are most disadvantageously placed and most unjustly treated. Any staff allowance is, during such leave, cut from the pay of the medical officer; the same being granted to every other class in the service of Government. And yet as regards privilege leave the former are under exactly the same rules as the latter. They have to provide a substitute, and to make a declaration that they have no intention of taking any other leave during the ensuing six months, but all staff allowances are nevertheless deducted from the salary. For instance, if the Civil Surgeon of a station drawing, we will say, an extra allowance for the medical charge of a jail, and another officer drawing an extra allowance for the administrative charge of such an institution, or for any other work, both take privilege leave, the medical officer's pay is mulcted, the other officer receives his pay in full! And the futile reason given for this cruel distinction is, that the medical officers' allowances are called "extras," while other officers' allowances are not distinguished by that extraordinary title. Every officer, civil and military, enjoys his privilege leave without any sacrifice, excepting the medical officer. Every military officer enjoys the advantages of the military furlough rules, excepting the medical officer. The medical officer is alone treated in the unjust manner as above detailed. But we have not yet stated all the principal grievances under which the medical service labours. The Secretary of State's Despatch, published as G.G.O. No. 507 of June 20, 1864, para. 10, lays down the rate of pay of rank for the several grades. But that pay of rank thus guaranteed has never been issued; G.G.O. No. 269 of April 17, 1867, fixes the pay of upwards of two-thirds of all appointments civil and military which can be held by medical officers, at a less figure than the pay of their rank!—a flagrant violation of guarantee, promise and agreement, which perpetrated by a private firm on their employes would be distinguished by no milder terms than robbery and rascality.

STATION TALK.

Jhansie, Nov. 29.—Brigadier-General Olpherts, C.B., V.C., has just paid us a visit; he inspected the troops and was apparently much pleased with the appearance of the Jhansie force. Referring to the battery, he said "that though it was weak in men on parade it was in excellent order, and did great credit to its commanding officer," he "would not wish to have a better with him on service." To the 2nd battalion 1st Royals he expressed his personal regret at losing their services, and said he was sorry to notice that there were too many instances of insubordination, a crime through which one of the best armies has just gone to the dogs. He complimented the 39th N.I., and said that they appeared "in good order." He wound up by saying that he hoped to see the force again before long. It is rumoured that his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India will be here at the beginning of next month. His Excellency, it is said, is coming to inspect and communicate to the Indian Government the utility or otherwise of keeping up the European troops at Jhansie. Lord Napier will find on reference to the statistical report that this is one of the healthiest places in the North-West Provinces; the only thing I presume that his lordship will have to look to is the locality of the troops. Great dissatisfaction prevails with respect to the way in which the income-tax is collected. The officer who makes the assessment also acts as collector, and hears petitions of objection against his own assessments; this, of course, is not right. Again, the Deputy Commissioner is empowered to hear petitions of appeal, (instead of petitions of objection), thus the hearing of appeals by the Revenue Commissioner of the division, as laid down in Section XXVII. of Act 16 of 1870, is done away with. The tax itself is universally hated, but what is worse, for its collection officers of little or no experience are appointed, and hence the feeling of dissatisfaction is on the increase. The 106th L.I. arrived here on the morning of the 26th and the 2nd Battalion 1st Royals left this morning. We are glad to have the 106th, they have a first class band, and the officers are a set of jolly good fellows.

Morar, Gwalior, Dec. 5.—We have amongst us one, I am sure, that all your readers will be glad to know is well, and that one is our popular Commander-in-Chief, Lord Napier of Magdala. He arrived here from Agra this morning at seven A.M., and was announced to the residents by a salute from the grand old fortress at Lushkur. His Excellency seems in first-rate health and spirits, and as fit to undertake another campaign, if such an emergency should require his services in this land, as that in which he played such a noble part in the wilds of Abyssinia. He is the guest of Colonel Hutchinson, the Political Agent, and I am sure his Lordship has not found in his tour of inspection a more kind and genial host and hostess. He dines with them this evening. After dinner the Political Agent gives an evening entertainment to the residents; the band of H.M.'s 6th Regiment N.I. will attend. To-morrow he reviews Scindiah's army, followed by a full-dress durbar for the reception of his Highness by the Commander-in-Chief, which will, of course, be attended by the elite of the station. In the evening he dines with General Olpherts, C.B., V.C., the General Commanding, and to make up a good day his Excellency will favour with his presence a grand ball to be given, I suppose, in his honour by the officers of the Royal Artillery. On Wednesday his Highness the Maharajah entertains his Lordship at a grand banquet at one of his palaces at Lushkur.

Jabalpur, Dec. 6.—A short time back an order was issued that the great gun at Asirgurh should be removed to England to be placed in the Woolwich museum. A few particulars of this curious monster may be interesting in these warlike times. It was made at Burhanpore in 1663 of a peculiar gun metal composed chiefly of copper. The casting is described to have been made on a hollow core of iron welded in ribands, which now forms the bore of the piece. From muzzle to breech it is 12 feet 9 inches; girth at breech, 8 feet 2½ inches; girth at muzzle, 5 feet 7 inches; and the diameter of its bore, 8½ inches, being therefore of a larger calibre than the British sixty-eight pounders. The Persian inscription on it is "when the sparks of sorrow issue from me, life deserts the body as grief falls on the world when flames issue from the fiery zone." Aurungzebe's seal is impressed on it, and it is called 'Mulk Haibats' (terror of the country). An iron shot fitting the bore would weigh 70lbs. The rest camp at Jabalpur is again empty after one month's constant occupation, but one European regiment must surely pass up yet, either from the Bombay Presidency or from England, for the two corps which have passed down. Dr. Duke, of the artillery at Jabalpur, who suffered a severe injury of the right hand by a fall from his horse, is recovering slowly but favourably, and now there is no fear of amputation. Dr. Sinclair, of the 2-12th, has returned from Mussoorie, where he does not seem to have kept his health at all. The 2-12th are to march from Jabalpur in February. At last the Roman Catholic Chapel building has been commenced at this station. There are no professional highly-paid engineers employed in its construction, and it will therefore be my pleasant duty to report a few months hence —not that another sacred edifice has tumbled down, but that Jabalpur now boasts of another handsome, substantial building in the Roman Catholic Chapel. It is rising up in the immediate neighbourhood of that church which had to be knocked down because engineering skill failed to blow it up, and of those artillery barracks of which you have already heard too much. The wea her keeps bracing cold, and it is hoped the stations of Jabalpur and Sagar will be entertained with some soldiers' games during the Christmas vacations; in return for which the station should at least give the soldiers' children Christmas spreads under the "canopy of heaven," or huge Christmas trees to scramble.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

Earthquake.—Darjeeling was visited by an earthquake at 8.30 A.M. of the 2nd Dec.

Public Works Department.—Colonel R. Strachey, of the Public Works Department, arrived at Bombay by the mail steamer on Dec. 10, and has gone to Calcutta.

International Exhibition.—The Hon. F. S. Chapman and Mr. A. P. Howell, have been appointed by the Viceroy to be Members of the Central Committee for the London International Exhibition of 1871, in addition to those already nominated.

Bank of Bengal.—At a general meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of Bengal, held at Calcutta on Monday, Dec. 12, Messrs. E. C. Morgan and M. Henderson were elected directors in the room of Messrs. H. Dundas and J. J. Guise, who went out by rotation.

Military.—The Pioneer hears on good authority that Major-General Fordyce, Commanding the Sirehind division, proposes visiting Europe next March. "This move will afford an opportunity of doing justice to the claims of Major-General Beatson, and will place the uncoveted command of the Allahabad division at the disposal of the authorities."

A Moot Question.—Do snakes hiss? Dr. Fayrer, in continuing his experiments with snake poison, says, that on taking up a small echis or viper, it hissed loudly, as he thought at the time, but that he subsequently discovered that the sound was not hissing, but was caused by friction of the lateral scales. Is this the case with all snakes?

Suspension of Payment.—Messrs. Charles Nephew and Co., of Calcutta, suspended payment on Dec. 5. The firm had, it is said, large dealings with the Continent in a wholesale way, in addition to the special trade in connection with which its name has long been familiar to Anglo-Indians, and probably the war has brought the present suspension. A meeting of creditors was to take place in Calcutta on Dec. 10.

Colonel Keatinge.—The Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces will shortly leave Chanda for Sironcha, the head-quarters of the Deputy-Commissioner of the Upper Godavery District. Sironcha is close to the "third barrier" of the Godavery Navigation Works, and here it is expected that Colonel Keatinge will decide on certain important points connected with that important, because terribly costly, undertaking. From Sironcha the party proceeds to Coconada, and from thence to Calcutta, where we hope Colonel Keatinge will open his mind to the Viceroy. From Calcutta, the East Indian Railway will carry the Chief Commissioner back to his dominions, where, we are told, he intends to visit Chutteesghur, a district which was never visited by Mr. Morris, because (possibly) it particularly required visiting.—Pioneer, Dec. 14.

Civil Service.—A petition, signed by 241 members of the Bengal Civil Service, has been presented to the Viceroy, praying as follows:—1. To restore the rate of acting allowances to 30 per cent., as provided in the rules of 1868. 2. To fix the minimum furlough allowance at £500 per annum. 3. If this (2) be impossible, to restore the rules of 1868 as regards minimum furlough allowance; £500 per annum being the minimum for those who were members of the Civil Service when the rules were made. 4. To restore to the service its undoubted right to appointments in the Non-Regulation Provinces, so far as may be possible without injury to vested interests, and to re-open to it political appointments of all grades, from the majority of which it has of late years been excluded. 5. To modify the order relating to privilege leave before furlough.

Deadly Snakes.—Dr. Fayrer, C.S.I., has, we are glad to observe, resumed his interesting experiments with the deadly snakes of India. The last paper in which the results are given introduces us to two new enemies—the grass-green Trimeasuri and the Echis. The first of these are semi-arboreal, but bring forth their young or lay their eggs (for it is still undecided whether they are oviparous or viviparous), and from their colour are therefore more dangerous than the actual strength of their venom would justify. The Echis Carionatus is, we are told, a beautiful little viper, and apparently very fierce, for it hissed loudly when disturbed, and drew back its head in the attitude to strike. Nor was the menace without meaning, for a fowl bitten by it died in four minutes, and a dog in ten hours. The specimen experimented with was received by Dr. Fayrer from the Deputy-Commissioner of Delhi.—Pioneer.

MEDICAL.—Dr. J. M. Cunningham, Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India, has come, in the course of his official tour, to Allahabad. Dr. Cunningham has completed his visitation of Moradabad, Kumaon, Rohilkund, and Oudh.

HORSES AND HORSE DEALERS FROM YARKUND.—This week two very large kafilas of horses arrived in Lahore from Cabul, and are now resting in Sultan Serai. The horses have been collected from great distances—from Bokhara, Turkistan, Herat, and Afghanistan. Some of them are very good animals, and the owners ask enormous prices. There are a good many very fair ponies, among whom some wretched cow-like Yarkund animals cut a very poor figure. The men are remarkably tall, stout fellows, but are indescribably filthy, and so free of tongue as to seem even cheeky. For example, the sahib examining a horse says, "I wanted a horse, but this is more like an ass." "You are wrong, sahib, this is neither a horse nor ass; this is an elephant." "How much do you ask for it?" "Nine hundred rupees." "Why do you waste time in asking so much?" "How much do you offer, sahib?" "Two hundred." "Why do you waste time by offering so little?"—Indian Public Opinion.

MR. R. CARNAC.—Mr. H. Rivett-Carnac has come under the displeasure of the Englishman in common with every one under the sun save the Bengal civilians. We do not share Mr. Rivett-Carnac's views as to the omnipotence of cotton in promoting the country's welfare, nor are we enthusiastic about the Great Exhibition. Yet we do the Cotton Commissioner the credit to say that he thoroughly believes in both, and acts accordingly. It is as true that Mr. Rivett-Carnac was at Simla a few months back (as that he is in Calcutta now. But if memory serves us rightly, he did not quit his post in the plains until the rains set in, and he could be of use on the spot no longer; while the object of his present visit to Calcutta, in furtherance of his duties as Secretary to the Indian Branch of the Exhibition, has been notified by the Calcutta papers already. Should the Cotton Commissioner commence his annual tour through the cotton districts during next month, he will be past praying for.—Pioneer, Dec. 10.

BALM FOR SIR RICHARD.—The Umritu Bazar Putrika contains, in a late issue, a mock memorial from "the poor people of Bengal whose incomes fall below Rs. 500," thanking Sir Richard Temple for having fixed the assessable incomes at that figure. "We owe," it says, "to you a debt of immense gratitude. What, if you had made a slight error, and made the 500, 200! A five and a two only differ in the twist of their tails, and yet, thanks to the care of yourself and your secretary, no mistake was made. We hear, "it continues, "all around us bewailing; we see people going to gaol to satisfy your demand —is it then a wonder that we thank you for having been so careful in the matter of the twist to the tail of the 5? You are at present the most and best abused man in the country, and we congratulate you. Nothing like persecution. Be persecuted; it will do good to you, and wean you from the vanities of this vale of sorrows. We, as your friends, would go further, and would wish you to be actually punished, for it will do you good to be chastened. But if you long for the maximum amount, then you must seek martyrdom. 'Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you' (for 3½ income-tax's sake)—Matthew v. 11." There is, to our thinking, in this quotation from our Scriptures something which gives a bitterness to the banter which precedes it.—Pioneer.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—Lord Napier of Magdala likes to be in the saddle. And he has had abundant opportunity of gratifying that soldierly taste during the tour of inspection upon which he is still engaged. His Excellency was last heard of at Nowgong, on the 11th Dec., en route for Banda and Cawnpore. A brief resume of his tour will not be uninteresting. Starting from Simla on the 2nd of November, accompanied by Colonel Dillon, Military Secretary, Colonel Thesiger, Adjutant-General, Colonel Lumsden, Quarter-master General, Colonel Biddulph, Adjutant-General of Artillery, and Captain FitzGeorge, A.D.C., his Excellency kept along the hill road between Simla and Mussoorie, riding thirty miles, in order to reach the new hill station, Chukrata (8,400 feet above the sea), which has been occupied and so far built upon by the 55th Regiment under Colonel Hume. Chukrata was found to be a most charming place, with room for two or three regiments. From Chukrata they hurried through the Dhoon to Deyrah, where the 2nd Goorkhas are stationed; thence to Meerut, on to Moradabad, Bareilly, and Nynee Tal. Thence his Excellency diverged to the new hill station of Ranee Khet, at one time said to be likely to supplant Simla in vice-regal favour. This station is 6,000 feet above the sea, and would accommodate two regiments well, and a little world besides. Thence the route lay to Almorah, where the 3rd Goorkhas are quartered, back to Nynee Tal, Moradabad, and Meerut. Next, with but short interval for rest, they hurried on to Delhi, Muttra, Agra, Gwalior, Morar, Jhansi, and Nowgong, where, as we have said, they were on the 11th Dec., having ridden, from Morar, some seventy miles. From Nowkong to Banda they would also be in the saddle, also most of the way to Cawnpore. Lord Napier has been enthusiastically received everywhere, and from the minuteness of his inspection into all that relates to the discipline, comfort, and health of the army, much good is certain to follow from it.

THE CATHOLIC MISSIONARIES IN THIBET.—A little more than three years ago, on a representation addressed to our resident at Nepal, an effort was made through that officer, and through the British Envoy at Peking, to initiate measures for alleviating the hard condition of the Roman Catholic missionaries in Thibet. After considerable difficulty and delay, means were found for transmitting a communication to these reverend fathers, but owing to a detention caused by the Chinese Umbah at Lhassa this did not reach its destination for some eighteen months after the date of its despatch. The reply to this letter, which is dated March 18, 1869, hopes that the missionaries' "lively thanks may be known to her Britannic Majesty's Viceroy at Calcutta, who has" (we quote the letter) "been so kind as to view our position with so lively a commisseration and to do so much to protect some poor unknown strangers. We are very glad to acknowledge that it is owing to his Excellency and your own (Colonel Lawrence, through whom the letter was sent), and the Maharajah's (Jung Bahadoor's) very seasonable interference, that the Chinese and Thibetans did not more mischief to us, but, to be true, we must add that, up to this time, they could not be brought as yet to any sense of justice. Some days ago, the Chinese and Thibetan mandarins, who had to judge our case, were gathered at Patang, but the Chinese mandarins have been bribed with 10,000 ounces of silver (Rs. 32,000) by the Lamas and some native chiefs. Nothing at all has been done. They are now gone back to their own stations. It would be most pleasing and profitable to us to have a periodical correspondence with your Excellency, because the authorities of the country, being aware of our relations, would fear to treat us harshly; but from what has happened the first time, it is to be feared that correspondence, via Lhasse, is almost impossible, because we are entirely dependent upon the ill-will of the Chinese authorities; via Shanghai there is no difficult whatever. From Ta-tsien-lon to Katmandoo it requires only five months. We have been told that, last year, a party of English travellers, coming from Assam through the wild tribe of the Mechemees, had reached the Thibetan district of Dzayul, but they had been turned back by the local authorities. . . . In order to show our gratitude to the English Government for this kindness to us, should some English gentlemen come to this part of the world, we will help them heartily." To this an answer was sent by the Government of India, assuring the Missionaries of our sympathy and good-will, and stating the pleasure with which any further communications from them would be received. A letter has now arrived at the Foreign Office, dated June 27th, 1870, signed by the Rt. Rev. Dr. Chauveau, "Bishop of Sebastapolis and Vicar Apostolic of Lhassa," acknowledging, in an earnest and touching manner, the great pleasure and satisfaction which the little community under his care had derived from the friendly "assurances of the British Government."—Pioneer.

IMPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Dec. 14.—We have on the whole had a very quiet market during the week, this remark applying more particularly to Shirtings, transactions in which have been on a very limited scale. Grey Jaconets: Low to medium makes of 39-inch have been in good demand during the week, and 44-inch goods have also been more inquired for, both widths marking an advance of an anna per piece since last mail. Madapollams and T-Cloths continue quiet. Grey Mulls have been in steady demand during the week, at last mail's quotations. White Mulls: 44-inch are in fair demand, at rather better prices, and other widths are saleable at former prices. Other Bleached Goods are unchanged. The Twist market remains very depressed.

EXPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Dec. 14.—Saltpetre: Nothing has been done since we last wrote; stock is about 10,000 bags of all sorts. Rice: A small transaction has been done in Table rice at our last quotations; there is some inquiry for Ballam and Moonghy kinds, and some transactions have been done at our last prices. Linseed: Nothing has been done for shipment to America, but we have heard of some business having been done for Great Britain at our last quotations. The stock is not much in the market. Rapeseed: There is an active demand for this article, but we have heard of no change to report, owing to the scarcity of supplies from the interior. Jute: Since we last wrote the prices for this article have declined, and moderate transactions have taken place. Raw Silk: Since last report we have heard of no transactions.

Madras.

CAPTAIN FURLONG.—We are sorry to learn from the Rangoon papers that Captain Furlong continues in a very dangerous condition in consequence of his late accident, and that but little hope is entertained of his recovery.

PRIZE FOR DESIGN OF NEW MARKET.—Mr. R. R. Bayne, of Calcutta, has gained the first prize of 1,000 rupees which was offered for a design for the new General Market at Madras, and the second prize of Rs. 500 has been awarded to Mr. R. F. Chisholm.

THE CONVICT TURNBULL.—It will be remembered that some six months ago a sentence of ten years' rigorous imprisonment and ten thousand rupees fine was passed upon this man by the Acting Session Judge of Tellicherry, for breach of trust while employed as an overseer in the Forest Department. Against this sentence the prisoner appealed, and it has now been reduced by the High Court to one of rigorous imprisonment for five years.—Madras Paper.

A SUPERSTITIOUS TRIBE.—The Neilgherry Excelsior says:—"Of all the superstitious-ridden people in this country, the tribes of the Neilgherries are perhaps the most to be pitied. To their dread of the Kurumbers we have more than once alluded, but it was only the other day we learnt that the latter carry their terrifying influence to such an extent as to walk into Badaga villages, and take therefrom the choicest young women from their husbands and parents! A Badaga who was asked by a friend recently to go into a valley, and bring up something that he wanted from it, positively declined to do so. Pointing to a Kurumber in the valley, he said—'Do you see him? He'll blow a leaf at me and kill me.'"

FORT ST. GEORGE.—Electricity is advancing with rapid strides in the Madras Presidency. The hour gun at Fort St. George is fired by electricity. It seldom goes off, it is very true, and when it does, it is at the wrong time; but, except for this, the electricity system as practised in Madras is a great success. Not long ago the clumsy old-fashioned habit, still in vogue in remote provincial towns, of firing the gun by hand, was in vogue at Madras, but the Presidency shot ahead of such old-world expedients. "Fire me yon gun by electricity," cried the Napier, and science, with her battery of appliances, stepped forth, and now from the Government Observatory—no less than three miles distant—the Fort gun is fired by electricity. Only, as we said before, it doesn't go off. That is, however, the gun's business.—Pioneer.

THE LATE RAILWAY ACCIDENTS.—The Government, we understand, have already appointed a committee of engineer officers to inquire into the cause of the accident to the Cheyar bridge. It will be seen from the remarks which appear in another column, that Sir John Rennie long ago put his finger, as it were, on the weak point in the bridge. So far back as February 1865, Sir John said, "Before determining the depth to which these foundations should be sunk, it was necessary to ascertain the usual changes of the river; for unless the foundations were sunk below the actual depth of the river, which was changing, there could be no security." The all-important question then which the committee has to decide is, whether the foundations were or were not deep enough. There can be little doubt, we imagine, as to the conclusion they must arrive at.—Madras Mail.

JUDICIAL.—It is understood that Mr. Justice Kindersley's appointment to the Bench of the Madras High Court is likely to become permanent.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL BODDAM, of the Madras Staff Corps, has been appointed a roving agriculturist on Rs. 400 a month staff salary, and travelling allowances, in order that he may "improve the breed of cattle in Mysore." The gallant colonel is already favourably known to the Madras world for having improved the breed of cauliflowers, but this could hardly, we imagine, have prompted the present appointment. It requires something more than manure and mallies to improve breeds of cattle. Nobody knows how Colonel Boddam is going to set about it, and more, nobody can even guess. He is not, it is certain, going to do it by importing better animals, and, as he has only a year given him for the job, he cannot be going to do it by "model farming." If Colonel Boddam will take advice, proffered with all courtesy, he will try—education. Nothing like hulkabundi schools for "improving."—Pioneer.

THE MAHARAJAH OF VIZIANAGRAM.—A trifling incident occurred at the levee held by the Viceroy during his recent short stay at Benares, which, although it attracted our notice at the moment, escaped our memory when, later, we might have fittingly recalled it. After the Maharajah of Vizianagram had paid his respects to his Excellency on the occasion in question, and was about to resume his usual place on the right of, and immediately below, the Maharajah of Benares, the Viceroy took him by the hand and placed him on his own immediate left. We hope that this small, yet prized, distinction, is but the straw which indicates the direction of the current, and that the concession which the Vizianagram Chief has so long sought may soon follow in its course. We do not uphold the ostensible acquisition of public honours by marvels of public liberality, nor equally do we favour the too nice analysis of any man's motives in such a matter; it may suffice in most cases, and certainly in this, to judge the fruits alone. The Maharajah of Vizianagram is widely known as a courteous, kindly gentleman; but the better part of him—his more than princely patronage of benevolent objects of every class—is less notorious, as such generosity may fitly be. Now for some years he has sought from Government an extension of the honours paid him in British territory; he is accustomed to receive a salute upon entering the Bengal Presidency; he seeks to receive it also on entering each town. We believe the case is precisely this, but whether more or less—if less it can be—the public would hear of its being conceded with universal satisfaction. The surprise, to those who know the feelings of native gentlemen on such points, is not that the concession is desired, but that it should be for a moment withheld.—Pioneer.

Bombay.

THE NEW SHERIFF.—Dr. Bhau Dajee, the well-known Hindoo, who has once already held the office, has been appointed Sheriff of Bombay for the year 1871.

ABOUT A FRENCH MAN-OF-WAR.—The following extraordinary statement appeared in the columns of the Times of India apropos of the French man-of-war Marceau:—"In connection with this, it may not be out of place to mention, what some of our readers may have themselves seen stated in the Spectator, that Prussia and France agreed, some time ago, to neutralise the whole of the East. Consequently, the shipping of either nation would not be molested east of Suez by the cruisers of the other." In itself most unlikely, whether stated in the Spectator or not, we have the best authority for saying that no official notification of the agreement has been received in Bombay. An agreement of that kind would not be kept secret, nor would its announcement be made only in the Spectator. We trust no German vessels in the East will be drawn into a trap by the paragraph which our contemporary has been misled into publishing. Does it, by the way, look like neutrality in the East, when German merchants at Saigon are ordered by the French authorities to leave?—Bombay Gazette.

MILITARY.—The 103rd Royal Bombay Fusiliers were to embark at Bombay for England on the 3rd January, and their departure is the subject of a general order published by the Government of India. They quit India for the first time after a service in this country of more than two centuries, first as a regiment sent from England to take possession of the new settlement of Bombay in 1662, and subsequently as the Bombay European Regiment, the 1st Bombay Fusiliers, and then as her Majesty's 103rd Royal Bombay Fusiliers. The list of their services forms a noble record, and we are glad to read that during the last two or three years, which have been spent in the Bengal Presidency, they have "upheld, under all circumstances, their former high reputation."

JACOBABAD.—The Political Superintendent at Jacobabad, who left last month on a political tour, with a strong escort of nearly one thousand men, for the hills, visited the Bhoogtees in their fastnesses, and, after holding a consultation with their head men, he proceeded with them towards the camp of the Murrees. He halted about thirty miles from it, where he located his escort, he himself going to the hills, in company with thirty sowars of the Jaikranee tribe belonging to the Jacobabad police. The head men of the Murrees received him very cordially. His stay there did not extend beyond two days. On the first day of his arrival a large concourse of the people gathered around him, when he distributed about Rs. 500 among them. He effected a reconciliation between the Murrees and the Bhoogtees. There is every reason to believe that differences will not be long in breaking out again, and that the Murrees will be once more at their old game. The Political Superintendent returned to Jacobabad twenty-five days after leaving it.—Sindian, Dec. 10.

DHARWAR COTTON REPORT.—DHARWAR, Dec. 14.—The latest news we have of the Liverpool cotton market is to 9th instant, quoting Fair Dhollera at 6 9-16d. per lb. We are still enabled to report the total absence of any inquiry on native account, the business during the fortnight having been confined entirely to the execution of European orders, and as there has been very little competition, dealers have not been able to sustain the prices we quoted last. Purchases above Ghaut amount to five hundred candies Sawginned, at prices varying from Rs. 205-10, and fifty candies Compta at Rs. 185. On the coast about three hundred candies Sawginned and fifty candies Compta have been purchased at about the same figures as those paid here, and all on European account also. We quote Sawginned Rs. 205, Compta Rs. 185, all December shipment, or to 10th January for and quantity, from Carwar, usual terms. Coast prices, immediate shipment, we quote Rs. 5 higher than the above. It is reported that sales of Sawginned, purchased on the coast, have been made in Bombay at Rs. 193-5; but these, if true, must have been entirely on speculation, as no purchases have been made either at Carwar or Compta at rates that could possibly admit of bona fide sales on these terms, even by waiving usual commissions. With regard to the new crop we have nothing of fresh interest to report.

WHAT A "DITCHER" THINKS OF BOMBAY.—A correspondent, "who has just left Calcutta for Bombay," writes from the latter place as follows to the Indian Daily News:—"Bombay is far in advance of Calcutta in its bustle and activity, in its police and municipal arrangements, and in the European activity of native inhabitants. Omnibuses crowded with passengers inside and out—cabs on stands sharp in attracting passengers—second and third editions of newspapers hawked about in the streets, and all the ethnology of Asia in the most picturesque variety moving along in ceaseless activity, fully realising the great material fact of the age that—time is money—almost makes me forget that this is India. There is nothing about it Asiatic in character but the blazing sun, the everlasting toddy-palm, the brown-leafed plantain tree, and the marvellous monuments of drapery erected on the heads of the wearers in the shape of turbans of every variety and form. Even the women partake of the general activity, convert the petticoat into a dhotee, and carry on their business with an activity refreshing to witness. The public buildings which are gradually rising up are handsome stone structures, in which the meretricious defects of Indian architecture are carefully avoided. They are correct in their proportions, magnificent in their general effect, well situated, and would not disgrace even the Queen of Cities, which is now beleaguered by the descendants of the Hun and the Goth. I have driven several times through the main streets of the Bazaar, which are almost as picturesque as those of the cities of Rajpootana, without the smallest offence to the sense of smell. The handsome lamps which adorn the intersections of the main lines of communication, the drinking fountains, and, above all, the magnificent market, which bears the name of Crawford, show at a glance that Bombay is ruled by brains, and that the native of India is not slow to appreciate the advantages of Western civilisation when presented in a plain, practical form."

IMPORTS.—BOMBAY, Dec. 17.—The dulness noticed in our last report continues, and the business doing is on an extremely limited scale. The inquiry for the interior, such as it was, has fallen off, and, owing to the war between France and Germany, and the unsettled state of Europe generally, the dealers show no dis position to enter the market.

EXPORTS.—BOMBAY, Dec. 17.—Cotton: The unfavourable tenour of the home telegrams, and more especially the heavy receipts reported at the American ports, has induced a very dull feeling, and only a small business has been done for export, prices at the close showing a decline of Rs. 5 per candy. The entire purchases reported during the fortnight on European account amount to about 10,000 bales as against arrivals from up-country of 16,336 bales during the same period, while the clearances from 1st January to date show a deficiency of 157,832 bales as compared with the same period last year. Parcels of new Hingunghaut and Oomrawuttee are now arriving, and sales have been effected of the former at Rs. 225, and of the latter at Rs. 205 to Rs. 210 per candy, but the quality so far is by no means good; nearly the whole of the samples showing black leaf and yellow stain, while the staple is also inferior. In other articles of export there is no change worthy of note

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

FURLOUGH RULES.

The Government of India has ruled that an officer taking leave on private affairs, or sick leave in India, for any period for three years consecutively, will, under Rule XXV. of the Furlough Regulations of 1868, be liable to forfeiture of his appointment.

GENERAL OFFICERS TRAVELLING.

No. 812.—The Government of India have ruled that general officers appointed to the staff in India are to be considered as travelling on duty from the port of debarkation to their place of final destination, and to receive free passage under the regulations which rule the grant of free passage to those so travelling.

STAFF SALARIES.

Bombay Castle, Dec. 13.—No. 825.—Under instructions from the Government of India the Right Hon. the Governor in Council is pleased to direct that the following rules now in force be strictly applied to all officers holding staff appointments, whether permanently or as officiating, from and after the 1st inst.

2. All staff salaries attaching to staff situations are in addition to staff corps pay, whether the incumbents belong to the staff corps or not, and this applies in the case of appointments or salaries sanctioned subsequently to the promulgation of G.G.O. No. 552 of Nov. 4, 1863, in which the rule was originally prescribed. In cases where officers of the local service holding staff appointments are entitled to their local pay and allowances, a corresponding reduction is made from the staff salary of the appointment in order to equalise their aggregate receipts with those of staff corps officers occupying the same position.

3. The only exceptions to the above are as follows:—

1st. Officers of the local service in command of native regiments under the new organisation, and regimental colonels in command of brigades. These draw specially the old rate of allowance for regimental and brigade command, in addition to the regimental pay and allowances of their rank.

2nd. Officers of the royal artillery holding the appointments of deputy adjutant general, royal artillery, in Bengal, assistant adjutant general royal artillery, in Madras and Bombay, inspector of royal artillery, brigade major to inspector, and appointments in the Ordnance Departments. These draw the staff salaries of their appointments in addition to their regimental pay and allowances.

3rd. Regimental officers commanding stations or convalescent depots, station staff officers, staff officers of convalescent depots, commandants of depots (for recruits or men going home), sub assistant commissary generals of the third class, barrack masters, pension paymasters in Madras and Bombay, and probationers in the Stud Department, Bengal, similarly draw the staff salaries of these appointments in addition to their regimental pay and allowances. Probationary officers in the Pay Department, so long as they do not obtain any acting or permanent appointment in the department, are permitted to draw the regimental pay of their rank in addition to the staff salary awarded to them.

MARINE DEPARTMENT.—The following temporary arrangements and appointments are confirmed:—Mr. S. J. Lawson, 2nd officer of H.M.'s gunboat Clyde, to be acting 1st officer of that vessel from May 27 to Aug. 16, v. Day. Mr. G. Johnstone, 1st officer H.M.'s gunboat Clyde, is allowed leave of absence to proceed to Europe on m.c., for a period of 15 months. Lieut. J. Brebner, late Indian navy, superintendent of hulks and vessels in ordinary and assistant dock master, is allowed leave of absence to Europe, on m.c., for a period of 12 months.

INVALID TROOPS FOR ENGLAND.—With reference to G.O.G. No. 520 of Sept. 3, the invalids and others ordered to embark in her Majesty's Indian troopships Euphrates and Malabar, on February 22 and March 2, 1871, respectively, will, under order of her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, embark in the Jumna and Euphrates on January 12 and February 22, 1871, respectively. Her Majesty's Indian troopship Malabar, starting on March 2 direct from England, via the Suez Canal, will, therefore, unless otherwise required, proceed empty.

OFFICERS' FAMILY REMITTANCES.—We extract the following paragraph from a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, dated Oct. 20:—"I have had under my consideration in council the question of the extent to which officers who are in receipt of good service or wound pensions, or other special allowances, shall be permitted to increase their family remittances to this country by drawing those allowances in England, and I have determined that the pay as aide-de camp to the Queen may be considered exceptional, as an English payment, to be issued in this country if the officer desire it, without reference to the amount which he may be entitled to remit; but that in all other cases in which authority may be given for the payment of special pensions or allowances in England, the amount which each officer is allowed to remit shall be reduced to a corresponding extent."

COURT-MARTIAL.—At a general court-martial, held at Meean Meer on Wednesday, Nov. 2, 1870, Gunner Arthur Stevens, 4th baty., 22nd brig., R.A., was arraigned on the following charge:—Insubordination, accompanied with personal violence, in having, at Mean Meer, on Oct. 5, 1870, while a prisoner undergoing sentence in the garrison prison, struck with his clenched fist Acting bombardier Joseph Darby, one of the provost assistants of the garrison prison, Meean Meer, the said Acting bombardier Joseph Darby being his superior officer, and being in the execution of his office. The Court finds that the prisoner, No. 1,050, Gunner Arthur Stevens, 4th baty. 22nd brig. R.A., is guilty of the charge. Sentenced to penal servitude for the term of fifteen years; the Court further sentence him to be discharged with ignominy from her Majesty's service, and also to be marked with the letters B.C.

ADJUTANTS AND QUARTERMASTERS.—The following decision of the Government of India is published:—"In reply to your letter, No. 678G, dated July 29, I am directed to acquaint you that the rule laid down in the letter from this department, No. 559, dated June 28, under which a captain, who is a squadron or wing subaltern, is required to vacate his appointment on being nominated to act in any non-regimental staff appointment or in a higher regimental appointment in another corps, is not intended to apply to captains holding the appointment of regimental adjutants or quartermasters, as such officers may often be required to fill temporarily the posts of brigade major or station staff, and it would be impossible to select them for these posts were they to be obliged to forfeit their regimental appointment. But I am to add that it has been decided by the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. in Council that the limit of such tenure is to be six months, after which period the officers in question should either vacate their temporary appointments, or the adjutancy or quartermastership of their regiment."

MILITARY FURLOUGHS.—The following officers have obtained furlough to Europe and leave of absence, on medical certificate, under the rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified:—Lieut. col. D. J. Nasmyth, Royal (Bombay) engineers, deputy superintendent Great Trigonometrical Survey of India, is permitted to proceed to sea and colonies, with leave for two years, under the furlough regulations of 1796. Major gen. C. W. Tremenheere, R.E., C.B., will, on receiving charge of the office of political resident at Aden, assume command of the garrison, pending further orders. The furlough granted to Capt. E. B. Holland, dated Nov. 23, is to have effect from date of departure in the current month. The furlough granted by G.O. No. 728, dated Nov. 2 last, to Lieut. H. C. McDiarmid, R.E., is to commence from Sept. 15, the date of his departure for Europe. Lieut. J. B. B. Dickson, general list, Bengal cav., for one year. Mr. J. THE ALLAHABAD BARRACKS.

The following is the resolution of the Government of India on the report of the committee appointed to inquire into the defects in the new barracks and other buildings at Allahabad. This is better than nothing, but where is the report itself :—

Letter from the Government of the North-Western Provinces, in the Public Works Department, No. 2,474A, dated Aug. 18, 1870, and enclosures.

RESOLUTION.

The Special Committee, appointed for the purpose of reporting upon the circumstances relating to the fall of the store-room in the gun-carriage factory at Allahabad, were requested to examine and report upon the condition of the soldiers' barracks lately erected in the new cantonment, and after a careful inspection of the several buildings have brought to notice defects in the following instances :—

1. Insecurity of the planks of the ceiling of the barracks.
2. Leaky condition of roofs, particularly the terraced ones of the upper verandahs of barracks.
3. Want of sufficient connection between the verandah and main walls of barracks.
4. Variable quality of the mortar and plaster used in the construction of the buildings generally.
5. Defective drainage of the ground in the neighbourhood of the barracks.
6. Doubts as to the sufficiency of the foundations of the barracks.
7. Inferior style of construction of officers' quarters, particularly in respect to one of the double-storeyed buildings, which will probably have to be rebuilt.

With regard to the barracks, the committee only lay stress on point No. 3 ; they remark—"This is, in fact, almost the only point of any importance that has come under our notice ;" and the Local Government observes that, whilst there are many defects in the workmanship which are very discreditable to the officers who have been connected with them, no radical defects of construction appear to exist, or only such as admit of being remedied at no very large outlay.

1. Ceilings.—The half-inch planks, of which the ceilings are formed, not having been properly fastened, have started under the influence of the alternations of temperature and moisture of the atmosphere. Very simple measures are necessary to make these quite secure, and the committee express the opinion that "the defects might easily have been rectified by the executive engineer, or at all events by the superintending engineer on his own responsibility." The Local Government remarks that "it was through error of judgment on the part of the executive engineer that what is required had not already been carried out." Measures have been taken by the Local Government for effecting the necessary repairs, and probably the work has been done by this time.

2. Leakage of Verandah Roofs.—This is partly due to cracks in the terrace covering, which ought to have been long ago closed up by the executive engineer, but mainly to an insufficient number of pipes for the rapid discharge of the rain water. It is proposed to supply an additional number of pipes ; but, in view to avoid the risk of leakage into the walls, it is a matter for further consideration whether it will not be the best plan to dispense with pipes altogether, and to allow the water to pass freely over the eaves, or to discharge by numerous spouts.

3. Insufficient Connection between Verandah and Main Walls.—The arcaded verandah walls are slight, and the committee think that they discovered signs of their having been thrust outward by the roof. The evidence is not very positive, but the committee very properly recommend the precaution of improving the connection between the main and the tops of the verandah walls by a few iron tie-rods. Orders, which are approved by the Governor-General in Council, have been given by the local government to carry out this precautionary measure.

4. Variable Quality of Mortar and Plaster.—The committee consider that "the whole of the brickwork, as regards the quality of bricks and setting, is altogether unexceptionable ; the bricks have been burnt in the Government yards, and are as good as any we have ever seen, and the joints of the work are remarkably close and true. We cannot, however, say that the mortar is generally of equally good quality. Both as regards the pointing and the plaster, we find that, in some places, the mortar is particularly good, and in others of inferior quality, and in many of the wards, particularly with regard to the plaster, decidedly bad." The security of the buildings does not appear in any way to be affected by the quality of the mortar ; but the bad plaster will, of course, involve heavy expense in the annual repairs. The committee would not permit the use of oopla-burnt kunkur lime ; but such lime can be obtained of excellent quality if ordinary care be taken in its preparation, and on economical grounds it would be very undesirable to prohibit the use of lime thus burnt.

5. Defective Drainage.—The committee draw attention to this, and particularly urge that arrangements be made to prevent stagnation of water near the foundations of the buildings.

The Chief Engineer explains that projects for the complete drainage of the lines have been approved, and that, for the most part, the necessary drainage channels have been cut. The ground in the neighbourhood of the barracks has, however, been lately ploughed up in view to its being purified by cultivation ; some of the surface drains have consequently been choked, and water lies about in various places. A few cuts would have disposed of this water, and the Executive Engineer is justly blamed for not having taken the necessary measures to ensure their being carried out. The report brings to light a want of forethought and consideration in this very simple matter, which it is painful to be obliged to notice, and H.E. the Governor-General in Council desires that this question of drainage may continue to receive the most careful consideration of the Chief Engineer.

6. Insufficiency of Foundations.—The attention of the committee was drawn to this point in consequence of some slight cracks in the infantry hospital walls. The committee remark—"Though to all appearance they are quite insignificant, we feel bound to notice them, owing to the fact that, whilst two of the men's hospital ranges were under construction, a portion of one of them fell twice, and an angle of the other three times, and were again rebuilt on the old foundations after they had been protected by a layer of concrete in front. The foundations are carried to a depth of only two and a-half feet below the ground level.

Colonel Hodgson explains that the committee have not been correctly informed about this point. No portions of the buildings ever fell. Cracks appeared in the corner arches, caused, not by any yielding of foundations, but from want of sufficient strength in the supporting end piers. These portions were taken down and rebuilt. A worse settlement occurred over a blind well ; the injured portion of wall was taken down and rebuilt, and precautions were taken to secure the foundations.

The committee would have preferred deeper foundations generally for all the buildings ; but these buildings have been more or less completed for two or three years, and there are no manifest signs of settlement. The chief precaution to be taken is to prevent the lodgment of water near the foundations, and to this the Governor-General in Council would enjoin the strictest attention.

7. Officers' Quarters.—These were not commenced until the barracks were nearly ready for occupation. They were, therefore, run up hurriedly, so that they might be ready for the officers when the men were moved into the barracks ; but this is no valid excuse for the very bad quality of work that has been executed. All authorities admit that the construction of these quarters is far inferior to that of the barracks. One of the buildings has settled so seriously that it will probably have to be almost entirely rebuilt. The cause of settlement has not yet been ascertained, but it is being inquired into, and a further report is promised. This should be submitted with the least practicable delay.

His Excellency the Governor-General in Council observes that most of the defects above noticed, and many others in connection with the minor buildings, were reported to the Government of India by the Quarter-master general in January last, and that the representations of the military authorities were sent to the Government of the North-Western Provinces, on Feb. 9, 1870, with instructions to furnish, on an early date, detailed explanation in regard to each of the defects brought to notice. Orders were also given to the effect that the remedial measures that might seem urgently necessary in the opinion of the Lieutenant-governor should at once be set in hand. The instructions of the Government of India appear to have been overlooked by the Local Government, for no report beyond that now under consideration has ever reached the Government of India. The comprehensive report called for should, however, be submitted without further delay, as it ought to embrace points not touched upon in these papers.

In respect to the blame to be attached to the officers of the department for the defects that have been brought to notice, there can be no doubt that Mr. Hennessey, one of the executive engineers, is directly responsible for the bad work in the officers' quarters, which were nearly all built by him. For this, and for other shortcomings, he has lately been reduced to the grade of assistant engineer.

The present executive engineer, Major Whish, had nothing to do with the construction of any of the buildings ; but the Local Government holds him to blame for slackness of duty in respect to his failure to remedy the defective drainage, and to carry into execution the necessary repairs of the barracks. Had he attended properly to the condition of the ceilings and the roofs, many of the defects now complained of would have had no existence. It is said of him—"There has been a want of promptness of action which should not have occurred in an officer of his long experience."

The remarks of the Lieutenant-Governor on this officer are fully concurred in by his Excellency the Governor-General in Council, and he should be told that this instance of failure on his part will be recorded against him in the promotion rolls.

It is said of Major Cobbe, superintending engineer, that he was of little or no assistance to the Government at the time when work was being pressed forward, and that he failed altogether to notice and check the inferior work in the officers' quarters. His case has been dealt with in the resolution regarding the accident to the store-room in the gun-carriage factory.

Nothing has been said of Colonel Rose, superintending engineer ; but he was in charge for 2½ months after the representations of the local military authorities, above alluded to, had been pointed out to the Government, North-Western Provinces. The orders of the Government of India must have been passed on to him, and he ought to have paid particular attention to remedying many of the defects that had been so prominently brought to notice, and for which Major Whish has alone been held to blame by the Local Government.

Fort and Government House.—It does not seem necessary to record any remarks on this part of the committee's proceedings. The suggestions of the committee may be left to be dealt with by the local government.

H.E. the Governor-General in Council desires to record, in conclusion, that the strictures conveyed in the resolution Nos. 1,294-5, dated Nov. 30, on the fall of the store room of the gun carriage factory, in regard to the negligence and incapacity displayed by all the officers concerned, are applicable, although perhaps in a somewhat less degree, to the case of the new barrack buildings.

ORDER.—Ordered, that this resolution be sent to the Government of the North-Western Provinces, in the public works department, with a special injunction that the measures (which have already been too long delayed) for placing the buildings in question in perfectly efficient condition may be speedily and thoroughly carried into effect.

Ordered also, that a copy of the resolution be forwarded to the military department for information.

ROYAL SCHOOL FOR OFFICERS' DAUGHTERS.

The Committee of the Royal School for Officers' Daughters have t length published their reply to the strictures of Sir Robert nstruther and the Rev. S. Jenner. With regard to the alleged ostliness of the education supplied in this school, they show, by a omparison of the whole yearly outlay at Bath, that the actual cost f maintaining and educating seventy girls amounts to no more than £47 a head, or if the year's repairs be excluded, to less than £43. This they consider "no unreasonable amount for superior tuition in English, French, and German, in music and drawing, as well as in needlework." Possibly not, if the tuition be superior, and the figures of the committee trustworthy. Cookery, which many people regard as an important branch of feminine study, is not taught because no facilities for teaching it are afforded by "the gas and steam arrangements of a large public institution." This excuse will hardly satisfy the friends of culinary progress. To the untutored masculine mind it would seem that a good large kitchen range furnishes the best school for instruction in an art too much neglected by English housewives of every degree. Music and German are good things, but a little knowledge of practical cookery would never come amiss even to English gentlewomen. This question apart, however, the committee fairly enough maintain that the daughters of gentlemen should be lodged and educated accordingly. Every girl in the school —and fifty of them are fifteen years old and upwards—has a small sleeping apartment. Seventy girls being considered quite enough for one person to look after, a separate place has been found for the youngest children, twenty in number, who as they grow up are transferred to the elder school.

In dealing with the question of excessive outlay on buildings and improvements, the committee go in detail over each instance of alleged extravagance. The cost of the new well did greatly exceed the estimate, but the excess, which fell considerably short of the figure named by the hon. secretaries, was fully justified by the results. It had been alleged that the building of a new wing to the school cost £2,411. 18s. 6d. for what consisted of little but outside walls. In point of fact, it cost only £1,400, and comprised a solid stone staircase, a lavatory, closets, and several other rooms. Some people, however, may still find a curious disproportion between the work done in these two cases and the money spent upon it. But Sir R. Anstruther, urge the committee, never once in his seven years of office complained about the expenditure, nor did he pay even one visit to the school at Bath. As to Mr. Jenner's efforts to check extravagance, his first complaint, made in 1867, was at once investigated by the committee, who declared themselves satisfied with the explanations given. The committee end by appealing to the public for their continued support of an institution which in five years has increased from twenty-five to ninety girls. Twenty more will be taken in after the Christmas holidays, and it is hoped that ere long the whole number will be raised to a hundred and twenty. On the whole, it may be said that the committee, if only partially successful in rebutting the charge of extravagance, have succeeded in proving the extravagance of Mr. Jenner's charges. If that gentleman, moreover, mixed up in his reckonings capital account with current expenses, as the committee say he did, his mistake in that direction might tend to vitiate the bulk of his detailed conclusions. After all, forty-seven pounds a-head does not seem a very extravagant sum for the purposes to which it has been applied. There are schools, of course, where girls may be ill-fed and worse educated for half that cost; but these are not schools for gentlefolk's daughters. —Home News.

Miscellaneous.

INDIA MUSEUM.—The number of visitors to the Museum at the India Office in December last was 5,566; total number of visitors since the opening in April, 34,030.

BRITISH INDIAN SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—Information has been received by the British Indian Submarine Telegraph Company that a further reduction of 1½d. per ton has been made in the harbour dues at Aden. Vessels calling merely to deliver telegrams are not subjected to any harbour tariff.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £400,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 4th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were, to Calcutta £370,000, and to Bombay £30,000. The minimum price was fixed as before at 1s. 10d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta, at 1s. 10¼d., will receive about 61 per cent., on Bombay at that price in full.

THE NEW RIFLE.—Notwithstanding repeated statements to the contrary made by the Pall Mall Gazette, we appear to have been rightly informed when mentioning that the Martini-Henry rifle was selected by Government. We now learn from the Irish Times, a journal generally well informed on such subjects, that it has been notified at Irish Head-Quarters that this is the weapon that has been adopted, and that an issue would be made immediately to the troops in Ireland. We also observe that Mr. Cardwell, when addressing his constituents at Oxford, speaks of the "Martini-Henry as being the new arm." Under these circumstances our contemporary affords another instance of the inaccuracy of his information on certain points, and of the difficulty that exists in convincing him of his error.—Army and Navy Gazette.

IN MEMORIAM.—The Duke of Argyll has addressed a letter to the Governor-General of India in reference to the death of Sir Henry Durand. His Grace says:—"I have received with the deepest regret telegraphic intelligence of the melancholy death by an accident of Major-General Sir Henry Marion Durand, K.C.S.I., C.B., Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab. By this sad calamity the Government of India at home and abroad has been deprived of the services of one of its best officers in the performance of his public duties, at a time when he had just entered on a new career of utility, for which he was eminently fitted. Having entered the Indian army in one of the scientific branches of the service, he distinguished himself at an early period by his gallantry in the field, and subsequently by his ability and independence of character in different high civil and political appointments, and as a member of the Supreme Government won for himself the confidence of successive Governors-General, until he was selected by your Excellency to fill the high office in which his distinguished career has been so suddenly brought to a close. The life of such a man is an example to the service, and her Majesty's Government deeply deplores his death."

ARTILLERY FOR INDIA.—We understand that the special committee which was appointed some few months ago to consider the most suitable guns for Indian use has recommended the exclusive adoption of muzzle-loading guns of seven different calibres:—1. Wrought iron muzzle-loading 10-inch rifled guns, for turret ships. 2. Wrought-iron muzzle-loading 9-inch rifled guns, for coast defences. 3. Converted cast-iron Palliser guns, 68 or 56-pounders, converted to 80 or 64-pounders, rifled, for secondary coast defences. 4. Converted cast-iron Palliser guns, 24 and 18 pounders, converted to 40-pounders, rifled, for guns of position and siege trains. 5. 20-pounder guns (of bronze, if it be found possible to convert the existing 9-pounder 10 cwt. bronze smooth-bores), for heavy field batteries. 6. New 9-pounders (of bronze, if that material should ultimately prove satisfactory; if not, of wrought iron lined with steel), for field batteries and horse artillery. 7. 7-pounder guns (probably bronze) for mountain batteries. This system of guns and projectiles will be one which will combine efficiency with simplicity in a high degree; and it has this further to recommend it, that it can be introduced at a very inconsiderable expense and in a very short time, thanks to the facilities of production which Major Palliser's system of conversion affords. The carriages for these Palliser guns are also ready to hand. The ammunition will be obtained at Cossipore. It is contemplated, we believe, to withdraw any breech-loading guns which may have been supplied to India, and to replace them with muzzle-loading guns of one of the above mentioned calibres. Active measures are now being taken to press forward the Indian armaments.—Pall Mall Gazette.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY.—The twenty-third half-yearly general meeting of the proprietors of this company was held last Tuesday, at the City Terminus Hotel; Mr. R. W. Crawford, M.P., in the chair. The chairman expressed the peculiar satisfaction with which the directors now met the shareholders. It was now in their power to make an advance upon the five shillings' dividend which had been declared for the four preceding corresponding half-years. The dividend would have been still larger had it not been that the Secretary of State required a certain sum to be left on balance. A telegram had been received from the company's agents in Calcutta stating that the gross receipts on the working of the line for the half-year ending Saturday last were nearly £1,200,000, so that it might be hoped that the income would be sufficient to meet the guaranteed interest. During the half-year the company had had no accident or casualty, or any of those numerous things which so largely interfered with the profits of railway companies in these days, and he had great satisfaction in bearing testimony on behalf of the directors to the zeal and ability of the officers who conducted the affairs of the company in India. The directors were enabled to point to the opening of the Chord line as an indication that the expenditure upon the capital account was very nearly closed. There were no heavy works in hand, and all that remained to be done were some minor works of stations, &c. The exigencies of the traffic might perhaps require some further accommodation in the shape of rails. When the accounts with the Jubbulpore line should be closed, the balance would be quite within the competence of the directors to raise, and he hoped it would be too insignificant to offer for rateable division among the shareholders. During the year 1870, accepting the telegram which had been received to be correct, the gross traffic amounted to £2,631,000, as against £2,478,000 in last year, and £2,154,000 in 1868. He moved the adoption of the report. Mr. J. C. Marshman seconded the motion, which was unanimously adopted; as were also other resolutions authorising the distribution of a dividend at the rate of 5s. 9d. per cent. for the half-year, in addition to the usual guaranteed interest, and consolidating into stock all paid-up shares not already consolidated.

MILITARY.—The Standard has information that the Government has determined to increase the establishments of all branches of the military service to the extent of 20,000 men, in the following proportions:—Royal Horse Artillery, 787; Cavalry, 1,831; Royal Artillery, 4,467; Royal Engineers, 294; Foot Guards, 700; Infantry of the Line, 11,398; Army Service Corps, 470.—Experiments are to be made at Shooter's-hill in order to test the utility of Thomson's road steamer in drawing guns and other heavy loads up hill, over bad roads, or land where there is no road at all, with a view to its introduction into the Army Service Corps. One of the smaller engines has already been purchased, and is in use at the Royal Arsenal, where an instructor is daily employed teaching soldier artisans how to handle it. The 35-ton gun, which is still blocking the tramway leading to the proof butts, will be tried with the new pebble powder, recently approved by the committee on explosives. This description of powder, which resembles small black pebbles, being manufactured as fast as the resources of the establishment at Waltham will allow. This powder, as already reported, gives a greater velocity to the projectile, with less strain upon the gun than the ordinary powder in use, and it is understood that the maximum charges have been fixed by the committee as follows:—35-ton gun, 120 lbs.; 25-ton gun, 85 lbs.; 10-inch gun, 70 lbs.; 9-inch gun, 50 lbs.; and 7-inch gun, 30 lbs.—A reward for distinguished service has been awarded to Colonel C. L. D'Aguilar, C.B., 12th Brigade, Koyal Artillery, commanding Royal Artillery in the Southern District. Colonel D'Aguilar served in the Crimean campaign from September, 1854, to March, 1855, including the battle of Inkerman (where he had a horse shot under him) and siege of Sebastopol, in the trenches with the siege train, and at the bombardment of October 17, and for his services received the war medal with two clasps, a companionship of the Bath, the 5th class of the Medjidie, and the Turkish medal. He served in the Indian campaign of 1857-58, and commanded the artillery of General Franks's Force at the action of Secundra, also commanded the Royal Horse Artillery at the siege and capture of Lucknow, when he was three times mentioned in despatches, and was granted the brevet rank of colonel, and received the war medal.

REPORT ON EXPLOSIVES.—The Committee on Explosives have forwarded to the War-office reports on their progress of investigations at Woolwich. In the memorandum of instructions forwarded to the committee from the Secretary of State for War, their attention was especially directed "to the importance of an early determination of the description of gunpowder whose employment in large charges is attended with the least risk of overstraining the guns," and they were desired to report progress from time to time on this part of the question. It is stated their experiments hitherto have shown that there is no difficulty in producing a description of powder much better suited for use in guns in large calibre than the present service powders. From the numerous samples tried, five descriptions have been selected for illustration, viz., rifle large grain, pellet, Russian prismatic, Ritter prismatic, and pebble powder. The guns with which the tests have been made are 8-inch and 10-inch muzzle-loading wrought-iron smooth-bores, which have been tapped in several places, and fitted with Rodman's pressure gauges, and a new "crusher" gauge, made in the Royal Gun Factories, these being both designed to ascertain the pressure caused by the explosion, and with Captain A. Noble's chronoscope and the Navez Leurs apparatus, to determine the velocity of the projectile. The results, as given in detail by the committee, are, so far as they have gone, favourable to a pebble powder having a density of 1·732, a single round (60lb.) of which gave forty feet more velocity than a like charge of the service rifle large-grain powder, with only two-fifths of the pressure. The committee intend to continue the experiments with rifled guns, and also to determine the proper charges for guns of various calibre, and, in the meantime, they recommend the adoption and manufacture of pebble powder, the production of which involves little departure from the existing system of manufacture, and that steps should be at once taken for acquiring further information on the subject. The attention of the committee has also been directed to gun-cotton; but their proceedings in this branch of the inquiry have been confined to a few tentative trials with gun-cotton cartridges, modified in various ways to obtain velocity and regularity equal to what are given by the service cartridge.

In the case of Newspapers, Books, &c., the prepayment of the postage is compulsory. Parcels must not in any case exceed 5 lbs. in weight, or be of greater dimensions than twenty-four inches in length, and twelve inches in width or depth.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

HYDERABAD OR SECUNDERABAD FOR A TERMINUS?—The Pioneer discusses the question whether Hyderabad or Secunderabad shall be the terminus for the Hyderabad Railway. "Both have claims, but there ought to be no doubt as to which has the greater. Secunderabad is, of course, the English nominee, but if policy and, we may almost say, good faith are to have any weight in deciding the matter, Hyderabad should at once be declared as the terminus elect. Sir Salar Jung has done too much for us, yielded too much to us, to allow us to hesitate in complying with his natural wish that the capital of the State should be the terminus of the railway. We are sorry that the dispute ever began, and still more sorry that it was not crushed at the outset on the sole responsibility of the Chief Commissioner of Mysore, and without any trip to Calcutta to consult with the Viceroy."

CHALLENGE to the WORLD.—The Bristol Daily Times and Mirror, August 5th, has the following:—"Messrs. J. C. Swan and Co., of 16, Queen-square, in this city, have invented a pocket microscope, which is a marvel in all that such an instrument should be. It has great power, remarkable definition, and does not require focussing. The cheapness of the article will make it exceedingly popular when its merits are more widely known. It is called the 'Bristol Microscope,' and is a great credit to the inventor, as much for its extreme simplicity as its power."—The Western Daily Press says:—"The Bristol Microscope has a magnifying power of 20,000 times," &c., &c.—The Western Daily Telegraph says:—"The Bristol Microscope is the most compact and useful scientific instrument we have ever seen; it possesses extraordinary power, and is very easily managed," &c. The price of the Bristol Microscope is only 2s., or, free by post, with printed directions, for twenty-eight stamps.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 900 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA.—

The Medical Profession for thirty years have approved of this pure Solution of Magnesia as the best remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion; and as the best mild aperient for delicate constitutions, for Ladies, Children, and Infants; and for REGULAR Use in Warm Climates.

DINNEFORD and Co., Chemists, 172, New Bond-street, London; and of all other Chemists throughout the World. N.B.—Ask for Dinneford's Magnesia.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

SORE THROAT.—There is in our variable clime no complaint more common than this; few more annoying or more troublesome to cure when neglected. The moment there is any hoarseness or any cough, the part affected, after fomentation with salt water, should be briskly rubbed with a piece of new flannel, to open the pores for absorbing the Ointment, to be instantly applied. The most obstinate sore throat or cough will disappear before this treatment. It would always be as well while treating the disease externally with the Ointment, to take a course of the Pills, which would give tone to the system, and expedite and confirm the cure.

BREAKFAST—GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA.

The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills."

Each Packet is tin-lined, and labelled "James Epps and Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London."

J. E. and Co. also prepare the above Cocoa with Condensed Milk. Sold in Tins, labelled "Epps's Milky Cocoa."

J. E. and Co. also prepare Epps's Cacaoine, a very thin evening drink, and Epps's Milky Cacaoine.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. WOOD stated that Dr. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, being the Inventor was deliberately untrue, which he regretted had been sworn to. Eminent Hospital Physicians of London stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the discoverer of Chlorodyne; that they prescribe it largely, and mean no other than Dr. Browne's.—See Times, July 12, 1864.

The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

This INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which it is found eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec. 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered the patient recovered.

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

Beware of spurious and dangerous compounds sold as CHLORODYNE, from which frequent fatal results have followed.

See leading article, Pharmaceutical Journal, Aug. 1, 1869, which states that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the Inventor of Chlorodyne; that it is always right to use his preparation when Chlorodyne is ordered.

CAUTION.—None genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle.

HILL-HOUSE COLLEGE, HAVERFORDWEST, SOUTH WALES.

The MISSES PHILPOTT (successors to the late Miss DAVIES) beg to call the attention of Parents, Guardians, and others interested in Education, to the above Establishment for Young Ladies, which has been patronised by Indian Parents for more than half a century. The College is situated in a most salubrious part of the country, near the sea-side, considered peculiarly adapted to the constitution of children born in India.

The MISSES PHILPOTT have resided for many years both in France and Germany, and have obtained Diplomas from Foreign Examiners. They are deeply impressed with the responsibility incurred in the training of the young, and endeavour to instil into the minds of their Pupils the highest principles, whilst imparting to them a brilliant and well-grounded Education.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, December 24; Agra, December 22; Calcutta, December 21; and Madras, December 22.

THESE dates have a certain significance. Hitherto Madras has generally been a day further from Bombay than Calcutta. Now the tables are turned with the development of railway lines across Southern India, and Madras sends us news a day later than that from Calcutta.

THE Indian papers contain no very important news. Lady Mayo rejoined her husband at Calcutta on the 19th December. The Viceroy was to hold a levee on the 27th, and her Ladyship a drawing-room on the 28th of the same month. Lord Napier and his staff reached Allahabad on the night of the 20th December, and Calcutta two or three days later. Sir Seymour Fitzgerald spent a week from the 14th to the 21st at Rajkote, amidst a goodly gathering of two hundred and sixty-two chiefs and gentry of Kattywar. His Excellency's Durbar on the 14th was thronged with brilliant costumes of every hue, set off with a dazzling halo of rich jewellery. After their reception the Rajah of Bhownuggur's minister read the Address, which congratulated Sir Seymour on the completion of the Rajkoomar College—first projected by Colonel Keatinge for the young princes and chiefs of Kattywar. The Governor's reply complimented his hearers on having been the first in India to come forward of their own free will and found a college for their children and children's children with their own purses. He urged them to carry the good work yet further, by seeing that their children were removed betimes to the healthy atmosphere of a public school from the enervating influences of the zenana and the unwholesome teaching of Court flatterers.

THE Rajkoomar College was opened on the 17th in great state by the Governor of Bombay. After an explanatory address from the Resident, Colonel Anderson, his Excellency enlarged to the assembled chiefs on the superior advantages of public to private schooling. The charge of the new college, which can only at present hold twenty-five boys, was then formally made over to Mr. Peile, Director of Public Instruction, who accepted it in a long speech contrasting the past troubles with the present peacefulness of Kattywar. It is believed that the college will enter on its first term with fifteen pupils, including two apiece from Bhownuggar, Rajkote, Morvee and Limree. Mr. Chester Macnaghten, the chosen head of the college, was still on his way from Benares, but would probably arrive at Rajkote by the first week in January.

ACCORDING to the Pioneer the Indian Government has resolved to established an experimental sanitarium for the Central Provinces in the Puchmarrie Hills, on a spot selected last autumn. Huts for two hundred men are at once to be erected, so as to be ready for inhabiting in the next hot weather. The spot selected is only forty miles from the Bunkerry station of the G. I. P. Railway, and one hundred and twenty miles from Jubbulpore. Should it prove equal to present expectations, it could easily be made habitable for at least two regiments.

SIR W. GREY'S Committee appear to have decided the question of the new education cess with small regard for the interests of the class who are intended to reap most advantage from it. They propose to levy three-fourths of the cess—about 1§ per cent.—from the ryots, and only the remaining fourth from the zemindars, who, it is pleaded, have for the most part become "mere annuitants." The zemindars will also be empowered to recover the cess from the ryots, who by all accounts have already reached the condition of a dry sponge. The only member of the Committee who differed from his colleagues was Mr. Bell, Legal Remembrancer for Bengal, who considered that the cultivators "ought not to have been saddled with the greater portion of the rate."

A PUBLIC meeting, largely attended by natives of every class and race, has been held in Bombay, to discuss the raising of a fitting memorial to the widely lamented Maharajah of Kolapore. A Hindoo gentleman with the polysyllabic name of Venayekrao Jagannathjee Sunkersett took the chair, and Dr. Bhau Daji opened the subject in a Marâthi speech enlarging on the virtues and accomplishments of the dead prince, and embodying the regret felt by all around him at his untimely end. A committee of leading natives was finally appointed to collect subscriptions for a memorial to be raised in the city of Bombay.

ANOTHER of the old Company's European Regiments has just received its farewell commemoration from the Indian Government, before starting on its homeward voyage. The 103rd Royal Bombay Fusiliers was for nearly two centuries known in India as the Bombay European Regiment. A King's Regiment before 1662, it dates its long career of service under the Company from the first occupation of Bombay as an English settlement. From 1720 to the downfall of the Company's rule, the regiment saw much and varied service in many parts of India, now engaged in the storming of Surat in 1750, anon helping Clive to win Plassey, and again appearing among the conquerors of Seringapatam. Part of it fought against the French at Pondicherry and Mahe. It helped to rout the Mahrattas at Kirkee and the Arabs at Beni-boo-Ali. In the Punjab campaign, as the 1st Bombay Fusiliers, it gained fresh laurels at Moultan and Goojrat, and during the Mutiny it helped to overawe revolt in the important stations of Mooltan and Ferozepore. With so long and brilliant a career indicated on its colours, the 103rd Fusiliers may well take its place beside the most distinguished regiments of the service to which it has of late years been restored.

DR. R. F. THOMPSON has again been urging the Agricultural Society in Calcutta to help him in his scheme for utilising the stalks of the cotton plant. As far back as 1863 he drew the Society's attention to the value and quality of the fibre obtained from these stalks by "the crude and simple process" which the natives employ in the manufacture of jute. He has now forwarded for their inspection a sample of the fibre and of the "gunny" cloth made therefrom in the Hooghly jail. This cloth he pronounces equal, both in texture and durability, to "the best cloth manufactured from fine jute." Each beegah of cotton would yield, he thinks, two maunds of fibre fit for turning into coarse cloth at a very trifling expense, while the net profit to the cultivator from utilising what is now burnt for manure would be very large. After removing the fibre the stalks could still be used for fuel. When cleaned, the fibre has a glossy appearance, and the Doctor is confident that a fair trial of its merits would ensure it a ready market in Manchester. With regard to the quality of the fibre submitted as a sample, a committee of the Society speak less approvingly than Dr. Thompson. One of the members considers it equal only to "a middling quality of jute," and ranks the gunny made from it with the cloth that might be made from jute fibre worth about Rs. 4-8 a maund. Another would rank the cotton-fibre with "very low quality jute," and both report of it as lacking the strength and colour of the finer kinds of jute. It appears that the question of utilising cotton-stalks has never been mooted in India except by Dr. Thompson. In America however it was taken up in 1854 by a Mr. Schaeffer, who, in spite of acknowledged hindrances to the making of fibre out of the hard and coarse cotton-bark, still thought it feasible to fall back upon it for "a partial supply of the commoner kinds of paper."

FROM the Trade, Navigation, and Customs' Returns of Bengal for 1869-70, it appears that the trade of that year fell off considerably on the whole from the figures of the year before. With America and the Mauritius the trade, both import and export, had declined, free imports from the former alone excepted. There was a marked decline in the import trade with Great Britain, France, the Mediterranean, China, and other parts of Asia. Both in exports and imports however Germany shows an advance. Australia imported more than ever to Calcutta, but the gain on that side was considerably qualified by the decline on the other. In manufactured cotton imports the trade of Bengal fell from £10,368,751 in 1868 to £8,701,288 in 1869. In flax there was a slight, in machines and machinery an important decline. The returns from jute, raw silk, gunny-bags, salt, and some other articles showed an improvement; while of opium exported the quantity was greater but the market value less than in the former year. The trade between Bengal and Bombay increased, while that of Bengal with Madras and British Burmah diminished during the year. The total value of the imports of goods and treasure fell from nearly 16 millions sterling to less than 13¾ millions. The exports on the other hand rose from a few thousands below to as many above nine millions. The Customs' export duty fell from £235,362 to £199,070, but the customs' import duty showed an advance of about £80,000 on the £3,136,131 of the year before. The salt-duties showed an increase of £177,171, which secured a balance of £31,834 on the right side of the Customs' sheet.

THERE appears to be every reason for expecting a handsome surplus in the revenue accounts for the current official year. At the end of the first six months of the year the receipts amounted to £22,358,943, or more than a million beyond those of the corresponding six months in 1869. The expenditure for the same period was only £18,369,556, or nearly a million less than the expenditure for the same period of 1869. There was thus a balance to the good of £2,146,583. Unless the accounts for the latter half of the year unexpectedly reverse the picture thus suggested, there ought to be a large surplus at the end of March, sufficient to justify the Indian Government in making a wise concession to the popular feeling against certain forms of taxation.

THE late Sir Henry Durand had so full a record to show of distinguished services, that there was no need to credit him with the exploits of other people. His share in the storming of Ghuznee was a little less than some of the obituary notices made it out. Lord Keane, in a letter to the Times, has plainly asserted—what he ought to know—that it was not Captain Durand but his senior officer, Colonel Thompson, who first conceived "the brilliant idea of blowing in the gate of Ghuznee." A reference to the histories of that time shows that the party told off to lay the powder-bags and blow up the gate was commanded by Captain Peat, of the Bombay Engineers, with Durand and Macleod for his subalterns. To Durand was entrusted the perilous duty of firing the train, which he discharged, says Lord Keane, "with great coolness and self possession, being fully exposed to the enemy's fire from the ramparts while he applied the match to the hose, which he had some difficulty in getting alight." Lord Napier again was not quite accurate in saying, at the Lahore banquet of May last, that Durand "arrested the bugle which would have sounded the retreat." The retreat, it appears, was actually sounded by order of Captain Peat, who had been struck down and stunned into temporary bewilderment by the explosion. But Durand's promptitude soon remedied the mistake, and Dennie's bold stormers in another moment were inside the gate.

THE fortune of war has prevented M. Garcin de Tassy from delivering his usual address to his pupils in Paris. But it has not debarred him from taking his annual survey in forty-eight printed pages of all that concerns the Indian Languages and Literature during the past year. Several pages are rightly devoted to the progress of the Brahmo Somaj and the visit to England of its great leader, Keshub Chunder Sen. Other pages note the progress of the never-ending controversy between the friends of Urdu and Hindi. The Indian Government receives high praise for its resolve to encourage vernacular education in preference to English. Sir W. Muir and Bishop Milman are specially complimented for their facility in speaking good Hindustani. Everything noticeable in the literary history of the year in India finds its fitting place in the worthy French Professor's comprehensive survey. The same may be said of every event or movement bearing on the mental education of the people. We hope with him that the founding of an Oriental University in Lahore will not be delayed beyond the present year.

ANYTHING that Mr. I. T. Prichard may have specially to say about India ought to be worth hearing on one ground or another. We may therefore without further excuse or preface inform our readers that he proposes to give a lecture at the Russell Institution, Great Coram-street, at eight P.M. of the 23rd inst., on "The Commercial and Political Value to England of her Indian Empire."

MILITARY FURLOUGHS.—The following officers have obtained furlough to Europe and leave of absence, on medical certificate, under the rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified (in December):—Captain L. Russell, S.C., political assistant, Kattywar, for two years. Captain S. S. Dalmahoy, general list, Bombay infantry, attached to the 7th Regiment N.I. Major A. W. Graham, S.C., examiner pay department, on private affairs for two years from Jan. 28. Lieut. col. H. W. H. Cox, Bengal S.C., for two years. Lieut. col. W. T. Bowen, staff corps, second in command 3rd Regt. N.I., on private affairs, for two years from date of departure in March. Major J. T. Hill, staff corps, wing officer 14th Regt. N.I., on private affairs, for two years from date of departure in March. Surgeon W. Niven, M.D., superintendent Colaba Lunatic Asylum, on private affairs, for two years from date of departure in March. Major C. E. Naylor, staff corps, is allowed leave of absence from Nov. 28 to Dec. 31 last.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, January 17, 1871.

FANCY STATESMANSHIP.

The Friend of India has a delightfully offhand way of settling the gravest questions, without regard to surrounding possibilities. It is ready to take the field against Russia at a moment's warning. There is plenty of time between now and the spring to prepare a counter-stroke against Russian aggressiveness. Let us form "in the vicinity of Bombay" a camp of 50,000 men. We had the impression that the massing of so many troops near Bombay was about as feasible as a successful sortie of a hundred thousand men from any one point out of Paris. But our contemporary perhaps knows better. Then, with a force of 20,000 English and about 40,000 "northern sepoys, Sikhs, Pathans, and Goorkhas," and a British fleet to back them, Turkey would be enabled "to hold the frontier against long odds." The imagination can take long flights over all barriers of time and place; but this is a very long flight indeed. We are not told how these forty thousand sepoys would make their way to the Turkish frontier—possibly in balloons of the newest invention, which would take but a single bound from the Suliman range to the Balkan. The Turk, meanwhile, "must work, and fortify, and strengthen himself all this winter;" a piece of advice which ought to be despatched by special telegram to Constantinople, where the wily Russian is even now persuading the honest Turk to join him in settling the Black Sea Question between themselves alone. Then, "with Turkey intact, and the waters of the Baltic and Black Seas English ponds, the Russian would be foiled." No doubt he would, and we hope that Mr. Gladstone and Lord Mayo will at once take the necessary steps to carry out this formidable and well-considered programme. It would of course be quite easy to send off to the Balkan a third of our native army, properly equipped with Brown Besses and old smoothbore field-pieces, to teach the Russian how little he can gain by rousing the British Lion from his long slumber. And the final result of all these movements, the turning of the Black Sea into a British pond, would be an event which all right-minded statesmen should spare no effort to accomplish. Russia indeed might look on the naval occupation of the sea that washes her own shores as a standing insult to her national pride, and even Turkey might object to obliterate herself for our benefit. But trifles like these count for nothing beside the paramount duty of guarding our Eastern possessions by blocking up a road which cannot possibly lead a Muscovite foe to India.

THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

If any argument was needed to justify the establishment of a Civil Engineering College for recruiting the Public Works Department of India, it has been supplied in abundance by the results of Lord Mayo's inquiry into the misdeeds of that department at Allahabad. Nothing that was ever said against it by the Indian Press could be more damning than the two State papers in which the Government of India has exposed the rottenness of a system which entrusts important works to the charge of officers unqualified by scientific training or physical aptitudes to distinguish good work from bad, or to keep a tight hand on all employed in carrying out the works they were intended to oversee. It only needed these strong official censures to justify the charges repeatedly brought against the department by disinterested observers who chafed under the evils they saw but could not remedy. Some of our readers may have laughed over the satirical sketches of blundering, waste, and unlimited cheating drawn by the author of the Budgepore Chronicles. But his wildest-seeming caricatures hardly exceed the truth as conveyed to us in Lord Mayo's judicial manifesto. Of the many officers concerned with the public works of Allahabad hardly one escapes the censure due to neglect of duty, while several are convicted of utter incompetence, to the extent in one case of not knowing the simplest principles of carpentry. And if those at Allahabad are thus condemned, what reason is there to assume that similar shortcomings may not have occurred in many other stations? If such proofs of ignorance and peculation abound in the capital of the North-West Provinces, what chance is there of finding honesty and professional skill in the smaller stations? Surrounded by a swarm of cheating contractors and corrupt baboos, even the ablest and most upright of engineer officers will find himself hard bestead to do his duty and keep his place. If he is upright but incompetent, he becomes the easy tool of those around him. In a recent number of the Friend of India appears an extract from a letter written to a friend by a young Public Works officer. "I am dreadfully busy," he says, "letting contracts and settling things for the next year. I am surrounded by thieves. A system is being gradually unravelled which shows that bribery and extortion exist through all the native employés. I am sanguine of catching them. It is very sickening to know that those about you are thieves and rogues." The letter containing this passage bore signs, we are told, of having been opened. We greatly fear that the brave young writer is too sanguine. Before he succeeds in unravelling this web of corruption, he will probably find himself transferred under questionable circumstances to another subdivision. The thieves around him will hatch a plot for his removal, and he will be lucky if they should not carry their revenge to the length of swearing away his character for honesty and competent skill. It is not always easy to unmask corruption even in England, but in India the task becomes Herculean, and the victory in such a struggle too often rests with the wrong side. If a Metcalfe or an Outram gets nearly shipwrecked in exposing the misdeeds of native officialdom, what chance has a brave young Engineer in an outlying station of dealing successfully with so tough a Hydra? Let him learn of some easygoing senior to hold his tongue and close his eyes upon the surrounding rottenness, and all things will go well with him in his little world. His superiors will hear the best reports of him, he will rise from office to office with easy steps, and a crowd of sorrowing natives will stand beside his open grave, when he shall have passed away happy in the consciousness of never having made an enemy by an undue preference of his employers' interests to his own.

It is worth noting that most of the officers censured by Lord Mayo belong to the Staff Corps. How they all managed to pass through Roorkee, where the regular course includes a good deal of practical work, followed by a searching final examination, is a mystery which still remains to clear up. Some of them who might once have been fairly competent appear to have retained their post after age or ill-health had disqualified them for active work. But the whole number of staff corps and regimental officers in the Public Works Department is now very small compared with that of the Civil Engineers, who have increased in twenty-five years from two or three to five hundred and thirty-three. Most of these have been added to the service since 1859, when the system of sending out certificated young men from England was first tried by Lord Stanley. That system however has proved an egregious failure. In spite of an easy examination few men as a rule competed, and the vacancies were usually in excess of the successful candidates. Last year, for instance, twenty-seven appointments out of forty were left unfilled, and twenty out of forty in 1869. Thirty-eight out of eighty lapsed in 1868, and nine out of twenty-five the year before. It is almost needless to add that even of the successful candidates a large proportion have never proved quite "worthy of their salt." Having once gone out to India, there they remain, hard bargains, on the hands of a Government which has not the heart to turn them adrift, even when it has the power. As for sending out older and more experienced engineers, who knew nothing of the country and would supersede younger men already rising in the department, that experiment was soon discontinued. Nothing therefore remained but the adoption of a system which, as Colonel Chesney has pointed out, involves a radical change less in the principal than the practical outcome of the system started in 1859. That system failed not so much from its inherent defects, though these were not small, as from its not being thoroughly carried out. The young men who passed at home were seldom if ever obliged to go through the prescribed examinations at Roorkee. Henceforth both the initial and final tests will be undergone in this country, tests so devised as to ensure India a regular supply of about fifty trained engineers yearly. In three years or less, according to circumstances, the students of the new Engineering College will have gone through a training, theoretic and practical, severe enough to meet all possible requirements, and more practically complete than the usual training of a civil engineer in England. This has hitherto been the only country in Europe where civil engineers receive no systematic training for the most useful of modern careers. The new College will combine the methods of the Continent with the practical cleverness gained at home. There is of course an outcry against establishing a Government College when several training colleges already exist; and this objection has once more been advanced by representatives of the London University. But the India Office will do well to disregard a groundless and misleading clamour.

That the new scheme will work well we have little doubt, provided that a sufficient number of qualified candidates yearly take their place in College. If the charges for instruction be found too high, it will be easy to readjust them at any time. If the present scale of Indian salaries fail to tempt young adventurers, it will not be hard to modify that also. But if only the scheme should work, we may well hope soon to hear the last of blundering and neglect of duty like that revealed by the Allahabad inquiries. Lord Mayo has done India a service which will go far to obliterate from many minds the dislike produced by his support of Sir Richard Temple. The new college will help to render similar miscarriages less possible in the future. But more yet is needed to secure the thorough efficiency of the Public Works Department. Much of what seems like neglect of duty may fairly be ascribed to overpressure of detailed work. A Public Works officer under existing rules is saddled with too many conflicting responsibilities. The same man is entrusted for instance with the supervision of field work and the keeping of accounts—an unwise arrangement which inevitably provokes miscarriage and shortcomings. If Lord Mayo would set the crown to his late achievements, he will insist on a thorough reorganisation of the department, in order that clerks' work may be done by clerks and secretaries, not by officers of engineers. Until this is done and the accounts specially supervised by well-paid officials, the old concert of cheating contractors and corrupt baboos will never receive its death blow.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

The Friend of India holds that the Governor-General's condemnation of the Public Works Department officers at Allahabad is in reality addressed to the Department all over India, and is almost startling in its thoroughness. Eventually the Public Works Department will have to be reconstituted. There is no excuse in the world for such work as this, now once more before the public, with about as severe a reprimand as ever was given to any public department in India. It is pure nonsense to say that a building cannot be erected with absolute certainty of its stability, unless in case of earthquake or some other casualty beyond human control. A few good English builders could make every building secure; only the worst of it is that English workmen would not be three weeks in India without beginning to strut, and forget how to use tools. One sees such men in London run up in a few weeks a street of brick houses, like mere shells for the most part, but knit together, nevertheless, so that they do not tumble about the workmen's ears. The contractors are looked to with the zeal of self-interest, and bad work does not pay the workmen. Why should not our Government in India see to the thoroughness of the work discharged by officers of the Public Works Department? Let the charges incurred for any great work, and the quality of the work itself, be reported upon by special officers (unconnected with the works) appointed by Government, and we shall have a real check. Was it necessary to go from Calcutta to Allahabad to find a blot? Would not the new High Court in course of building at Calcutta itself have justified even harder words against the Public Works Department?

INDIAN FINANCE.

The Indian Daily News thinks that the question as to whether the expenditure which is required to carry on extensive public works ought to be provided out of the current revenues of the Empire, or would more properly be provided by terminable loans, has been very unwisely hampered in some recent discussions on the subject, by accidental considerations arising out of the present embarrassed state of our finances. All that a financial crisis can appropriately lend to the discussion of so important a question of political economy is a grave earnestness, which is determined to effect the radical cure of a serious disease; but we apprehend that neither the present financial crisis, nor any earnestness which it may engender in the minds of the public, can logically be forced into supplying abstract arguments in the discussion of the question to which we have referred above. Whether terminable loans or the current revenues ought to provide the necessary funds, the solution of the question will be the same, whether India is solvent or insolvent. The solvency or insolvency of the State must necessarily affect her credit in the market if the State should go into the market for a loan; but what we mean now to say is that neither solvency nor insolvency will have anything to do with deciding whether it is right and wise to borrow the money or not. The most powerful argument that has been urged against a policy of terminable loans is that it is difficult to restrain it within reasonable limits, and that such a policy, which is not unlikely, when once adopted, to be carried into excess, is calculated to burden posterity with burdens which posterity would not have willingly assumed, and which might seriously hamper its action in any future financial crisis. But this argument can scarcely be called unanswerable. The proper limits of a borrowing policy are those suggested by the determination to preserve a fair proportion between the burdens and the advantages which one generation bequeaths to another. There is no reason why the present generation alone should pay for advantages which can only be fully enjoyed hereafter, and there are numerous reasons why posterity should bear at least some portion of the burden created by material improvements, which cannot arrive at full maturity until the generation which has designed them has passed away. The adjustment of the proportions, in which the present and the future should respectively pay for advantages, which will benefit the future far more than they can ever benefit the present generation, no doubt involves a most interesting and delicate calculation; but we fail to see that this calculation is at all beyond the capacities of trained financiers; and we have yet to learn that Indian finance should continue to be the laughing-stock of the world, because an obstructive and short-sighted policy has hitherto deprived India of the services of financiers for whom she can afford to pay, and of whom she so sadly stands in need. We have ruined at least one able administrator, in order to make a ridiculous Finance Minister, while at his feet are lying sources of wealth, which it only needs a master-hand to coax into guaranteeing the future and permanent solvency of Indian finance.

GENERAL CUNNINGHAM'S RETURN AS ARCHÆOLOGIST.

The Times of India learns that the re-appointment of General A. Cunningham, as archæologist to the Government of India, recommended by H.E. the Viceroy, has been confirmed by the Secretary of State, and this very distinguished historian and antiquarian was to leave England by the first mail steamer in December. Since the discovery, within very recent times, that the Sanskrit-speaking races of India were an offshoot of the same parent tree from which the Indo-Germanic family of peoples sprung, the ancient history of India, with the cognate studies, archæology, numismatology, and every branch of scientific enquiry which tends to illustrate the condition of the people, and to improve our knowledge of them, has been invested with an importance which has given this subject an interest almost world-wide in its extent. The field, however, is so broad, and demands such special and varied accomplishments in an investigator, that to find a man competent to fill such an appointment as that now reconstituted, with credit to himself and benefit to the country, is, if not impossible, the next thing to it. Indeed, so convinced are we of the reality of this difficulty, that were it not we are equally satisfied that in General Cunningham the requirements of this office will be fulfilled in the highest degree, we should not feel disposed to approve of an appointment of the kind at the present moment. On the general ground of the very high rate now to be paid for the appointment, we have demurred to the figure granted by the Government of India; but there are exceptional reasons which may excuse this payment to the General as being somewhat akin to compensation. Under the circumstances we congratulate Lord Mayo and the Duke of Argyll most highly on their having again secured for this country the services of an officer, who, in his speciality, is facile princeps, and whose labours were bearing such rich fruits when they were suddenly arrested in 1866. Indeed, we consider this reconstruction of the appointment of archæologist to the Government of India as a triumph of statesmanship as well as of science, over narrow-mindedness—we had almost said, stinginess—as indicated in the policy of Lord Lawrence. It was Lord Lawrence who was responsible, or almost wholly responsible, for the stoppage of General Cunningham's researches. His Council, or a considerable number of them, believed in the advantage of such an appointment to the country, and it was his casting vote which abolished it. Lord Lawrence was essentially what is called a "practical" man. He could not understand that an object of State policy would be advanced by spending any portion of the revenues of the country in inquiries regarding its history and antiquities. He has been known to express the opinion that the study of such subjects by Government officers was so much time wasted, which otherwise might have been devoted to the public service.

NATIVE TROOPS ON FOREIGN SERVICE.

The Madras Times wonders that the question has never been thought worthy of consideration, as to why the supplementary charge of a native regiment, when employed on foreign service—as it is usually termed—i. e., garrisoning spots either in Burmah or the Straits, should cost the Government the sum they do annually. The amount debited as passage money for men sent back to the coast on sick leave would lead one to believe that all our garrisons across the water must be blessed with most unhealthy climates; and this belief would be confirmed were the returns of the number of men sent away on sick leave from a regiment immediately on its return to the coast looked through. In some instances 12 per cent. of [the men of corps have been returned to the coast sick; and as many as 25 per cent. sent away on sick leave on the return of a regiment itself! Are the several climates in which Madras troops serve abroad alone liable for this very large percentage of sick; or are there not other causes which tend very materially to plant the seeds of disease, which the climate may eventually bring to maturity? We hear the same statement made by medical officers in Burmah as in the Straits, namely, that the climate is damp and feverish, and ill-adapted to the native soldier, who cannot stand the exposure it falls to his lot to undergo whilst on duty. The description of the climates of the Straits and Burmah is perhaps in the abstract correct; but what more can be said in favour of Cannanore, Mangalore, or Mercara? We have native troops quartered at all these stations, and the sick leave granted in any twelve months to the whole of them would not equal the number of cases of one regiment across the water. The troops garrisoning these stations in some instances live in wretched little hovels, whilst those abroad have splendid barracks, built either of masonry or wood, well raised, cook-rooms, and all other conveniences. Each man has a cot to himself, no crowding, the regulated cubical space per man being most jealously guarded. The sepoy in India, in the receipt of say Rs. 10-8 a month, pay and rice money together, has to feed himself, and perhaps four or five others, whilst his confrere over the water receives a liberal daily ration from Government, and after all deductions from his pay has always some ready cash wherewith to purchase extras. From the foregoing comparisons, the sepoy abroad is in a much better way than a sepoy at home so far as regards bodily comforts. Why then should there be such a difference between them as to health under, in some cases, almost similar circumstances of climate? That the climate of Burmah or the Straits is not alone to blame is deducible from the well-known fact that a very large proportion of non-military individuals, such as come under the denomination of camp followers, after having once been at Rangoon, Penang, or Singapore, are only too glad to return there when an opportunity offers; whilst very many prefer settling there altogether to returning to India. Something other than the climate, then, must be looked for, which tends to effect that general breakdown in the health of our native troops serving across the water, rendering the sepoy for the time being a very expensive burden to the Government he serves. All those who have served abroad twice or thrice with native troops will almost without exception agree that the very rations which the Government supply gratis to the sepoy for his benefit are the cause, as the sepoy starves on them! And why? Not because the allowance is stinted—far from it—but simply because it is too much! The ration instead of being consumed as intended, is sold by the sepoy, who remits the proceeds either to his family direct, or lodges it in the Government Savings Bank. Government almost offers a premium for this state of things, as a sepoy on foreign service may remit as much money as he pleases each month, either as a privilege remittance, or by lodgments in the Savings Bank. A fourth-class private, for instance, whose pay and batta together amount to Rs. 8-8-0, will usually grant a family certificate for Rs. 6-0-0 to his relatives on embarkation, leaving him Rs. 2-0-0 a month to receive after regimental deductions. Such a one will often bring as much as twenty rupees at one time to be remitted for him to his family, besides perhaps now and again lodging money in the bank; so that a man receiving but Rs. 24-0-0 per annum in cash will remit one way and another in the same period sixty or eighty rupees, thereby reducing the proverb ex nihilo nihil fit to an absurdity! A notable instance in support of this is that in which two companies of a regiment lately returned from foreign service did lodge in the course of two years in the Government Savings Bank Rs. 6,371-0-0.

UNEMPLOYED FIELD OFFICERS.

The Madras Times holds that, if the organisation of the new reserves is to be anything like what we hear proposed in the periodical literature and holiday speeches of the day they will offer a wide field of employment for those field officers of the Indian Army of whom we have at present a superfluity in India, and supposing that the services of these officers could be utilised by the British Government in the reserve forces upon a scale of pay and allowances ranging from £200 to £400 per annum, we apprehend that the Indian Government would act both wisely and economically in urging the severance of their connection with India, by the concession to each of an annuity of £400 a-year. Considering that the officers mentioned mulct the Government of India, in each individual instance, of incomes ranging from £800 to £1,000 per annum, and that they have only to live long enough to enjoy a pension of £1,200 a-year from the Indian revenues, we cannot consider an annuity of £400 an excessive douceur to precipitate their retirement from a service which can find them no employment worthy of their rank or professional status. An annuity of £400 per annum, admitting it granted, would scarcely induce many field officers to leave the service; but if we suppose that employment in the reserves would increase this income by two or three hundred a-year, we have little doubt that the scheme would not fail for want of officers. In fact, we are of opinion that there is scarcely a field officer of the Indian army unemployed who would not eagerly lend his aid towards its execution. It may be said that, with General Hannyngton's calculations staring us in the face, it is idle and unprofitable to propose pecuniary inducements to retirement; but, putting aside the undoubted advantages which England must gain from the utilisation of the services of skilled officers in her reserves, we think we may fairly say that the gallant general's calculations are fallacious, since up to date they have most certainly disproved themselves. The reorganisation of the British reserves, to our mind, offers a very favourable opportunity of relieving India of at least a portion of the field officer incubus, and we shall be glad if the Governments in England and India seize the opportunity, which is not likely to occur soon again, of turning the present unprofitable services of superfluous Indian officers to good account in the British reserves.

RAILWAY ROBBERIES.—For some time past, says the Pioneer, robberies from passengers' luggage have been constantly occurring on the East Indian Railway. From what we have heard, the modus operandi appears to be this:—"During a run between two stations at above the average distance from each other, the guard opens some promising looking packages, and carefully inspects their contents. Anything in the way of cash, jewellery, articles of vertu, or other valuable property, which is sufficiently portable to be put into the guard's box, is abstracted; the package is then carefully refastened, and delivered to the unsuspecting owner at the journey's end—the theft in most instances remaining undiscovered till the traveller reaches his home, long after all responsibility on the part of the railway company has ceased. The other day a robbery of this kind was committed, a native passenger's box being relieved of several hundreds of rupees. Suspicion fell on the guard, a warrant was obtained to search his house, and a quantity of jewellery and valuables found, some of which corresponded exactly with the description given by Mr. Stuart Hogg of some jewellery stolen from his luggage between Jubbulpore and Calcutta about a year ago. The guard is in custody, and will shortly be brought up for trial in the Joint-Magistrate's Court."

Bengal.

ARRIVALS.—Lady Mayo, the Hon. Maurice Bourke, Sir Percy, Lady, and Mr. Burrell, arrived in Calcutta on the morning of Dec. 19, accompanied by Captain Lockwood, A.D.C.

NAVAL.—H.M.S. Forte, with Admiral Cockburn on board, goes to Calcutta, where arrangements will be made for carrying out the Admiralty scheme of taking over all the armed duties of the Indian seas.

REWARD OF MERIT.—The Viceroy has, as a personal distinction, conferred the title of Khan Bahadoor on Sheik Inait Hossein, Assistant Magistrate and Assistant Judge of the Small Cause Court at Secunderabad, in recognition of his long and valuable services to the British Government.

UNIVERSITY.—His Excellency the Viceroy in Council, as Chancellor of the University of Calcutta, has appointed Dr. Kannye Lall Dey a Fellow of the University. This gentleman, the first of Indian chemists, has fairly earned the distinction the Chancellor has conferred upon him.

POST-OFFICE.—On the recommendation of the Director-General of the Post-office of India, the Government of India has sanctioned the separation of the Post-office in Oude from the offices of the North-Western Provinces. They are each to be placed under a Chief Inspector, as in the Central Provinces, British Burma, and Sindh. The salary of this officer, it is said, will be Rs. 600 a-month.

FISCAL.—"In one instance at least," remarks the Calcutta Examiner, "the Budget estimate seems to have been falsified on the wrong side. There has been a decrease in the abkaree revenue of the North-Western Provinces of five lakhs of rupees, as compared with last year, and of six as compared with the estimate for this. The circumstance is not, however, as it might at first sight appear, a triumph for the teetotallers, for the reduced consumption of strong drinks is attributed entirely to the scarcity of grain."

DEATH RETURNS FOR THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.—During September the deaths in the Central Provinces were 12,789, which for a population of 6,732,447 gives a ratio of 1·8 per thousand; 0·8 of which were females. This shows a higher death-rate than the previous month. The increased mortality is due chiefly to fever. The deaths were 4 from cholera, 127 small-pox, 9,025 fever, 1,783 bowel complaints, 68 suicide, 6 wounds, 139 accidents, 91 by snake bites or wild beasts, and 1,546 from other causes.

TEA.—The Calcutta Tea sales are going off exceedingly well, good teas realising high prices. A single Darjeeling estate, that of Dootereah, received Rs. 1-2-6 and Rs. 1-3-6 per lb. on 493 chests. To understand the full meaning of this we must remember that the tea has yet to be sent home for consumption, and that we are 15,000 or 7,000 miles from home, as we travel by the Cape or by the Suez Canal.—Friend of India.

PUNJAB.—The health of the towns of the Punjab seems to be at last improving, especially as regards Amritsur, Sompal, and Bhiwani—but the districts, more particularly Syalkot, Gurdaspore, Hushiarpore, and Jullundur, still return high death-rates. Small-pox, to which much of the late mortality has been due, appears, we regret to see, to be gaining strength, the increase being most notable in the Shahpore, Jhelum, Gujerat, and Peshawur districts.—Pioneer, Dec. 19.

A NEW NATIVE PAPER.—The Sulva Samachar, a neatly printed weekly vernacular paper, has been started in Calcutta, price one pice, the object of which is "to raise the condition of the poorer classes of the native population, by giving them useful knowledge and interesting news, and endeavouring to redress their grievances by representations to Government." About 2,000 copies are said to have been sold in two days. It is published at the charge of the Indian Reform Association. Three numbers are out, we believe. We wish it success.

KABUL.—The Delhi Gazette says that the Armenian Christians who had been imprisoned by the Amcer of Kabul on suspicion of furnishing news to us have been released, through the intervention of the Rev. Mr. Hughes, of the Peshawur Church Mission. It appears Mr. Hughes wrote to Sirdar Mahomed Hussian Khan, Governor of Kabul, on behalf of one of the prisoners, who was formerly a pupil of his. The Governor, mindful of the hospitality he had received from Mr. Hughes, while a refugee at Peshawur some years ago, at once obtained the release of the Armenians.

TABLE OF PRECEDENCE.—"Months and months ago," says the Pioneer, "Mr. Grant Duff, in answer to a question from Sir Stafford Northcote in the House of Commons, stated that a new table of precedence, which materially improved the status of the officers of the Education Department, had been sent by that mail to India. We have reason to believe that Mr. Grant Duff was speaking the truth, —that the new table of precedence was sent out,—that it was received and quietly pigeon-holed. We will not speculate whether this occurred through pure indolence or through official jealousy. We only state the fact, and express the opinion that somebody ought to be gently 'hanged' for it on either hypothesis."

A HAPPY CONCLUSION.—We are exceedingly glad that a committee, appointed by the Sanata Dharma Rakshini Sabha at Calcutta, have discovered numerous texts in the Shastras to authorise the use of the water supplied by the Calcutta Waterworks, as containing nothing common or unclean! A different conclusion would have been a most serious matter to the Hindoo residents, and no doubt they were fully alive to the necessity of finding the justificatory texts.

OUDE.—The Pioneer refers to the rumour of Oude being converted into a Lieutenant-Governorship as an airy creation. "Some time ago a scheme was discussed for the re-distribution of provinces, involving many important administrative changes, among which, we believe, the project above referred to found a place; but the realisation of the scheme would have called for increased expenditure, and in the face of the deficit was shelved. So Oude is practically almost as far from being made a Lieutenant-Governorship as ever."

ENGLAND IN INDIA FROM A HINDOO POINT OF VIEW.—The Som Prukash in an article on Russia and England, says, that other nations seem to think that the Indians are disaffected towards England, but there can be no greater mistake than this. That there is dissatisfaction is true; but that the rule of Britain should pass away is not the desire of any. It is the dissatisfaction that seeks to prevent arbitrary measures, and to establish a more large-hearted policy. If Russia or Germany depend at all upon our dissatisfaction, they will soon find proof to the contrary. Should there be war with Russia all the inhabitants of India would zealously come forward to support the Government. Let our rulers be forewarned. Instead of distrusting us, let them raise a volunteer corps. Let sepoys have good muskets.

THE DRAINAGE OF CALCUTTA.—Everybody—shall we include our medical men?—has been rejoicing over the extreme healthiness of Calcutta during the past twelve months, but our rejoicings are likely to be of very short duration, if Dr. Chevers is to be believed. Referring to the drainage of the city being allowed to flow into the Salt Water Lakes, the Doctor believes the time is not far distant when the lake will be converted into a vast and stagnant cesspool, the effect of which will be most calamitous to the public health. This is a very alarming fact truly! Two plans have been suggested by which the evil may be prevented. One is the old question of reclaiming the lake, and providing a central channel, properly embanked, which is to be kept clear by steam dredging boats. This is a matter that ought to be seen to at once, or the evils Dr. Chevers anticipates may come upon us much sooner than we anticipate.—Englishman's Saturday Evening Journal.

RAILWAYS.—The traffic receipts of the East India Railway for the week ending 26th November, 1870, were £52,244. 1s. 5d.; corresponding week last year, £51,753. 7s. 7d.; increase, £490. 13s. 10d. From 1st July, 1870, to 26th November, 1870, £904,859. 10s. 10d. From 1st July, 1869, to 28th November, 1869, £834,126. 17s. 10d.; increase, £70,732. 13s. Miles open week ending 26th November, 1870, 1,131½; corresponding week last year, 1,131; increase, one-half. Per mile open week ending 26th November, 1870, £46. 3s. 5d.; corresponding week last year, £45. 15s. 2d.; increase, 8s. 3d.—On the 31st December the Governor-General was to open the Eastern Bengal extension line from Kooshtea to Goalundo. His Excellency would be at the Fancy Fair, which was to be held at the seven tanks on the 2nd January, and was to officiate at the opening of the connecting link between the old terminus at Goraie and the new one at Goalundo.

THE VICEREGAL LEGISLATURE.—The Viceregal Legislative Council met at Calcutta on December 16. The Hon. Mr. Chapman moved that the Bill to authorise the committal of European British subjects by Courts in the Andamans to the High Court at Fort William be passed. In moving this he suggested the following amendment in the Bill:—"That the words, 'other than offences punishable by death in the Indian Penal Code,' in the first section, be omitted." The Bill, as amended, was passed. Mr. Chapman also introduced the Bill to consolidate the law relating to the Emigration of Native Labourers, and moved that it be referred to a select committee, with instructions to report in six weeks. The motion was put and carried. The Hon. Mr. Robinson then moved for leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate the law relating to the manufacture, importation, and sale of arms and ammunition, and the right to keep and use the same. The motion was put and carried. The Council then adjourned.

CHUMBA.—Is it true that over 3,000 subjects of the Rajah of Chumba have left the State, and are on their way to Lahore, there to represent to the Lieutenant-Governor their discontent at the selection of Gopal Singh for the guddee? We are told so, and further, our informant continues, "when they were stopped at the bridge by the guard, they broke down the gates, and a number of them were taken prisoners and flogged in batches of seventeen." Meanwhile, Sir Henry Durand is in Sinde, but on his return we seriously advise him to inquire into this and other rumours of the grievous discontent which is said to prevail throughout the Chumba State in consequence of the late appointment to the raj. That there are grounds for such inquiry there can be no doubt, for we have received from three correspondents—who are unknown to each other, and therefore writing spontaneously and independently—letters asserting in unqualified terms that there really does exist most serious discontent.—Pioneer, Dec. 19.

ILL-TREATMENT OF NATIVES.—There have been great complaints lately of the treatment of the coolies on the chord line Deoghur. On the 28th November Mr. John Irwine Whitty, Resident Engineer, was convicted before the Assistant Commissioner of Deoghur, and fined three rupees, for assaulting and ill-treating a pointsman while on duty. On the 1st December the same gentleman was again convicted before the Assistant Commissioner of Jamtarrah for a similar offence, and fined two rupees; and on the same day Mr. Richard Roberts, Mr. Whitty's inspector, was also fined two rupees for having taken to the same practices. Such convictions as these are discreditable to the management of the East Indian Railway Company, and we are surprised that the Board of Agency has not more control over its servants than to allow such proceedings. We remember a circular issued by the board of directors a few years ago, warning all servants of the railway company against striking and ill-treating natives, and threatening dismissal for such offences. This seems, however, now to be a dead letter.—Friend of India.

THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT IN CALCUTTA.—Apropos of the failures of the Public Works Department, the Indian Daily News revives a story which bears repetition. In 1866 ugly cracks appeared in the pillars and other parts of the Post-office at Calcutta, and the press called general attention to the ominous strangers. The D.P.W. pooh-poohed them for some time, but the public, objecting to this trifling, finally rose to the occasion, and a suggestion appeared in the Government Gazette to the effect that the pillars of the Post-office might be repaired by "something hard being injected into the cracks by means of a squirt!" This suggestion was made by one engineer, endorsed by others, and finally found publicity as above. Time has whirled round a revenge for the public upon "the merry jest" of the D.P.W., and Lord Mayo, using the same Government Gazette as a "squirt," has injected "something hard" into the ugly cracks in the Department. The operation is, however, at best a makeshift, and it is now suggested to his Excellency—what non-professionals suggested to the D.P.W. when the cracks appeared in the Post-office—to "pull down the building and re-build it."

THE MHAIRWARRA BATTALION.—At last! after ten years and more of hope deferred, the Mhairwarra Battalion is to have some sort of justice meted out to it. At present only a police force, from April 1 next, its original military formation will be restored, a re-transformation securing the men an increase of pay,—Rs. 7 per mensem, instead of about Rs. 5¼, if we remember rightly—and we should hope also new uniforms and weapons, suited to the times. These Mhairs, it may not be generally known, are a hill-tribe in Rajpootana, originally reclaimed by us from a state of semi-savageness; their soldierly qualities being additionally valuable in a regiment located among a people for whom, though neighbours, it cherishes a traditional hatred. The Mhairs were mainly instrumental in saving Rajpootana in 1857; they were humoured with high flown promises of reward and advancement at the time—promises subsequently evaded, or rather met by such serious banter, as promoting the men from soldiers to policemen, and lessening their pay! The North-West Government fought their battle again and again, but fruitlessly; and when Lord Mayo visited Ajmere in October, he inspected the battalion and at once determined to right the wrong. Appearances would have been better served by denying the wrong altogether.—Pioneer.

THE POOREE PILGRIMAGE.—Mr. Ravenshaw, commissioner of the Orissa Division, has stated, in decisive terms, to the Government of Bengal his view of the means necessary to secure the country against the "misery, disease, and death" that arise from the annual pilgrimage to Pooree. The number of pilgrims to Juggernath's Shrine is estimated at 50,000, and the disease that they spread is appalling. Mr. Ravenshaw would, in Pooree itself, begin by draining, by cleaning and redigging tanks and wells, and looking very closely to cess-pits and lodging-houses. He would also create new lodging-houses and resting-places on all the roads radiating from Pooree; and many other admirable suggestions are made, and we trust will in some measure be carried out. How, though, is all this work to be done in such a poor country and with such "wretchedly bad times?" The ways and means for making the great pilgrimage passably comfortable to the pilgrims and safe to the community at large Mr. Ravenshaw has carefully drafted out. He is for taxing the pilgrims as of old, and giving them, for their money, comfort, and to some extent immunity from disease. To this he thinks there will be no objection, especially as he would not extend the tax to Pooree itself; the expenses there he would like to see defrayed by the voluntary contributions of wealthy Hindoos, with Government help, so that the tax will not take the form of one on the native religion.

AN INDIAN BIOGRAPHY.—Baboo Kissory Chand Mittra has worthily undertaken what is evidently to him a labour of love. He has set himself the honourable task of rescuing from oblivion the names of India's best and greatest sons—if greatness, at least, be estimated by worth. And in so doing he is creating a durable memorial to himself, and one of the most creditable order. If we mistake not, his memoir of the late Dwarkanath Tagore is the fifth that he has written; and it is certainly not the least interesting. It has also the merit of displaying an impartiality very rarely found in biographies. There is no attempt at depicting the faultless monster the world ne'er saw—no glorification of ordinary qualities—no suppression of the truth in order to make a demigod out of a mortal, chiefly remarkable for great good sense and an inexhaustible benevolence. Of Dwarkanath Tagore it may be truly said that his pity gave ere charity began, but it is satisfactory to know that he had seldom any reason to regret his munificence—a fact that speaks volumes for his just appreciation of character. This little book is written in excellent English, entirely free from exaggeration in ornament, and would do no discredit to a professional litterateur whose vernacular was the English tongue. Messrs. Thacker, Spink, and Co. are also entitled to a word of praise for the workmanlike manner in which they have turned out this pleasant and interesting volume.—Englishman.

THE BENGAL CESS.—The report of the Bengal Cess Committee is under the consideration of the Lieutenant Governor. The committee recommends the imposition of a land cess and a house-tax, to the former of which all persons in any way interested in land are to contribute. The rate proposed by the committee is a rate of 4 pie in the rupee on the annual rent of the ryot; of this the ryots are to contribute ¾, and the zemindars ¼. The committee considers that the zemindars being in many cases only annuitants do not derive the same advantage from roads and other improvements as the ryots; and as the responsibility of collecting the cess would fall upon the zemindars, it is thought they could not fairly be asked to pay more than a quarter of the rate. To enable the collector to assess the rate every landholder, whether zemindar or under-tenant, is to file in the collectorate a copy of his collection papers; and if he fails within a stated time to comply with the collector's requisition, he is to be placed under a legal disability to sue for his rent, and pay a fine of Rs. 50 a-day as a punishment for his recusancy. To these proposals Mr. Bell, Legal Remembrancer, has, we believe, recorded a minute of dissent. He has two objections to the committee's scheme. First, he considers that the scheme is impracticable, as the under-tenures in the country are so numerous and small that it would be absolutely impossible for the collectors to assess them all. And when it is remembered that, as stated by the Registrar-General in his last annual report, under-tenures are being created in Bengal at the rate of 50,000 a-year, we can most easily understand what a stupendous work the committee propose to impose upon the collector. It is difficult also to understand how the collector will be able to obtain information to reach under-tenure holders whose names are not entered on the public registry. We believe that Mr. Bell proposed to obviate the difficulty by leaving tenants to be assessed under certain general principles by their landlords. His second objection related to the ryots. He considered that, as they were less able to bear the burden of additional taxation than the zemindars, they ought not to have been saddled with the greater portion of the rate. The general question is now pending the decision of Sir William Grey, and we have no doubt that he will give to the matter the consideration its importance deserves. The proposal of the committee, if we rightly understand it, is unjust to absurdity, and we hope that the entire papers on the subject will speedily be given to the public. A more important subject has rarely been discussed.—Friend of India.

A PAGE OF INDIAN HISTORY.—It is well known that during the Mutiny of 1857 a large number of Government notes passed hands at nominal rates. This was owing to the idea (sedulously circulated by our enemies) that the British rule would never be re-established in India. But even this idea was evidently limited to certain classes, and was not shared by all ranks of the people; for all Government notes readily found purchasers, though the sales were undoubtedly at low rates,—in some instances as low as 20 per cent., and even less. Of all places in India, perhaps the largest number was sold in the city of Lucknow. This was due to exceptional causes. The aristocracy in Oude possessed considerable wealth in notes, and the aristocracy as well as the citizens in Lucknow being Mahommedans, were generally inimical to our rule, and were influenced largely by this feeling to dispose of property, which they were only too willing to believe would be of no value to them hereafter. In the purchase at these rates many amassed large fortunes; in the city of Lucknow alone notes to the value of many lakhs having passed from hand to hand at nominal rates. But the native bankers were the principal dealers. They at least seemed to have realised the true state of affairs. Towards the close of 1857, and in the early part of 1858, when events underwent a sensible change, the rates rose considerably, and even reached as high as 50 and 70 per cent. Some of these sales have been the cause of much litigation, since an important suit was instituted several years ago in the Civil Court of Lucknow for the recovery of certain notes sold during the Mutiny to Sah Bunarsee Dass, the plaintiff being a member of the aristocracy, since dead. It was contended that the notes were sold by his brother, Mokurrum-ood-Dowlah, in collusion with the purchaser. The suit was tried by the late Mr. Fraser, who dismissed the case mainly on the ground of collusion between the plaintiff and his brother, Mokurrum-ood-Dowlah. The Judicial Commissioner affirmed the order of the Civil Judge. On appeal to England the Privy Council reversed the orders of both Courts, and directed the case to be tried on its merits. The case has now therefore been "tried on its merits" by the present Civil Judge of Lucknow. The inquiry, we understand, occupied several days. The points involved are most difficult and involved. The result is that Mr. Lincoln has dismissed the suit again. But there appears to be a difference of opinion between Mr. Capper, who was lately officiating Judicial Commissioner in Oude, and the Civil Judge as to the gist of the case. Mr. Lincoln nevertheless adheres to his former opinion. As the case is now in appeal before Sir George Couper, the Judicial Commissioner, we shall refrain from any remarks on the merits of the suit. But some rather remarkable incidents appear to have come under review during the trial, which deserve to be noticed. The plaintiff appears to have been associated in the rebel cause, and is alleged to have been in the habit of visiting the durbar of the celebrated Mummoo Khan, the incidents connected with whose trial are well known in Oude. Mokurrum-ood-Dowlah, the brother of the plaintiff, is said to have extracted the notes from the kotree, and appropriated them to his own use on the day that the battle of Chinhutt was fought. The English cannon was playing in the streets of Huzrut Gunje a day or so after the last purchase by the deceased Sha Bunarsee Dass. Another curious circumstance is that both the parties to the suit have died since the institution of the suit, and the case is now being fought out by their representatives.—Pioneer.

IMPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Dec. 21.—The past week has been one of considerable quietness, and the tone at closing is very dull. Holders now evince more anxiety to realise, but dealers purchase very sparingly, and only to supply their immediate wants. Grey Shirtings: 8¼ lbs. are wanted at better prices, 6 lbs. and 7 lbs. are very quiet, 8½ lbs. are movable in small quantities under last mail's quotations. 44-inch are not inquired for; 50 to 60-inch are in moderate request. Grey Jaconets: These continue saleable to a fair extent at rates current last mail. Madapollams are still quiet. Mulls: Grey and White 44-inch are in improved demand at former prices. White Shirtings: Low qualities have become rather more saleable, but other Bleached Goods have undergone no change. The Twist Market continues very depressed, prices being in most cases nominal.

EXPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Dec. 21.—Saltpetre: Since the date of our last we have heard of some inquiry for this article, and a fair amount of business has transpired in 5 per cent. refraction at Rs. 7-4 per fy. md. The stock is not much in the market. Rice: There is some demand for Moonghy kinds, and we have heard of some transactions done during the week. In Table and Balliam kinds there is not much doing. Linseed: An active demand has sprung up in market for shipment to America, and a fair amount of business has been done during the week at prices ranging from Rs. 4-4 to Rs. 4-10-6 per md. Rapeseed: This article is much inquired for, but, owing to the paucity of stock, we have heard of no transaction during the week to report. Poppyseed: Since we last wrote a moderate business has transpired at Rs. 4-0 to 4-2 per md. Teelseed: During the week we have heard of very few transactions to report. Jute: There is an active demand for loose Jute, and a fair amount of transactions have been done during the week, but we have heard of no sales in baled Jute, owing to the scarcity and high rates of freight. We quote the prices for low, Rs. 3-13 to 4-2; middling, Rs. 4-8 to 5-8; fine, Rs. 5-12 to 6. Raw Silk: About 23 maunds of common Cossimbazar at Rs. 14-4, 25 maunds of Radanagore at Rs. 15-2 to 16-12, and about 23 maunds of Commercolly at Rs. 14-8 to 16-8 per seer have changed hands since the date of our last. Silk Piece Goods: During the week about 2,000 pieces of Corahs have been sold at Rs. 130 to 153 per corge.

Madras.

MR. PENNINGTON.—We are sorry to hear that the injuries which this gentleman sustained in his recent accident have proved much more serious than had been supposed. He has suffered some kind of dislocation of the hip, and all the efforts of the surgeons to replace the bones in their normal position have hitherto been unsuccessful, although very powerful mechanical appliances have been employed.—Madras Times, Dec. 17.

IRON MILESTONES.—Mr. Wallace, of the Victoria Iron Works, Madras, has obtained a contract for erecting iron mile-posts between Madras and Mysore, and it is supposed that in course of time iron will be substituted for stone on all the public roads. The iron posts are to be made out of the shot left from the siege of Seringapatam, some fifty years ago. This is a good way of utilising old iron, and especially old shot, if not also new.

SNIDER AMMUNITION.—It appears to be settled that a Snider Ammunition Factory will not be established in Madras; consequently the machinery sent out to that Presidency will be transferred to Bengal and Bombay. Mr. Poke, the engineer, who came out for the factory about a year ago, and who has been drawing a good salary all this time, will have to be sent back at Government expense. Sergeant Turner, who was also sent out by the Secretary of State for India, has been transferred to Bengal, and directed to do duty at Dum-Dum.

AN ALLEGED DISCOVERY.—A new instrument, called a semograph, is said to have been discovered at Madras, which, if attached to the patient's wrist, marks the beat of the pulse on paper. The marks are distinctly shown on smoked paper, as they will not be perceptible on any other paper. By the indication of the marks, a medical man may judge a healthy from an unhealthy subject. The results of the experiments have been photographed, with a view to their being sent to England.

SCHOOL OF ARTS.—There is every prospect (says the local Mail) of Madras having a School of Arts worthy of the name in the course of a year or two. Industrial arts is a branch of education in which the natives are taking much interest, and several wealthy gentlemen have already promised handsome subscriptions towards the erection and furnishing of a new building for Dr. Hunter's department. The Maharajah of Jeypore—a bit of an artist himself, seeing that he danced a quadrille with Lady Mayo—has expressed his willingness to contribute the munificent donation of a lac of rupees. Who can say after this that the Fine Arts are not appreciated by the natives of India?

CIVIL.—"There is a rumour," says the Madras Mail, "that Mr. Hunter-Blair will be appointed to act as member of the Board of Revenue during the absence of Mr. Thornhill, that Mr. Gartsin will act for Mr. Blair as collector of Sea Customs, and that Mr. Loch will become Private Secretary to the Governor during the employment of Mr. Gartsin elsewhere, or until further orders. We give this as a rumour, and nothing more. Mr. Loch is, by no means, an unlikely man to eventually succeed Mr. Gartsin. He has several of the chief personal qualifications for the Private Secretaryship, and he would never lose sight of the fact that the Secretary and the Governor are two persons. He does not waltz, but he quadrilles as fairly as most men of middle age."

ACCIDENTS.—Two officers in Rangoon, Dr. Heffernan and Captain Furlong, have had a narrow escape through a carriage accident, the latter sustaining severe injuries. They were driving in a dog-cart, when the reins broke, and the pony set off at a furious pace. Seeing no prospect of safety by remaining on the vehicle, Dr. Heffernan jumped over the back. Captain Furlong followed his example, and was carried into a house close by in a precarious condition from the injuries he sustained. Latest accounts report favourable progress towards recovery.—We are sorry to learn that two officers of the 16th Lancers—Captain Robinson and Mr. M'Causland—have lately met with very serious accidents. The former officer, whilst out hunting last Thursday, jumped a small wall near the racecourse, on the other side of which was a pit. The horse fell into it and broke his neck on the spot, whilst Captain Robinson was thrown violently on the ground on the other side, and broke his jaw-bone. The bone is set, and he is progressing towards recovery. As Mr. M'Causland was going out for a ride on Sunday afternoon his horse shied going out at the gate of the compound, and threw him, and his head struck against a stone, the skull, we are sorry to say, being fractured; he was taken up insensible, and medical men pronounce the accident a very serious one. From latest accounts Mr. M'Causland is going on as well as can be expected, though by no means out of danger.—Bangalore Herald, Dec. 15.

THE GOVERNOR'S TOUR.

The past week has been one of splendid fetes and imposing pageants in the capital of Kattywar. For this people were fully prepared by the magnificent receptions his Excellency the Governor of Bombay has met with throughout his tour, and by the knowledge that all the princes and chiefs of that large province were assembled at Rajkote to do him honour. His Excellency held a grand durbar on the 14th, at which all the chiefs were presented, tendering nuzzeranas, or gifts—the Oriental manner of acknowledging the supremacy of the Sovereign whose representative his Excellency the Governor is. An address from the chiefs was read—loyal, simple, good, couched in well-chosen English, and delivered with excellent accent—saying how rare was the occasion, how it reminded them of the old times at the beginning of the English dominion, speaking of the college which his Excellency was requested to inaugurate, expressing loyalty to the Queen and her representative, and dwelling on the great satisfaction the arrival of the Governor gave the Kattywar people. Sir Seymour Fitzgerald then rose (as also did the multitude) and expressed to "the Princes and Chiefs of Kattywar" the great pleasure and interest his visit to their country afforded him, how much he had been gratified with the reception accorded, how royally he had been received by the Jam of Nowanuggur, and again in Rajkote, how it gratified him to see the order and security with which a traveller might pass through these States, the high state of cultivation, &c., &c. His Excellency alluded to what had been said about "old times," saying that he was the last man who would undervalue an appreciation for the customs and associations of the past, for he was assured that those who cherished what was noble in the past were most likely to contribute to make the present worthy of it, but that, in remembering the past, we must remember to improve upon it, to reject what it had of evil, and to supply that with better. He also spoke of the gratification with which he had listened to their words of loyal attachment to the Queen and Government. He was happy to believe that those words were sincere. They had asked him to open their college; this was one of the most gratifying objects of his visit; it was the first institution of the kind raised by native enterprise, offering the means of attaining that mode of education best calculated to form the minds of men who were intended to govern other men. Private schools and instruction might give information, but a public school and college was the mode best adapted to give that strength and force of character which is required in rulers and public men. It was that from which our best men had arisen; it was that which had been employed by the Queen to educate her own sons; and he had no hesitation in saying that there was no means they could adopt better calculated to raise up a class of native princes, who would do more to elevate their country than anything or any one else could. It was the object of the English Government to promote the spread of education, and he was anxious to do his best to carry out that object—not to diminish the power of Native Governments and Chiefs, but to raise, improve, and confirm it, and to teach them to govern with wisdom and enlightenment. His Excellency also believed that this College, the first of its kind in India, might, properly supported, be the means of making Kattywar, now scarcely known to some people, even by name, not only one of the first, but the first, of native States, and an example to others. This, however, must be done by taking every advantage of the use of this institution of learning and discipline. He begged them, from the first to the smallest of the chiefs, to take care that their children had the benefit of it, and that they were sent to it in early life, before those enervating influences were at work which are the worst of all educations for a man—the influences of the zenana. On this subject His Excellency dwelt even more strongly at the inauguration of the College, which was, perhaps, the event of his visit to Rajkote. Of this ceremonial, and of the very interesting speeches delivered thereat, a full report is also given by our Special Correspondent. The Rajkoomar College has been built by the Chiefs of Kattywar themselves, and will be conducted on the principle of the great public schools in England, each pupil being a resident of the institution. Ample accommodation has been provided for students' residences in the building.—Times of India, Dec. 24.

NOTES ON KATTYWAR.—I.

This province was originally called "Soorashtra"; its etymology is disputed, some affirming it to proceed from "sir," good, and "Rastra," country, whilst others deem it a compound from "Sooria," the sun, which would make it the land of the sun. The acquisition of the name "Kattywar" is attributable to the circumstance that the central region of the province, which is inhabited by Kathecs, is known by the name of Kattywar, and that name gradually extended to the whole province; but, in their religious prayers and ceremonies, the Brahmins still use the name "Soorastra." Kattywar, by many supposed to have once been an island, and by some considered not improbable it may yet become so, has very clearly defined geographical limits; being bounded on the north by an arid sandy desert, known as the "Runn of Kutch;" on the east by the Gulf of Cambay and part of Ahmedabad Collectorate; on the south, and south-west by the Arabian Sea; and on the north-west by the Gulf of Kutch, its greatest length being from Gorgo in the east to Dwarka in the west, and measuring some 200 miles; its greatest breadth being from Joonjoowara in the north to the Portuguese settlement of Dieu in the south, measuring some 175 miles.

Owing in great part to the ignorant fears and opposition of the chiefs, no accurate surveys have as yet been made, hence hardly any two statements agree as to the extent of Kattywar's area. A party of the Great Trigonometrical Survey of India have been at work for four and a quarter years, and though it will take them about eight years to complete the survey of the whole of Kattywar, their labours have already resulted in eight sheets, or maps (four more being ready for publication), perhaps the finest and most minute I have ever seen. Pending the completion of this survey, probably the best authority we have on the subject is LeGrand Jacob, who roughly estimates the peninsula as containing a surface of 22,000 square miles. In the absence of any very reliable authority, the entire population may, I think, be estimated in round numbers at 2,000,000 souls; composed of Shrawaks, Nagur Brahmins, Brahmins, Looanas, Ahirs, Kabarees, Boras, Combees, Mehers, Miyanas, Khavas, Bhats, Charuns, Mussulmans, Coolies, Mehmuns, Sindees, Arabs, Muckranees and Beloochees; the last four are employed as sepoys, and Khavas, as Huzoorees body guards under the Talookdars of this province; the Meyanas who came from Kutch appear to have done so with the sole object of leading a predatory life, but the British Government put an end to their practices in 1839.

The province is divided into ten prants, or counties, the most important of which are Hattar, Soruth, Gohelwar, Jhalawar, and Kattywar; these again being subdivided into innumerable principalities or States, great and small, of which I shall treat hereafter. The general aspect of the country from Sehore, south and south-west as far as Joonaghur, with a strip from Drappa in the west to Chotevla in the north, interspersed with small patches of fertile land, may be said to be rather wild and highland, alternately picturesque, rocky, and inhospitable, and abounding (or used to abound) in lions, panthers, hyænas, wolves, jackals, wild cats, foxes, hogs, sambre, and spotted deer, and last, though not least, the retreat of the daring Barwakia, or outlaws, which latter gentry have cost Kattywar many a valuable life, European as well as native.

For the rest, I can only characterise it as one vast well-watered plain; the soil throughout being of the richest black; producing magnificent crops of cotton, jowaree, bajree, wheat and sugar-cane, &c., cotton, however, being the staple produce. I ought, perhaps, to state here that the mountainous and unproductive portion of the province forms but a moiety of its great area, so that its general traffic is immense—how immense, your readers will have a fair idea when I say that, in cotton alone, it produces fully one-third of the whole amount grown in this Presidency, including the Berars, Central Provinces, and Sinde. No appreciable change having taken place in the nature of the exports since the date of the report already referred to—though a vast change has taken place in the amount, the following extract from that report will suffice to show the nature of the present traffic:—"The chief trade of the country is with Bombay, and the principal export, cotton; but there is commercial intercourse with Africa, Arabia, Mekran, Sinde, Kutch, and the whole line of the Western Continent, and a small coasting trade is carried on by vessels from the Persian Gulf. The exports are cotton, wool, grain, ghee, gool, oil, horses, and cattle. The imports are piece goods, and various European manufactures and goods, cutlery and metals; wood and cocoanuts from the Malabar Coast; ivory and spices from Africa and Arabia; dates and stone fruits from the Persian Gulf; rice and oxen from Sind; opium, dyes, and cloths for wearing apparel are brought from Marwar." For the accommodation of all this traffic it will readily be understood with such an extensive seaboard there is no lack of bunders of sorts, the more important being Jooria on the Gulf of Kutch; Porebunder and Verawul on the South-West Coast; Mhowa on the South Coast; and Gogo, Bhownuggur, and Dhollera, on the Gulf of Cambay. As to the internal means of communication it is but just to say that within the last seven years a marked improvement has taken place; and it can no longer be said there are no made roads in the country. Thanks to the well-directed energy of the late and present political agents, though much still requires to be done, and great efforts will have to be put forth to do what is required, it is now possible to travel, with some degree of comfort, over a no inconsiderable portion of the province, not only in fair weather, but throughout the whole of the monsoon. A still greater improvement, however, in the means of communication than anything that has yet been done, and one fraught with incalculably greater advantage to the trade of the northern portion of Kattywar, &c., will have been achieved on the completion of the Wudwan extension of the Bombay and Baroda Railway to that town. The contractors are now hard at work, and it is confidently anticipated the whole length from Ahmedabad will be finished and open for traffic in about eighteen months from this time. The line of country to be traversed by this branch being throughout almost a dead level, and no bridges of any great importance required, it is believed its construction will not cost more than Rs. 60,000 per mile; and as it cannot fail to receive a large traffic it must of necessity prove of mutual advantage to the hitherto extravagant company and the province.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

UNIVERSITY.—The matriculation examination of the Bombay University has just terminated, resulting in 142 candidates passing out of 901. For several years the number of students coming up for the examination has been increasing with rapid strides, and the number of students passing has been fewer in proportion nearly every year. In 1865, 282 students came up, of which 111 passed; in 1866, 440 candidates, of which 93 passed; in 1867, 163 passed out of 539; in 1868, 250 passed out of 600; in 1869, 142 out of 835; and this year, 142 out of 901.

TROOPS FOR ENGLAND.—H.M.'s troop ship Malabar will leave on the 3rd January with the following troops for England:—From Bengal: H. M.'s 103rd Regiment (Bombay Fusiliers), mustering 27 officers, 4 ladies, 3 children, 467 men, 29 women and 49 children. Also time-expired men, mustering 4 officers, 146 men, 9 "persons" and 12 children. From Madras: An officer, 12 time-expired men, 8 women and 13 children. From Bombay: 6 "ignominy men" from the Belgaum district. Likewise 10 officers, 2 ladies, 4 children, 6 men, 4 women and 8 children. Altogether the list comprises 42 officers, 6 ladies, children, 637 men, 50 women and 82 children.

THE S. P. G. SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of the subscribers to the Bombay Branch of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts was held in the Durbar-room of the Town-hall on Wednesday afternoon, the Right Rev. Bishop Douglas in the chair. The secretary (Mr. Punnett) read an abstract of the annual report by the committee, which detailed the operations for the past year. These had been very satisfactory, and embraced the opening of a promising mission at Kolhapore. In moving the adoption of the report the chairman made a neat address on the general condition of the mission and its prospects for the future, in the course of which he expressed his opinion that the missionaries should be more widely spread in the country districts, and that it was a mistake for them to be employed almost as schoolmasters. His Lordship also advocated the advancement of Church of England missions in India, and appealed for a warm interest in the extensive labours of so vast a field. The report was adopted, the committee appointed, and addresses afterwards delivered by the missionaries.—Bombay Gazette, Dec. 24.

BOMBAY AS IT IS.—Bombay is far in advance of Calcutta in its bustle and activity, in its Police and Municipal arrangements, and in the European activity of native inhabitants. Omnibuses crowded with passengers inside and out—cabs on stands sharp in attracting passengers—second and third editions of newspapers hawked about in the streets, and all the ethnology of Asia in the most picturesque variety, moving along in ceaseless activity, fully realising the great material fact of the age that Time is money almost makes me forget that this is India. There is nothing about it Asiatic in character but the blazing sun, the everlasting toddy-palm, the brown-leafed plaintain-tree, and the marvellous monuments of drapery erected on the heads of the wearers in the shape of turbans of every variety and form. Even the women partake of the general activity, convert the petticoat into a dhotee, and carry on their business with an activity refreshing to witness. The public buildings which are gradually rising up are handsome stone structures, in which the meretricious defects of Indian architecture are carefully avoided. They are correct in their proportions, magnificent in their general effect, well situated, and would not disgrace even the Queen of Cities, which is now beleagured by the descendants of the Hun and the Goth. I have driven several times through the main streets of the Bazaar, which are almost as picturesque as those of the cities of Rajpootana, without the smallest offence to the sense of smell. The handsome lamps which adorn the intersections of the main lines of communication, the drinking-fountains, and, above all, the magnificent market which bears the name of Crawford, show at a glance that Bombay is ruled by brains—and that the native of India is not slow to appreciate the advantages of Western civilisation, when presented in a plain practical form.—Indian Daily News Correspondent.

To London—Cotton, £1. 15s. to £2.; Seeds, £1. 10s. to £1. 15s.

IMPORTS.—BOMBAY, Dec. 24.—The market generally has been very dull, and a considerable fall has taken place in Goods and Yarns. Stocks in first hands are heavy; the shipments of Plain Grey Cottons to Bombay in the month of October amounted to 23,143,553 yards—nearly double the average shipments of the previous months of the year—and the shipments of Plain White Cottons in the same month amounted to 5,875,644 yards, which was also considerably in excess of the average. The shipments, however, in November have again decreased, but the distrust of first holders in the future has been shown in their eagerness to meet any inquiry springing up. In other respects the state of the market appears to be healthy, but the unsettled state of Europe and the increasing production of cotton are encouraging the belief in a lower level of prices both for Cotton and Goods.

EXPORTS.—BOMBAY, Dec. 24.—Cotton: The telegrams received during the fortnight have been very unfavourable, reporting dull markets in Liverpool, and the price of Fair Dholleras as having declined to 6d., at which it has stood nearly the whole period under review. The cause of the decline is doubtless to be found in the rapid accumulation of stocks in the American ports, which is taken to indicate a very large crop, much larger than any estimates have yet shown. On December 10 they had risen to 435,000 bales, while the telegram dated the 15th states that in four days only the receipts at the ports amounted to no less than 85,000 bales. The belief is gaining ground that, even should the war between France and Germany terminate soon, the increased production of cotton must be followed by a lower level of prices. The marked here has throughout shown a downward tendency, and we have more business to report than we have had for many months back, the decline having enabled houses to execute orders in hand. Towards the close, however, numerous orders have been cancelled, and the market closes very quiet at a decline generally of Rs. 10 to 15 per candy. The business done in Bombay for export exceeds 6,000 candies, among which there were of old Cotton 1,800 candies of Dhollera and Bhonuggur, at prices ranging from Rs. 208 to Rs. 180; 1,090 candies of Dharwar Sawginned at Rs. 210 to Rs. 205; 535 candies of Barsee and Khandeish at Rs. 176 to Rs. 170; and 200 candies of Ahmedabad at Rs. 194 to Rs. 179. And of New Cotton 1,475 candies of Oomrawuttee Akote, deliverable in January, at Rs. 215 to Rs. 193; and 175 candies of Paizpore at Rs. 212 to Rs. 204.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

FAREWELL ORDER TO THE BOMBAY FUSILIERS.

(From the Gazette of India, Dec. 10.)

Calcutta, Dec. 9.—H.M.'s 103rd Royal Bombay Fusiliers being about to quit India for the first time, after a service in this country of more than two centuries, first as a regiment sent from England to take possession of the New Settlement of Bombay in 1662, and subsequently as the Bombay European Regiment, the 1st Bombay Fusiliers, and then as H.M.'s 103rd Royal Bombay Fusiliers, the Governor-general in Council desires, in bidding this regiment farewell, to place on record a statement of its various and distinguished services.

Between the years 1720 and 1757 detachments of the regiment were continually employed in its own and in the Madras Presidency, and did honourable service, a large portion of the corps having also been present at the battle of Plassey in June 1757.

In 1750 the regiment formed part of the expedition against Surat, which was captured by storm in March of that year.

Detachments of the regiment also served at the capture of Pondicherry in February, 1761, and of Malie in March of the same year, and at the battle of Buxar in October, 1764.

It served constantly in the operations carried on in the Carnatic, Mysore, Gujerat, and was present at the siege and capture of Seringapatam in 1799.

It served also against the Peshwa at the battle of Kirkee in 1817, and in Arabia in the action of Beni-Boo-Ali in 1821, and at the capture of Aden in 1839.

As the 1st Bombay Fusiliers, which distinctive designation had been conferred upon it in 1843, it took part in the Punjab campaign of 1848-49, was present at the siege and capture of Mooltan, at the battle of Gujerat in February, 1849, and during the subsequent pursuit of the Sikh army, under Sir Walter Gilbert.

It took part in the dispersion of the mutinous Sepoys of the Bengal Army at Mooltan and Ferozepore in 1857-58.

Since the year 1867 the regiment has been stationed in the Bengal Presidency, upholding, under all circumstances, its former high reputation; and in now bidding this gallant corps a hearty farewell, the Governor-general in Council feels confident that wherever it may be, and in whatever service engaged, it will ever maintain the distinguished position it has held through a long and varied service in the East.—H. K. BURNE, Colonel, Secretary to the Government of India.

INSPECTION OF TROOPS.

Adjutant General's Office, Head Quarters, Camp Nowgong, Dec. 12.—H.R.H. the Field Marshal C. in C. having approved of the inspection of British regiments in India being taken once instead of twice in each year, as heretofore, H.E. the C. in C. directs that the annual inspection be made in the month of February, and that it may be of a most searching character on every point contained in the confidential reports.

LANGUAGE EXAMINATIONS.—MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

The following letter is from the Secy. to the Govt. of India, in the mily. dept., to the adjt. gen., No. 622, dated Nov. 17:—

"Replying to the reference made by you to the officg. secy. board of examiners, as to whether it is necessary that the medical officer, required under clause III. of Govt. G.O. No. 690 of 1865, to be nominated a member of committees for the examination of surgeons and assistant surgeons, should be a passed officer, I am directed to acquaint you, for the information of the Right Hon. the C. in C., that a passed medical officer should always be placed on the committee when one is available. When there is none available, a medical officer who has passed the lower standard may be appointed, a certificate by the officer commanding the station, showing the necessity for the measure, being always attached to the proceedings."

This order equally affects committees of examination on medical subordinates.—See G.O. 303 of 1870.

WARRANT OFFICERS.

The following is an extract of a letter from the Government of India, military department, to the Government of Bombay, military department, No. 543, dated Simla, Sept. 24. [See G.O. 152.]

"The invalid pension granted to warrant officers retiring in India, which is greater than that awarded to those electing to retire in Europe, is not granted until the parties are pronounced by medical authority to be unfit for further effective service, while the English rate of pension is claimable after certain stated periods of service, whether they be effective or not.

"4. Under G.G.O. No. 143, of April 14, 1849, warrant officers who have served the period entitling them to the Europe rate of pension are entitled to the regulated rate of passage money if proceeding home on medical certificate in view to retiring at the end of their leave, and under the same rule a warrant officer invalided in India, but qualified by service to retire in Europe, if desirous of admission to the English rate of pension, will, on finally relinquishing all claims to the Indian rate of pension, be granted the passage money of his rank to Europe, precisely in the same manner as a warrant officer on the effective list proceeding to Europe on medical certificate.

"5. These rules, taken in connection with those published in G.G.O. No. 176, of Feb. 20, 1868, granting free passage in troopships when accommodation is available, or in sailing vessels, to warrant officers proceeding on sick leave to Europe, have, it would appear, misled the quartermaster-general and the controller of military accounts, Bombay, to the conclusion that the grant of free passage in lieu of a fixed rate of passage money as formerly allowed, was extended to pensioned or invalided warrant officers and their families.

"6. I am further to point out that passage money under the old rules was denied to warrant officers pensioned or invalided in that grade, exception being made only in favour of the two classes referred to in para. 4, and it is to these two classes alone that free passages in lieu of passage money, under the G.O. of 1868, is admissible."

The collar rounded off in front, cuff round, two and three-quarter inches deep and ten and a-half round ; slashed flap on sleeve six inches long and two and a-quarter inches wide, with three loops of half-inch lace, staff pattern, and uniform buttons ; eight buttons in front at equal distances. The skirt ten and a-half inches deep for an officer five feet nine inches in height, with a variation of half an inch, longer or shorter, for every inch of difference in the height of the wearer ; blue flap on the skirt behind, ten inches deep, two buttons on flap and one on waist, with three loops of half-inch lace. The coat collar, cuffs, and flaps, edged with scarlet cloth, quarter inch, and the skirts lined with scarlet.

Distinctions of rank—

Captains, lace round the top of the collar, a crown and star in silver at each end.

Lieutenants, the same lace with a crown.

Ensigns, the same lace with a star.

All ranks to have one row of lace round the cuff, none on the skirts, and the loops only on the skirt and sleeve flaps.

Lace—Gold, staff pattern, half-inch width.

Buttons—Gilt, with a crown and "Public Works Department" raised thereon.

Hat—Cocked, the fan or back part nine inches, the front seven inches and a-half, each corner five inches, uniform buttons, gold lace loop, and tassels of gold crape fringe, with crimson underneath.

Trousers—Blue cloth, with a gold stripe, one and three-quarter inches wide, staff pattern, down the outward seam.

Boots—Wellington.

Sword—The same as for officers of infantry.

Scabbard—Steel, for all ranks.

Sword-knot—Crimson and gold, with acorn tassel.

Sword-belt—Plain black morocco, with slings and gilt hook, to be worn over the coat.

Plate—A round gilt clasp with "V.R." surmounted by a crown in silver upon the centre piece, and "Public Works Department," with a laurel branch also in silver on the outer circle.

Stock—Black silk.

Gloves—White leather.

Forage-cap—Blue cloth, with black leather peak and chin strap, light blue band with "V.R." surrounded with a wreath surmounted by a crown embroidered in gold on the front, with black button and trimming on the top.

Cloak—Blue, lined with scarlet, of pattern for officers of infantry, with uniform buttons.

Patrol Jacket—Artillery pattern, without any tags across the breast, but with engineers' flat braid on cuffs.

Undress Trousers—Artillery pattern, with scarlet stripe down the seam.

ADVANCE PAY.—TROOPS PROCEEDING TO OR RETURNING FROM INDIA.

1. Advances of pay to regiments proceeding to India will, in future, be made direct by the India-office.

2. Paymasters will transmit to the War-office estimates of the sums required for the period of the passage only.

3. The estimates, after examination, will be transmitted by the War-office to the India-office, with the request that the amount may be issued to the paymaster.

4. These advances will be accounted for by the paymaster to the local Government in India, the paymaster rendering to the War-office a pay list to the day preceding embarkation.

5. Advances in India to regiments returning to England will be accounted for by the paymasters direct to the India-office, a pay list being rendered to the day preceding disembarkation.

6. Advances to drafts proceeding to India will be made by the paymr. of the regt. to which the depot on the India establishment is attached ; these payments, supported by a separate voucher, should be charged against the Secy. of State in Council of India (quarterly contingent account) in the general state of the pay list.

7. Advances by the Govt. of India to detachments returning to this country will be accounted for to the War-office by the paymr. of the discharge depot, Chichester.

8. Clause 11, army circulars, 1867 (so far as regts. embarking from Ireland to India are concerned), and clause 26, army circulars, 1867, are hereby cancelled.

THE GUN-CARRIAGE FACTORY AT ALLAHABAD.—CENSURE OF THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

The following resolution of the Government of India on the report of a Committee appointed to inquire into the accident to store-room of gun-carriage factory in course of construction at Allahabad is published:—

At the end of June last the attention of his Excellency the Governor-general in Council was drawn to a report in the public papers that an accident, accompanied by loss of human life, had occurred to one of the buildings in course of construction at the gun-carriage factory at Allahabad.

2. His Honour the Lieutenant-governor being at the time absent from Allahabad, the Superintending Engineer at that place was called upon for an immediate report, which was shortly received. From this report it appeared that the accident was of so serious a nature that the Governor-general in Council considered it necessary to appoint a special committee to investigate the matter fully. The committee was composed as follows:—

President—Major General Travers, V.C., Commanding the Allahabad Division. Members—Colonel J. C. Anderson, C.S.I., R.E., Officiating Inspector-General of Irrigation; Mr. R. M. Brereton, Chief Engineer, G.I.P. Railway, North-East Extension. The last-named gentleman having consented to undertake the duty, his services were placed at the disposal of Government, for the purpose, through the courtesy of the Agent of the Railway.

3. The committee were directed to report, through the Government of the North-Western Provinces, on the causes which had led to the catastrophe, and on the responsibility of the several officers of the Public Works Department, contractors, or others, in any way connected with the design or construction of the building.

4. The committee were also instructed to examine all the other buildings of the new factory, particularly those that would be subject to the vibration caused by machinery in motion, and to report on their state.

5. The committee were further directed to inspect any buildings at Allahabad constructed lately, wholly or in part, by the same agency (whether officers of the Public Works Department, or contractors) as that employed on the building which had failed, and to examine and report separately on the general condition of the new soldiers' barracks.

6. The appointment of this committee was communicated by telegraph to the Lieutenant-Governor on July 5.

7. The committee assembled at Allahabad on July 13, and submitted their report on the 22nd idem to the Lieutenant-Governor, by whom it was sent to the Government of India, with a minute by himself and a note by the Chief Engineer.

8. The primary object of the appointment of the committee will first be considered.

9. The building to which the accident occurred was intended for a store-room, and consisted of three compartments, each compartment being 170 feet long by 45 feet wide, the width being divided by a longitudinal arcaded wall down the centre, having piers $2\frac{1}{2}$ feet square, with arches of $14\frac{1}{2}$ feet span, and rise of 4 feet, the springing of the arches being at a height of 13 feet above the floor-level.

10. The walls, piers, and arches are all of brickwork throughout, as were also the foundations.

11. The roof was flat and composed of sal beams 13 inches by 9 inches placed 3 2·5 feet apart from centre to centre, resting on the outer and centre walls, and supporting stone slabs 2 inches thick, which were covered by terracing 4 inches thick.

12. The superintending engineer estimated the weight of the roof covering, allowing for absorption and the weight of workpeople employed, at about 120lbs. per foot superficial.

13. At the time of the accident (June 23) the west compartment had been roofed in; the centre compartment was about three-fourths covered; and the walls of the third compartment were finished, but the roofing of it had not been commenced. Twenty-two work people were employed in terracing the centre compartment when the whole roof of this compartment gave way, owing, it is supposed, to the failure of the centre wall, and eighteen out of twenty-two workpeople who had been on the roof fell with it, and had to be extricated from the ruins. Of these eighteen, four were reported to have died by July 1, and seven others to have sustained serious injuries.

14. The walls of this building were begun in February, 1868, and finished in September of the same year, but were left unroofed till February, 1870, owing partly to delay in the supply of timber, and partly to the reduction made in the Public Works grant.

15. There appears, from the report of the committee, to be no doubt that the failure of the centre wall was the cause of the accident. The committee further report that the brickwork of this particular building in question, and indeed of all the other buildings of the factory, so far as the quality of the bricks and their setting is concerned, is excellent; that the pointing of the joints is particularly good and clean, but that the mortar used is of the most inferior description, and that it is to the worthless character of this mortar that the failure of the wall is mainly to be attributed.

16. The weakness of the walls, due to their construction with bad mortar, was, in the opinion of the committee, increased by the exposure of the walls to the rains of 1869, which, had the mortar been of good quality, would not have been in any way the cause of injury. As a minor cause, which might possibly have contributed in some degree to the catastrophe that occurred, the committee mention that the terracing, being in progress from one side only of the compartment, might have exercised a side thrust on the central longitudinal wall.

17. The bad quality of the mortar was not confined to the one building, but was observable in all the other buildings of the factory, including sheds for machinery to be driven by steam-power and a chimney-shaft $123\frac{1}{2}$ feet high.

18. There was no sign of settlement in the foundations of any of the buildings, though the committee turned their particular attention to this point; and, as regards the designs, the committee, referring to the factory buildings generally, say they consider the whole to be very good; one or two points are mentioned in which improvement is considered by them to be possible, but their suggestions are unimportant, and refer chiefly to the machinery sheds.

19. As regards the mortar, it is reported that it was composed of kunker burnt with oopla (cow-dung cakes) and soorkhee (pounded brick), the specified proportions being one part of lime to one part of soorkhee. From evidence adduced, however, there can be no doubt that the lime, which was burnt by a contractor near the site of the works, was delivered with a large admixture of wood-ashes and the refuse of soap-boiling operations, in both of which materials, it seems from the committee's report (which has been fully confirmed by a subsequent inquiry made by the magistrate in conjunction with the Superintending Engineer), a regular trade had long been carried on.

20. But in whatever way the deterioration of the lime was affected, it is clear that the mortar was quite unfit for the purpose for which it had been used, for an analysis made by Assistant-Surgeon Hamilton, R.A., of specimens taken at random from one of the walls, showed that it contained only 6 per cent. of lime.

21. Subsequent analysis made by Dr. Murray Thomson also showed that the mortar contained a large proportion of alkaline salts, and that the percentage of lime was very small.

22. The analysis confirms what was evident from an inspection of the mortar, and the Governor-General in Council is satisfied that the accident may be attributed almost entirely, if not altogether, to the bad quality of the mortar. It remains, therefore, to enquire in what degree the responsibility for the use of the bad mortar rests on each of the individuals concerned in the execution of the work, both in the building which fell, and in the other buildings of the factory.

23. The person in immediate charge of the construction of the buildings in question was Supervisor Bartram, who is a fitter by trade, and who passed out of the Roorkee College and entered the Public Works Department as overseer in 1862. He appears to have been first employed on the Deccan Road, where a number of masonry bridges were erected under his superintendence, the experience gained on which should have rendered him thoroughly acquainted with the qualities of mortar.

24. In his evidence before the committee he stated that he did not consider a specimen of mortar which was shown to him to be good, and that he had, on various occasions, rejected mortar brought for use on the works. Still the fact remains that the building which failed, and many others in the factory, were built under his immediate superintendence with absolutely worthless mortar.

25. His length of service and practical experience on masonry works leave him no excuse for ignorance as to the quality of the mortar he saw daily used, on an extensive scale, on the works under his charge. The committee and the Lieutenant-governor consider that he has proved himself thoroughly unfit for the place he holds.

26. The Governor-general in Council is of opinion that Supervisor Bartram has failed in the proper discharge of one of the simplest, yet most important, of the duties assigned to members of the Upper Subordinate Establishment, and deems it necessary to remove him from the Public Works Department. His removal should be ordered by the Local Government.

27. The executive engineers in charge of the works were Major W. Jackson, of the Bengal Staff Corps, from the time the buildings of the factory were commenced in March, 1867, until February 5, 1870, when he made over the charge to Mr. R. J. Clarke, the present executive engineer.

28. Under the former officer, therefore, the whole of the work which has failed was carried out, and also the majority of the other buildings in which bad mortar was used.

29. Both the committee and the Lieutenant-Governor bear testimony to this officer's diligence, to his almost daily attendance at the works, to the general good quality (with the one important exception of the mortar) of the brickwork executed under his orders, to the pains and forethought evinced in his correspondence and specification, and to his unquestionable anxiety to discharge his duties to the best of his ability.

30. The Lieutenant-Governor, however, has stated that Major Jackson is wanting in the qualities essential to a successful service in the Department of Public Works, particularly in energy and power of control, and that he trusted too much to his subordinates. It may be further noticed, that the unfitness of this officer for the important post of Executive Engineer is borne out by the unskilful manner in which, as brought to light in the papers submitted, he designed an ordinary scarf for a beam; the error made was a very flagrant one, evincing ignorance of the elementary principles of carpentering. H.E. the Governor-General in Council considers that the opinions expressed regarding Major Jackson are amply borne out by the evidence adduced, and that it is impossible to arrive at any conclusion but that this officer should be removed from the Public Works Department. He will accordingly be replaced at the disposal of the Military Department.

31. Mr. Clarke is not in any way responsible for the work in the walls of the building that failed. The committee, however, report that they saw no improvement in the quality of the mortar used in the factory buildings during the four and a-half months that Mr. Clarke had been in charge of the division, but mention the fact that he had stopped certain of the contractors' works elsewhere, in consequence of being dissatisfied with the mortar, which, the committee add, was much superior to what was being used in the Gun-carriage Factory Buildings. The Governor-General in Council accepts the opinion of the committee with reference to this officer, to the extent that it might reasonably be presumed that he would not much longer have delayed effecting an improvement in the work at the factory also; but it nevertheless appears to his Excellency in Council that Mr. Clarke is not free from blame, as he should have made a thorough inspection of all buildings in progress immediately after assuming charge of his division, and that had this duty been properly discharged, he ought not to have failed to discover the bad quality of the mortar at once. He should be warned that this instance of remissness will be recorded against him in the Promotion Rolls, and that any further shortcoming on his part that may be brought to the notice of the Government of India will be dealt with severely.

32. The Superintending Engineers in charge of the circle, whilst the various buildings for the factory were in progress, were:—Lieut. col. C. D. Newmarch, R.E. (since dead), from Jan. 6, 1868, to Oct. 31, 1868; Major F. H. Cobbe, R.A., from Nov. 1, 1868, to April 13, 1869; Lieut. col. H. Rose, S.C., from April 13, 1869, to May 2, 1870; Lieut. col. F. Alexander, S.C., from May 2, 1870, to the present time.

33. The work on the store room, the failure of which led to the present inquiry, was all carried out during the incumbency of the first of these officers. He joined the circle in bad health, having shortly before met with a severe accident, and in consequence of this was permitted by the Local Government, when proceeding on inspection to Raneekhet in April 1868, to remain there for two months to arrange about the laying out of the new station. In ordinary course he would have returned to his headquarter station in June of the same year, but his medical advisers would not permit this, and his Honour allowed him to continue to perform his duties at Nynee Tal, on its being represented to him by Col. Hodgson that he (Col. Hodgson) would be present at Allahabad in case of any emergency arising. Col. Newmarch's health did not improve, and he was unable to leave Nynee Tal till late in October, 1868, when he was transferred to Oude as Chief Engineer, and not long after was obliged to take leave on medical certificate, and died on his way home. He had previously proved himself to be an efficient officer. On this case it is unnecessary to make further comment.

34. Major Cobbe did not assume charge of the circle until the wall which fell had been completed; but during the whole of the cold season of 1868-69 he held the post of Superintending Engineer, and failed to ensure any improvement, during that time, in the quality of work. An inspection report sent in by him in March, 1869, makes no mention of any inferiority in the work. The opinion of the Committee that this officer failed in his duty in not having detected the defects of the mortar used generally in the numerous buildings under construction during his incumbency, is fully concurred in by the Governor-General in Council, and the Lieutenant-Governor has recorded his opinion that "neglect of duty is more attributable to Major Cobbe than to any other of the controlling officers."

35. It is submitted, in extenuation, that he had for a long time been, as, indeed, he now is (having been obliged lately to take leave on medical certificate), in an infirm state of health. This fact may be admitted; but, taken in connection with the reports in this case, and in that relating to bad work in certain buildings in the cantonment (to be noticed in a separate Resolution), it is clear that it is not desirable to retain him in the Public Works Department. His services, therefore, will also be replaced at the disposal of the Military Department.

36. Lieutenant colonel Rose, who was the next Superintending Engineer, and who held charge of the circle for a year, reports that he visited the works at the factory four or five times, but that he never made what he calls a "formal inspection" of them, saying that he deferred doing so until he had visited the various other outlying divisions of his charge. The division, the inspection of which was thus left to the last, was, in regard to works in progress, the most important one in his circle, and the one in which he usually resided.

37. He, however, commenced the formal inspection of this particular division; but before he had completed it, he heard of his probable transfer to another province, and therefore thought it useless to go on with it. In his replies to the committee he also says that, as he had no occasion to make a "formal inspection," he never thought it necessary to scrutinise the work very closely, and he never brought forward any case in which he was dissatisfied with Major Jackson's work.

38. The committee remark with regard to this officer that, in their opinion, he had no authority for considering an inspection by a Superintending Engineer to be other than a formal one, and that he had ample opportunity for becoming acquainted with the defects of construction noticed. These remarks have the entire concurrence of his Excellency in Council. A Superintending Engineer who inspects works under his charge without satisfying himself as to the quality of the material used, omits one of the fundamental duties of his office, a duty the necessity for which must be at once apparent to any officer who has a proper sense of the responsibility attaching to a Superintending Engineer, and which is, moreover, fully impressed upon Superintending Engineers in the Public Works Code.

39. In the course of a whole year Colonel Rose appears never, in the proper sense of the term, to have inspected the factory, though many of the buildings then in progress were of an important nature, including a chimney-shaft 123½ feet high, a structure requiring a very superior description of brick-work, and the most careful and constant supervision.

40. It appears, moreover, from his examination before the committee, that Colonel Rose had never even taken an opportunity to make himself acquainted with the arrangements for lime manufacture that were in force in the Allahabad division; and the neglect of duty, to which he has confessed, in having avoided an important inspection because he was about to be removed to the Central Provinces, shows that he cannot have a proper appreciation of the interests of the public service. In fact, apart from the accident now under review, Colonel Rose must stand convicted on his own evidence of having signally failed to pay due regard to the responsibilities and duties of the important post of Superintending Engineer.

41. His Excellency in Council would have had doubts whether an officer who has shown such remissness as is apparent in this case ought to be allowed to remain in the Public Works Department, but in consequence of Colonel Rose's long service would have been content with depriving him of his position as Superintending Engineer, had he given no other cause for dissatisfaction. Two other serious instances of failure in duty, while he was an Executive Engineer at Rawulpindee, have, however, been very lately brought to the notice of the Government of India, which, taken in connection with the present case, have led his Excellency in Council to the conclusion that it would not be right to retain this officer in the department. His services will accordingly be replaced at the disposal of the Government of India in the Military Department.

42. Lieut. col. Alexander, the present Superintending Engineer, joined the circle only two months before the accident occurred; his responsibility is therefore less than that of any of his predecessors. The committee, however, report that no improvement was apparent in the mortar used in the chimney-stack since he assumed charge.

43. His Excellency in Council, moreover, cannot consider Col. Alexander's own evidence to be satisfactory or worthy of an officer of his standing and experience, for he too makes use of the term "formal inspection," and under the plea that his visits to the works were not of this nature, attempts to excuse himself for not having looked more closely into the quality of the mortar.

44. In the late re-arrangement of Superintending Engineers that was necessitated by the change in the number of grades, Colonel Alexander has, in consequence of his proceedings in this case, been placed in a grade lower than that in which he would otherwise have appeared.

45. Colonel Hodgson held the combined offices of Chief Engineer and Secretary to the Government of the North-Western Provinces in the Public Works Department, during the whole of the period under review; he resided frequently at Allahabad, and on one occasion undertook for a short period the duties of Colonel Newmarch at that station.

46. His very onerous duties are, doubtless, mainly administrative; still, his Excellency in Council cannot admit that they are purely so, and is of opinion that in failing to visit frequently and to inspect carefully the work in progress on the extensive and costly ranges of buildings which were being constructed close to his residence, he omitted an important part of his duty.

47. Colonel Hodgson is an officer of long service and great experience, and, had he made such inspections of these particular works as might fairly have been expected of him, the bad quality of the mortar that was being used could not have escaped his notice. It is also a serious reflection upon him that, as the local head of the engineering staff, he failed to secure such efficient supervision of the work as would have prevented the discreditable failure that has led to this inquiry.

48. The responsibility attaching to him was, moreover, increased by his having undertaken to carry on Colonel Newmarch's duties at Allahabad during this officer's absence on account of ill health.

49. His Excellency in Council further considers that it is a blot in the administration of the Public Works Department in the North-Western Provinces, for which the Chief Engineer must be held mainly responsible, that officers who evidently were physically unfit for the proper discharge of their duties should have been allowed to retain their charges. This occurred with reference to both Colonel Newmarch and Major Cobbe.

50. The Governor-General in Council sympathises fully with officers who, after many years' good service, may be obliged through ill-health to abandon valuable posts which they may have well earned, and the loss of which may be to them a source of great hardship, but these are the severe conditions which attach themselves to all efficient service, and more especially to service in India; and his Excellency in Council deems it right here to record his opinion, that all heads of departments fail in their duty when, under any circumstances whatever, they sanction, directly or indirectly, the retention in active employment of any officer who is physically or mentally unfit for the proper discharge of his duty.

51. The Governor-General in Council quite appreciates the ability, zeal, method, untiring industry and devotion to his work which have characterised Colonel Hodgson's long service in the Public Works Department, and regrets that a sense of duty renders it necessary to animadvert thus strongly on his proceedings in this case; but his Excellency in Council feels it impossible, under the circumstances, to absolve the head of the department from blame for a failure which has resulted in the severe punishment of so many of the officers subordinate to him.

52. With regard to the lime contractor, separate instructions will be issued for prosecuting him on a criminal charge, as there can be no doubt, from the evidence that has been adduced, that the lime delivered at the works was largely adulterated.

53. Separate instructions will also be issued in respect to the other buildings of the factory that have been completed, or that are in progress, and the uses to which they should be eventually put. It appears, from the committee's report, that, with a few exceptions, the whole of these buildings require considerable works of repair and renewal; and that, in consequence of the bad quality of the mortar, the buildings in which it was intended to work the machinery will have to be turned to account for some other purpose.

54. In conclusion, his Excellency the Governor-General in Council desires to record that he has reviewed with great sorrow this deplorable history of negligence, incapacity, and corruption—negligence in the conduct of every superior officer who was connected with the supervision of these buildings from the beginning—incapacity to a greater or less extent of almost every subordinate concerned in the work of construction—corruption on the part of those who supplied the worthless materials—and it is impossible to avoid the suspicion that some of the inferior subordinates must also have been aware of the organised system in the adulteration of the lime which was practised throughout.

ORDER.—Ordered, that this Resolution be forwarded to the Government, North-Western Provinces, with request that a copy may be furnished to each of the officers concerned now serving in the Department Public Works of the North-Western Provinces; also that a copy of the Resolution be sent to the Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, for information and communication to Lieut. col. Rose.

Ordered also, that this Resolution, together with the connected papers, be sent to the Military Department for information, and for the issue of any orders that may be necessary.

PRESENTATION TO MISS CARPENTER.—Miss Mary Carpenter, whose noble exertions on behalf of female education in the great Indian Empire are familiar to the public, has just received a very valuable present from the people of Sind. It consists of a large table-cloth most elaborately embroidered in gold and silver; the design is exquisite in conception, and is wrought with a careful regard for the minuteness of its details. In a circle in the centre of the cloth is the inscription, worked in silver letters—"Presented to Miss Mary Carpenter, from Sind," and around the border are some verses in Persian characters. It was contained in a richly-carved box of Indian wood, in the front of which was inlaid an ivory tablet bearing Miss Carpenter's name. Accompanying the testimonial was an address, which was splendidly engrossed and illuminated, and bound in red morocco. A large number of signatures, including those of six native female teachers, were attached to the address, which speaks most strongly of the value of her services to India.

THE AMALGAMATION INQUIRY COMMITTEE.

The following correspondence on the above subject appeared in the Home News :—

To Major general North, R.E.

My Dear General,—The committee of the Sykes, Jervis, and North Testimonial Fund beg you will be good enough to accept the enclosed order for fifty guineas, which sum has been subscribed by a few officers of the Madras Army, in token of the obligations they labour under to you for your great exertions so disinterestedly accorded at a very critical period in behalf of your brother officers in the Indian Army.—Believe me, sincerely yours,

ROWLAND FARRER, Major, Secretary to the Sykes, Jervis, and North Madras Testimonial Fund.

Jubbulpore, Dec. 9, 1870.

To Major Rowland Farrer, Jubbulpore.

My Dear Major Farrer,—I have received your letter of the 9th Dec., enclosing a bill of exchange for fifty guineas, subscribed by a few officers of the Madras Army. This substantial acknowledgment of my endeavours to keep the Amalgamation Inquiry Committee together, and to place the various grievances of the officers of the Indian Army before Parliament, is exceedingly grateful to me, because hitherto I have received more abuse than thanks for what I have done. Some officers of the Bombay Army sent me a letter of thanks, and some officers of the Madras Army have now sent me this testimonial; but from the officers of the Bengal Army I have received nothing, and from several papers published in that Presidency abuse and calumniation. Almost every Bengal officer, whose particular and individual grievance was not redressed by Act of Parliament in the exact manner he wished, consoled himself for his disappointment by blaming me and my committee in the Indian newspapers.

I take this opportunity of letting the subscribers to the Amalgamation Inquiry Committee know what has been done with the unexpended balance of their money. The balance was £560. Half of this, added to £315. 12s. 9d. subscribed by some officers of the Bombay Army expressly for Captain Jervis, together with interest, was expended by me in the purchase of a silver epergne for that officer. I had the following inscription engraved on it:—"Presented to Colonel Jervis, R.A., M.P. for Harwich, by some officers of the late Indian Army, in grateful remembrance of his disinterested and valuable advocacy of their interests in and out of Parliament, from 1862 to 1866."

Colonel Sykes received a cheque for £280, with a request that he would procure for himself such a testimonial as his taste might suggest, and that he would have a similar inscription to the above engraved on it. I have thus carried out the dispositions of the unexpended balance of subscriptions, which I notified to the officers of the Indian Army when the Amalgamation Inquiry Committee was dissolved.—Believe me, sincerely yours,

CHAS. FRED. NORTH, Major General, R.E.

Junior Carlton Club, Pall Mall, Jan. 5, 1871.

TO AND FROM BRINDISI.

In consequence of the war, travellers have to go through Belgium, Germany, Austria, and Italy. It is difficult to go by the mail train unless the baggage is taken into the carriage; the safest plan is to anticipate the mail by twelve hours. This can be done by the 7.40 A.M. train from Charing-cross on Friday morning, and will ensure a night's rest at Bologna, where the mails arrive on Monday evening.

The fare to Cologne, via Dover and Ostend, is £3. 8s. 10d., and assuming the passenger leaves London as suggested, he will be due at Ostend at 2.30, and leave about 3 (Bradshaw, page 74). There is no restaurant at this station, though it is believed one is in course of construction, and there is no means at present of procuring refreshment after the four hours' sea journey, excepting at the wretched places called hotels, some little distance from the station. At Brussels, where the train is due at 5.20 P.M., twenty minutes can be well-spent at a restaurant opposite the station. Any porter will direct the way. At 10.55 (Bradshaw, page 80), the train is due at Cologne, leaving at 11.30 (page 22), (where passengers can remain the night, involving, however, getting up in time to leave by the 6 A.M. train). A ticket must here be taken for Munich (29 florins 33 kreutzers, a few kreutzers less than £2. 10s.); at 5.20 the train is due at Mayence, and does not leave until 10.25 (page 109), affording time for a rest and a very fair breakfast at the station. At Aschaffenburg, where the train is due at 12 o'clock, passengers remain half an hour, and eventually arrive at Munich (page 150) at 9.10 P.M., where a ticket must be taken to Bologna (42 florins 51 kreutzers, or 1 florin 9 kreutzers over £3. 10s.). The train leaves at 10.5 P.M. (page 153), and arrives at Kufstein at 12.55, leaving again at 1.40 A.M. (page 157). Here baggage is examined on entering the Austrian frontier, and passengers change from the Bavarian carriages warmed with hot air into carriages with simple foot warmers, which is very disagreeable, seeing that the coldest part of the Brenner Pass is at hand; to old Indians the cold over the Pass is very severe, and too much care cannot be taken in providing against it. Ala, the Italian frontier, is reached about 11.20 A.M., and baggage is again examined; the train leaves at 11.50 A.M., arriving after a stoppage of half-an-hour at Verona (page 182), at Padua at 3.37 P.M., where a detention occurs until 6.20 P.M. (page 185), giving plenty of time for a dinner at the buffet, and passengers eventually reach Bologna on Sunday at 9.55 P.M., where a night's rest can be secured at the Hotel d'Italie, one of the best en route. The ordinary fast train leaves Bologna daily at 3.45 P.M. (page 190), but a special train is put on once a week for mails and passengers at 7.25 A.M. on Monday, arriving at Brindisi about midnight, in plenty of time to embark on board the steamer. If passengers are not pressed for time it is better to leave London on Thursday morning, arriving at Bologna on Saturday evening, and leaving by the 3.45 P.M. train on Sunday, arriving in Brindisi on Monday at 11.25 A.M. (fare from Bologua, to Brindisi, 83 lire 60 cents., or 3 lire 90 cents under £3. 10s.). The hotel at Brindisi, a new one, called the Hotel des Indes Orientales, is a very good one, and fitted up with excellent baths, an unusual luxury in Italian hotels.

Passengers from Brindisi will find only one train daily at 7 P.M., but the South Italian Railway Company start a special train for mails and passengers if the steamer arrives before 5 P.M., and it is advisable to go by this so as to arrive at Bologna in time for the 7.15 A.M. train on the following day, that being the only fast through train in the twenty-four hours. If this proves impracticable, passengers had better either remain at Bologna, or go on and sleep at Padua, where the same train will pick them up the next morning at 11.5 A.M. It is useless travelling by any of the slow trains, as time is thus passed in the train that might be more profitably spent in bed. The Northern Italian Railway Company will not furnish special trains for the mails, but send them on by ordinary slow train, should the express have left; considering the enormous subsidy paid by the British Government, it is to be hoped that a little pressure will be used to make this company expedite the mails, instead of unnecessarily detaining them eighteen hours, as was the case on the last occasion. The fare from Bologna by the express to Munich is 91 lire 82 cents., and the train arrives at Verona at 12.55, leaving there at 2.12 P.M., arriving at Ala at 3.28 P.M., the Austrian frontier, where baggage is examined, starting again at 3.59 P.M., arriving at 1.21 A.M. at Kufstein, the German frontier, where another examination takes place. This train is timed to leave at 2 A.M., reaching Munich at 5.15 A.M., and leaving at 6.40 A.M. At Munich passengers are booked to Aschaffenburg only (16 florins 21 kreutzers), where the train is due at 3.40 P.M.; here a ticket must be taken for Cologne (12 florins 12 kreutzers), where the train arrives at 10 P.M. Passengers can then book for London, arriving at Brussels at 5 A.M., and leaving at 6.30 A.M., eventually reaching London at 5.40 P.M.

The whole expense of the journey either way is a little under £13. Sovereigns pass everywhere; the exchange at the railway station in Belgium is 25 francs; in Austria and South Germany, 11 florins 55 kreutzers; in North Germany and Prussia, 6 thalers 20 groschen; and in Italy, 25 lire. The lire is the same as the franc, Italian coins being taken in Belgium, and vice versa.

Passports are not required throughout the journey, and passengers will find Bradshaw useful as regards the arrival and departure of the several trains; it is generally correct, and the pages quoted above will afford easy reference.

Carriages have to be changed at Brussels, Verviers, Cologne, Mayence, Aschaffenburg, Treuchlingen, Munich, Kufstein, Verona, Padua, and Bologna.

Arrangements have been made for through booking from Germany to Brindisi, and tickets can be obtained to Cologne from the South-Eastern Railway for £3. 8s. 10d., via Ostend and Dover, and from Cologne to Brindisi for £10, from the Agency of the South Italian Railway Company, 9, Billiter-street, E.C., and we are assured that passengers from Brindisi can now book as far as Cologne. Passengers either way are advised to apply for assistance regarding their baggage and information about the route, to Messrs. Grindlay and Co.'s Agent, Mr. S. G. Cocoto, Marina-street, Brindisi.—Home News, Jan. 6.

Miscellaneous.

BILLS ON INDIA.—At the next biddings for India Council bills, on Jan. 18, the amount offered is again to be £400,000.

OUDE AND ROHILKUND RAILWAY.—The directors of the Oude and Rohilkund Railway Company (Limited) have made a call of £2 per share on the shares of the new issue of £1,868,000 capital, payable on the 30th inst.

BRITISH INDIAN SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The British Indian Submarine Telegraph Company (Limited) are informed that a further reduction of 1½d. per ton has been made on the harbour dues at Aden. Vessels calling merely to deliver telegrams are not subjected to any harbour dues.

THE INDIA MUSEUM.—The Museum is open on Thursdays to visitors with special cards from members of the Council of India and heads of departments in the India-office, and to the public on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Saturday in each week. Entrance in Charles-street. Hours of admission, from twelve until four P.M. from October 1 to April 30; from twelve until five P.M. from May 1 to September 30. Visitors to the India-office on Fridays are also admitted to the Museum through the office.

LONDON CHARITIES.—Cowasjee Jehangier Readymoney, Esq., C.S.I., of Bombay, has just made the following timely gifts to London charities: To the Lord Mayor, for the City poor-boxes, £10; Middlesex Hospital, £10; Royal Free Hospital, £10; London Hospital, £10; Homœopathic Hospital, £10; Royal Hospital for Incurables, £10. 10s.; Houseless Poor Asylum, £10; Boys' Refuge, Great Queen-street, £10; Girls' Refuge, Broad-street, Bloomsbury, £10; Shipwrecked Mariners' Society, £10; Printers' Pension Society, £10; and Strangers' Home, Limehouse, £10. The public benefactions of Mr. Cowasjee Jehangier Readymoney during the last twenty-five years have, it is stated, exceeded £127,000.

RECRUITING.—It is reported from Chatham that recruiting for the various Indian and other corps, which has for some time past proceeded but slowly, has within the last week or two become very brisk, the several regiments at Chatham for which recruiting is now opened having lately received a considerable number of recruits. Recruiting has been recommenced for the Royal Engineers at Woolwich.

TROOPS ARRIVED AT BOMBAY.—The chartered troopship Tagus, 1,547 tons, Commander J. Gray, which left England on Oct. 28, arrived in Bombay harbour on the 9th ult. with the following officers and men:—Ridingmaster Matthews, 11th Hussars; Cornet Martin 21st Hussars; Cornet Trevelyan, 3rd Hussars; Capt. Pigot, 104th Regiment; Lieut. Oakes, second battalion 19th Regiment; Lieut. Lofthouse, 69th Regiment; Lieut. Hume, 79th Regiment; Ensign Stokes, 83rd Regiment; Ensign Really, 103rd Regiment; Ensign Harris, 106th Regiment; Ensign Barclay, 108th Regiment; Assist.-Surg. Ferguson, Quartermaster Courtney, 49th Foot; 6 sergeants, 3 trumpeters, 13 corporals, and 214 privates; also 22 women and 33 children.

DINNER TO SIR DONALD M'LEOD.—Sir Donald M'Leod, C.B., K.C.S.I., late Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, was entertained at dinner on Monday the 9th inst., at the Conservative Club by Colonel Nassau Lees. Among those present to meet the distinguished guest on his return after forty years' service in India were Sir Cecil Beadon, K.C.S.I., late Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal; the Hon. E. Drummond, late Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces; Sir Charles Wingfield, M.P., K.C.S.I., late Chief Commissioner of Oude; Mr. Herbert Domvile, Mr. W. H. Benthal, Private Secretary to the Duke of Argyll; Mr. J. W. Kaye, Mr. E. L. Bandreth; Mr. E. Clive Bayley, C.S.I., Secretary to the Government of India, &c.

CHINA GRASS FIBRE.—That the Bochmeria nivea, or China grass fibre, will, ere long, become a regular article of import to this country, is highly probable, both from the fact of the recent reward of the Indian Government for the invention of machinery suitable for its cleaning and preservation, and from the nature of the plant being such that the climate and soil of many of our colonies are quite suited for its culture. There is no doubt that it is well adapted for a variety of uses, and could, by careful preparation, be applied to purposes for which our present commercial fibres, though, to some extent used, are nevertheless, unsuited. The Chinese bestow an immense amount of care and labour upon its preparation, hence the very fine fabrics which are produced in that country. In Sumatra, also, much care is given to its cultivation and preparation; the stems are usually cut when they are about six feet high. They are sometimes allowed to dry before the fibre is taken from them, but the most common practice is to take it as soon as the stems are removed from the ground. A viscid gum is found on the stem which, in Macassar, is scraped off and used as a mild sort of arrow poison. In China three crops of the stems are usually obtained in one year, but the second crop is considered to yield the best fibre.—Nature.

SIR W. MANSFIELD.—Lieut.-General Sir William Mansfield is still in London, and has paid frequent visits to Mr. Cardwell and Lord Northbrook, and occasionally looked in at the Horse Guards to see the Duke. Report says that his stay in London is likely to be of some duration; in fact, it is whispered abroad that there is some intention to form a board of officers, on which Sir William would, no doubt, occupy a prominent place, to assist Mr. Cardwell in the administration of the army, which arrangement would, of course, in a great measure supersede the functions of his Royal Highness the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief. The idea seems to be that, as there is an Admiralty Board, there should also be an Army Board; but what is the Board of Admiralty really worth? Are we not indebted to the divided responsibility of "My Lords" for the loss of the Captain? People who believe in boards and vestries will, of course, be delighted. We, who believe in responsibility and administrative skill, feel astonished at the lack of faith in individual energy and resource which such an arrangement would seem to imply. We have heard of a Louvois, a St. Cyr, a Carnot, a Von Roon, a Wellington, and a Napoleon raising an army into a potent instrument, but never of a committee capable of doing anything beyond obstructing the operations of men of genius, and paralysing the energies of those who have the misfortune to be associated with them.—Broad Arrow.

THE RANGE OF GUNS.—Apropos of the siege of Paris, it may be interesting to note some of the longest ranges on record. At Shoeburyness, in 1856, the old smooth bore 68-pounder, with a charge of 16lb., and at an elevation of 27 degrees, threw a common spherical shell of 96lb. 5,600 yards. In 1858 a rifled Armstrong 32-pounder, at 33 degrees elevation, with 6lb. charge, threw a shot 9,153 yards. About the same time a 7-in. gun, rifled by Mr. Lynall Thomas, charge 25lb., elevation 37½ degrees, shot 176lb., ranged 10,075 yards. In 1864 a 13-in. gun, charge 70lb., elevation 23 degrees, shot 511lb., ranged 7,402 yards. The Woolwich 9-inch muzzle-loading rifled gun, at 33 degrees elevation, and with 43lb. charge, has thrown its common shell, with 18lb. of powder bursting charge, to a distance of 9,900 yards. The 8-inch Woolwich gun, with a charge of 30lb., and at an elevation of 16½ degrees, has thrown its shell 6,000 yards. During the Armstrong and Whitworth competitive trial, in 1864, very long ranges were occasionally attained. The 70-pounder breech-loading

Armstrong gun, firing a 70lb. shot with 9lb. charge, ranged at 15 degrees, 4,728 yards, and at 21 degrees 5,821 yards. The muzzle-loading Armstrong, firing a 70lb. shot with a 10lb. charge, ranged at 15 degrees, 5,291 yards, and at 21 degrees, 6,330 yards. The Whitworth 70-pounder attained the longest ranges, owing to its projectile being of comparatively small diameter; with a shot of 70lb, and charge of 10lb., it ranged at 15 degrees, 6,252 yards; at 12 degrees, 7,965 yards, and at 33 degrees, 9,480 yards.

THE SILK TRADE OF THE LAST YEAR.—Cantons have formed an extensive item in the business of the year; large arrivals direct and from Bombay continued to feed the market until the middle of the year, but as the silk was freely taken, rates were fairly maintained. The new crop, however, proving unusually abundant, a gradual but decided fall in prices occurred, and this, coupled with the fact that much of the silk was of serviceable quality, induced its adoption for purposes to which it had not been usually applied; and although imports have exceeded deliveries, there is no doubt the that silk has won favour, and at the present moderate quotations will command a current sale. The very finest sizes of long and short reel have been unusually scarce, and consequently at no time has the depreciation been in proportion to that of the coarser descriptions. Throughout the year Bengals have been difficult of sale, especially the "filatures," and the reduction in prices has been very considerable. These silks, like Japans, have suffered from the abundance of European silk; the closing of some continental mills, and the usual disinclination of our throwsters to engage these descriptions, have combined to affect them. Native silks of the coarse sorts were very scarce until the autumn, when a good supply of the rainy bund arriving, sales were made at moderate rates; manufactures are now fairly supplied, but we look for a speedy resumption of demand. There have been some arrivals of Persian silk, but it being entirely of the coarse descriptions, manufacturers have not shown a disposition to recommence its use, unless at prices which would leave excessive loss to importers.—From Messrs. Eaton and Sons' Circular.

THE PROPOSED NEW ENGINEERING COLLEGE.—A deputation from University College, London, consisting of Mr. George Grote, the president, the Hon. George Denman, M.P., Mr. Julian Goldsmid, M.P., and Dr. Storrar, members of the Council; Professor Fuller, C.E., Professor Williamson, F.R.S., and Mr. J. Robson, the secretary, has waited upon the Duke of Argyll, at the India-office, to present a memorial from the Council and the Senate of the College, on the subject of the proposed institution of a new Engineering College for the Indian Service. The interview with his Grace lasted upwards of an hour. The memorialists consider that the deficiency in the present system has arisen, not from any defect in the existing places of education, but from the injudicious system of examinations hitherto pursued, and from a want of sufficient inducements to well-qualified men to enter on the career proposed to them. The memorialists assume that the latter cause is recognised by the Government, for it is understood that it is in contemplation to augment considerably the salary upon which a civil engineer in the service of the Indian Government will hereafter commence his work. The memorialists believe the proposed college will be prejudicial to the public service by narrowing the field for the selection of candidates, and by limiting their means of obtaining the requisite instruction. They submit that the working of Government colleges has not been such as to recommend the creation of a new Government college, having practically the monopoly of appointments, and protected from competition. They suggest that such a step is at variance with the plan for throwing open to all her Majesty's subjects the opportunity of gaining Government appointments.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

MESSES IN THE NATIVE INDIAN ARMY.

The Pall Mall Gazette learns that the officers of native regiments in India are complaining bitterly of being obliged to maintain messes. Admitting the advantages of these institutions, they point to the fact, which experience has proved again and again, that a good mess can be maintained only by a large number of members, while even a bad mess cannot be maintained by a small number without a vexatious degree of expense. Apart from the superior economy obtainable in many ways by a large as compared with a small establishment, there is an important difference as regards the dinners. At a large mess many of the members pay without dining, and as a certain proportion of these may be always counted upon the cook is enabled to put upon the table a far better repast than could be given for the moderate sum to which the price of each dinner is confined by regulation. Thus it is that (assisted when there is any deficiency by recourse to the mess funds, to which all the officers subscribe in common) a military mess on a full scale is able to give good dinners every day and luxurious feasts upon "guest nights." It may be that this kind of entertainment is beyond the requirements of many members, and is even a strain upon the means of some, especially when a certain Procrustean arrangement as regards wine is taken into account. But it must be admitted that those who avail themselves of the organisation are far better provided for than they could be without it, supposing them to incur the same expenditure individually. In fact, the officer who belongs to a large mess—granting of course that it is one of those which do not make a speciality of extravagance—lives well at a comparatively cheap rate, and, in one way at any rate, has no right to complain. But how is it to be expected that a native regiment in India reduced—under the organisation which has made the "irregular" system regular—to seven officers, can be able to keep up a good or even a comfortable mess, without a cost greatly disproportionate to the value received? And two of the seven officers, be it remembered, do not properly belong to the regiment, but are only "doing-duty wallahs," who are always liable to be removed. Messes of some kind are of course kept up in native regiments, as they are ordered by authority; but they work very unsatisfactorily, the alternatives being very bad fare or very great expense; and their enforcement is resented by those who subscribe to them as an arbitrary and unjust tax.

Mails to India, &c.

The Mails to all parts of India, VIA SOUTHAMPTON, are now made up at the General Post Office, London, every Saturday at 8 A.M., and those VIA BRENNER and BRINDISI every Friday, at 6 P.M.

For Ceylon, China, Straits Settlements, &c., the dates of despatch up to the end of March will be:—

VIA SOUTHAMPTON, on the Saturdays, January 21, February 4 and 18, and March 4 and 18.

VIA BRENNER and BRINDISI, on the Fridays, January 28, February 11 and 25, and March 11 and 25.

In the case of Newspapers, Books, &c., the prepayment of the postage is compulsory. Parcels must not in any case exceed 5 lbs. in weight, or be of greater dimensions than twenty-four inches in length, and twelve inches in width or depth.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

CHALLENGE to the WORLD.—The Bristol Daily Times and Mirror, August 5th, has the following:—"Messrs. J. C. Swan and Co., of 16, Queen-square, in this city, have invented a pocket microscope, which is a marvel in all that such an instrument should be. It has great power, remarkable definition, and does not require focussing. The cheapness of the article will make it exceedingly popular when its merits are more widely known. It is called the 'Bristol Microscope,' and is a great credit to the inventor, as much for its extreme simplicity as its power."—The Western Daily Press says:—"The Bristol Microscope has a magnifying power of 20,000 times," &c., &c.—The Western Daily Telegraph says:—"The Bristol Microscope is the most compact and useful scientific instrument we have ever seen; it possesses extraordinary power, and is very easily managed," &c. The price of the Bristol Microscope is only 2s., or, free by post, with printed directions, for twenty-eight stamps.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, December 31; Agra and Madras, December 29; Calcutta, December 28.

THE Governor of Bombay was still continuing his progress through Kattiwar. On the 21st December his Excellency left Rajkote for Gondul, where the young Chief and his party had for some hours been awaiting his arrival, delayed, we are told, by the need of sending off letters for the Overland Mail. From thence he proceeded to Jaitpore and Joonaghur. The former place possesses some eighteen chieflets, whose united revenues amount to £80,000 a-year. At Joonaghur he was received in great style by the Nawab, who ranks first among the numerous chiefs of Kattiwar. Sir S. Fitzgerald was due at Bhownuggur on the 28th, where he was to lay the foundation-stone of the Alfred Hospital. His intended visit to Baroda will no longer be troubled by any cares arising from a disputed succession. The widow of the late Gaikwar has in good time discovered the groundlessness of her hopes regarding an heir, and so the new Gaikwar will rest in peace upon his lawfully gotten throne.

MR. CAMPBELL'S appointment to Bengal and the new scheme for localising part of the public expenditure supply the local journals with matter for languid discussion. The former event has generally been hailed without surprise, if not always with entire approval. The Friend of India "never looked upon Mr. Campbell in exactly the same light in which people look upon Sir William Grey," but even he admits that the former is not likely to fail "for want of ability and energy of character." With regard to the new financial reform, the Englishman points to the fact of the assignments from the Imperial revenue almost entirely balancing the charges transferred to the local Governments, as furnishing full security against the risk of any oppressive increase in local taxation. Further security in the same direction will also be found in the condition which forbids the local governments to raise fresh taxes without the sanction of the Supreme Government. One certain good involved in the new arrangements is the limit placed for ever on the tendency to increased expenditure in the public departments.

THE prosecution of Mr. Sharman for fraudulent dealings in connection with the building of Government House, Gunnesh Kind, near Poonah, has been advanced a stage by Sharman's committal to appear at the next Criminal Sessions at Bombay. Among the witnesses against him are two natives, who are said to have received a pardon for speaking out against themselves. They declare that Sharman filled in the measurements for their work, and afterwards helped himself to a percentage on their share of the profits. Sharman's advisers tried hard to get their client out on bail through the intervention of the High Court of Bombay; but Dr. Fraser, the magistrate who heard the case at Poonah, declined to take bail on certain of the charges. Since then Mr. Justice Bayley has issued a rule nisi, calling on Dr. Fraser to show cause why his prisoner should not be admitted to bail. And there for the present the matter stands. Meanwhile, Mr. Pritchard is pursuing his inquiries into the frauds committed at Poonah, not only with regard to Government House, but to the Kurrukwaslah Waterworks also, where a fraudulent contractor has already been scented out.

LORD MAYO'S exposure of the frauds at Allahabad has probably turned in his favour the tide of popular feeling in Calcutta, which had ebbed rather low on his first reappearance there this cold weather. At any rate his first levée, held on the 27th December, was well attended by the outside public.

THE Indian papers are discussing the probable future of Colonel Strachey. At one time it was thought that on Colonel Dickens's return from furlough, the other Colonel would take the new appointment of Minister for Agriculture. That however being now assigned—by popular rumour—to Mr. A. O. Hume, what is to be done, they ask, with Colonel Strachey? Of one thing, at any rate, people are certain—that he will not be shelved, and the general belief in Calcutta appears to favour the creation of another new appointment for his special benefit. It is given out with some confidence that he will come to England as Consulting Engineer to the India Office. Our Calcutta friends are always guessing; but somehow their guesses seldom hit the mark.

THE Madras Times for once however has guessed rightly. It expresses its firm belief that the Duke of Argyll does not contemplate sending a new Governor to Madras, if Lord Napier is willing to stay. We now learn that his Lordship is willing to stay, and has accepted the offer of a year's extended duty, at which we hinted as probable some months ago.

THE Oriental Gas Company has hitherto, we believe, divided a handsome half-yearly balance among its shareholders. But, like some of the companies nearer home, it seems to have latterly paid more attention to its own dividends than to the interests of the public which has to furnish them. Calcutta has been growing more and more restive as the light of its streets and houses has been waxing dimmer and more dim. At last the Trades' Association of the city brought their complaints before the Justices, who agreed with them touching the defective quality of the gas now used, but doubted whether the terms of the existing contract would enable the public to compel a larger or better supply from the monopolists with whom the contract was concluded. The only comfort we can offer to the Calcutta public is, that after all they are no worse off than the people who dwell in a London suburb, and try to read their evening newspapers on their way home by the North Kent Railway.

IT is said that the Indian Government has resolved to adopt the narrow gauge on all State Railways, including the line to Peshawar, but that nothing has yet been settled as to the exact width of the gauge. The battle of the gauges has for some time been raging in India, where opinion seems rather to weigh in favour of a broad gauge for military lines like that from Roree to Peshawar. It has even been proposed to lay both narrow and broad gauge rails along such lines. With regard to the first expenses there appears to be little difference between the gauges; it is only in the subsequent outlay on repairs and working that the difference tells in favour of the narrower gauge.

THE verdict of the Court-martial on Ensign Gilbert has not yet been promulgated; but the papers give the result of another court-martial held at Rawul Pindi on the 9th November, to try an officer for a somewhat similar offence. Lieutenant W. B. Adams, of the Royal Artillery, told his senior officer, Captain Hunter, on parade to "go to hell." The particulars of the case are not yet before us, but the Court condemned the prisoner to be cashiered, with a recommendation to mercy put forth apparently on the plea of mental derangement. The Commander-in-Chief at any rate has remitted the sentence, and Lieut. Adams was at once to be sent home in accordance with the recommendation of a medical board.

THE Madras papers record the death of Colonel C. H. Drury, Controller of Military Accounts at Fort St. George and Commandant of the Volunteer Guards. He was about to proceed on sick leave to Australia, when the liver disease from which he had long been suffering carried him off, after thirty years of Indian service, which included some active work in Central and Upper India during the Mutinies, from 1857 to 1859. In reward of distinguished services he obtained a staff appointment and finally succeeded Colonel M'Gown in the post he held at the moment of his death.

CALCUTTA is still looking out for a sanitarium less remote than Darjeeling and less moist than Cherra Poonjee. It has tried in vain Parisnath, Beercool, and several other places of seeming promise but small practical worth. Last autumn however Dr. C. Palmer, in company with some other gentlemen, made a sea-trip to a spot in the Ganjam district, not far from Gopalpore, which, in his opinion, would give Calcutta all she has so long been looking for. The new retreat lies among a group of hills fifteen miles only from the sea. It is called Mahendragiri, and rises to a height of 5,000 feet above the sea, by an easy ascent, well covered with grass, but nearly bare of jungle. On its slopes and top a hundred houses might easily be built, all facing the sea, and protected on the west from any unhealthy wind. There is a good supply of water on the hill, which has never been known to run dry. The rainfall is moderate; the temperature from twenty to thirty degrees lower than in the plains, with a daily range of only five or six degrees; and the wind generally blows from the sea, over a breadth of well-cultivated plain. It is encouraging to learn that good building stone may be found on the hill, while plenty of timber may be obtained from no great distance. Firewood is said to be abundant. Altogether the Doctor reports encouragingly, yet without embellishment, of the place he visited. It rests with the people of Calcutta to pursue the inquiry for themselves.

THERE ought to be no further risk of a misunderstanding between the Civil Service Commissioners and native Indian candidates for entrance into the Civil Service on the score of the latters' ages. It will no longer be possible for a young Hindu to subtract or be accused of subtracting a year or two from his true age when he comes over here for examination. Under the new rules issued by the Bombay Government, any native who means to compete for the Civil Service must prove the date of his birth before the magistrate of his district, or of Bombay if his family dwell there. The documents needed for this end will comprise the Horoscope, family books, tradesmen's account books showing entries relating to his birth, besides school-records and matriculation papers if he was ever at college. Oral evidence will also be taken from persons who know him and his family. The evidence thus collected will be arranged and forwarded by the magistrate to the Chief Secretary, who will grant or withhold the final certificate according to his judgment. If however the date of the young man's birth should have been formally registered by any qualified public officer, a certified copy of the register will be all the proof required of him. Young men are also warned that in future any declaration of age made on entrance into a university, college, or Government office will be deemed conclusive as to their real age, whatever assertions may be afterwards made to the contrary. These rules certainly seem to leave no loophole for the kind of practices with which native youths are rightly or wrongly credited. They are issued from Bombay, but similar precautions have already been taken or ordained for the other Presidencies.

A RECENT telegram from Calcutta informs us that Yakoob Khan tried to make his way through Persian ground by Herat, but was driven back by the Persian authorities. It was then that, finding all other outlets closed upon him, he asked for and obtained his father's pardon. He is probably by this time on his way to Kabul in the character of a penitent prodigal. A Russian telegram of an earlier date talks of the probable failure of our and Shere Ali's efforts to bring Afghanistan under one head, owing to a plot between Yakoob Khan and the son of the late Ameer. This story however must refer to a time long past.

THE death of Sir William Denison on Thursday will awake in some of our readers a passing interest in the Engineer officer who governed Madras from 1860 to 1866, and even for a few weeks of 1863-4 governed all India. As Governor of Madras Sir William had neither the talent nor the will to win for himself the kind of popularity which fell to the lot of his predecessor, Sir C. Trevelyan. He had no fondness for the natives whom he generally despised, and small love for the European settlers, who were always asking for help from the Government and setting the natives a bad example by claiming the political privileges of Englishmen at home. His lately published letters and despatches show this side of his character clearly enough. But they also depict him as a shrewd, independent statesman, of manly intellect, quick observation, varied culture, simple, active habits, and frankly concise speech. When he parted from Lord Lawrence at Calcutta he obtained from the latter a promise that "he would write to me whenever he had anything to communicate, in the plainest and simplest English." Always coolheaded, Sir William has a special claim on our remembrance for the service he rendered India during the few weeks preceding the arrival of Lord Lawrence at Calcutta, to replace the dead Lord Elgin. It was a critical moment in the Sitana Campaign. Chamberlain's march forward had been checked at Umbeyla by the growing numbers and desperate attacks of the hill tribes around him. He himself was badly wounded. The Punjab Government took fright, and urged the necessity of a retreat. Colonel Norman, the Military Secretary at Calcutta, pressed the same counsels on the Supreme Government, until an order actually went forth for the early withdrawal of Chamberlain's troops. Just then Sir W. Denison landed at Calcutta as acting Viceroy, went into the subject with his usual promptitude, and straightway saved India from an unpleasant crisis by converting the order of retreat into one of immediate advance. A little less decision of character at such a moment would have raised the whole of the Punjab frontier in arms against the British power.

"MISCEGENATION."

IT is not the first time that we have had occasion to call attention in these columns to the disastrous results which often arise from intermarriages between persons of English birth and Asiatics of any and every persuasion. Not that these are to be wondered at, inasmuch as such connections are, on the face of them, unnatural. Setting aside the total dissimilarity in the genius of the two races, the difference in their manners and social habits, and the unequal degree of civilisation at which they have respectively arrived, the fact that one only of the parties to a marriage is of the Christian religion should be an almost insuperable bar to the celebration of the ceremony.

The peculiar solemnity which is attached by us to the rite in question is unknown to Oriental nations; and a member of our English Church espousing a Mahommedan or a Hindoo—especially if the latter be not a permanent resident in our country—enters into a contract for the enforcement of which, at the hands of the other party, there is, in effect, no effectual remedy whatever.

We have been led into these general remarks by the perusal of a case which has recently been brought to the notice of the Secretary of State for India. We allude to that of Nawab Syud Ahmud Ali—a member, if we mistake not, of the English bar—and the English lady who claims to be his wife. As the matter is, however, still under official investigation, it would be premature in us at this juncture to pass any opinion on the justice of these claims. We shall simply sketch briefly out a few prominent features of the story.

In the Calcutta Englishman of December 19, 1865, the following advertisement appeared, under the heading of "Domestic Occurrences—Marriages:"—

"At Calcutta, on the 25th May, 1865, Syud Ahmed Ali, second son of the late Nawab Zuhower Jung Bahadoor, to Lucy Margaret, only daughter of Thomas Jones, Esq., Chester, England."

Of this document, we would remark that the proof of its insertion in the newspaper in question by Nawab Syud Ahmud Ali himself is necessary to give it that weight which its tenor deserves; but that, until its authenticity is disproved, and in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, the presumption must lie that the Mahommedan gentleman who figures in it as bridegroom was cognisant of and a party to its publication. And this view of the matter is strengthened when we find that, on Syud Ahmud Ali's arrival in England in 1866, he introduced the lady mentioned in the advertisement into fashionable society in London as his wife. It is self-evident, indeed, that she could have been received in it—and received in it she undoubtedly was—under no other title.

In the Times of April 19, 1870, an announcement appeared as under:—

"On the 17th April, at 34, Kensington-park-gardens, W., the wife of Nawab Syud Ahmud Ali, of a daughter."

It is hardly necessary for us to add that the wife here referred to is the same person whose marriage formed the subject of the advertisement first-mentioned.

One more of these manifestoes and we have done.

In the Standard of December the 2nd, 3rd, and 5th, we find the following:—

"Notice is hereby given, that I, the Nawab Syud Ahmud Ali, at present residing at No. 41, Kensington-park-gardens, in the county of Middlesex, will not be responsible for any debts or engagements which may be contracted by any person calling herself Lady or Mrs. Ahmud Ali, or representing herself to be my wife."

We have said that it was not for us, in the present state of the case, to give an opinion as to the abstract justice of the claims made by this Englishwoman against the Bengalee Mahommedan, in whose company she re-visited her native land. The validity of the ceremony upon which she relies to substantiate them is a question which can hardly be satisfactorily settled, save in a Court of Law; but upon one point we feel no obligation to observe any reticence, and that is with respect to the conduct of Nawab Syud Ahmud Ali, in introducing into the houses of English ladies, who incautiously gave him the entrée to them, a person whom he has subsequently denied to be his wife.

Excited by the rage to secure "Lions" for their parties, and especially "Lions" who dress in gorgeous Oriental costumes, Englishwomen are too apt to welcome to their homes and to introduce into the pure atmosphere which reigns there strangers from Oriental countries, of whose characters and antecedents they are altogether ignorant.

Such an episode as the present however should lead them to be more cautious in these respects, and to require those credentials from the picturesque "black man" without which it were vain for the common-place "white man" to seek admittance into their salons.

OUR RELATIONS WITH THE NATIVE FEUDATORIES.

THE last number of Fraser contains a clever, humourous, and suggestive article on Indian politics, with special reference to the financial questions of the day. Its satirical prelude, in which the writer attempts under the guise of a fable to sketch the kind of processes by which England has hitherto governed or misgoverned India, will amuse even those who are unwilling to take the satire home to its intended mark. Most people however will be inclined, we think, to admit that our Indian policy has been often marked by blunders and shortcomings, the result rather of ignorance, prejudice, misconceptions, want of real insight, than of wilful injustice or the desire of self-aggrandisement. After delivering his parable, the writer proceeds to a direct application of its main points. Much of India's fiscal embarrassments for instance under our rule has arisen from the great mistake we made in handing over a large part of her revenues to native tyrants of our own creating. The Marquis Wellesley would have prevented the mistake, but he was overruled at home, and in an evil hour began "on a large scale the institution of subsidising princes, which has since been so frequently imitated with less excuse." These princes were endowed with rights never dreamed of before. Beyond paying a small subsidy to the Imperial Treasury, or maintaining a military "contingent" at their own cost, they were allowed unchecked control over their respective dominions. Their subjects and their revenues were alike placed at their absolute disposal. The land-revenues of which a good half should have gone into the British Exchequer were treated as the absolute property of these irresponsible tyrants, and a pretty use have they generally made of their improper gains under the one-sided guarantee of their British neighbours. Their subjects have lost the right of rebellion against despots protected by the law. It is only in rare and extreme cases of oppression that the British Government steps upon the scene. Besides squandering the State revenue as he pleases, the Native prince may obtain the means of fresh extravagance by loans on the security of the State-revenue. And nothing but the limit of his income can prevent him from keeping up an independent army, strong enough in numbers if not in discipline to give our troops some trouble at a pinch, to say nothing of their usefulness in collecting revenue and keeping down refractory subjects.

It may be observed that this line of argument runs parallel to that of the able correspondent who, as an "Ex-Political Agent," has lately favoured us with two letters on the same subject*—not the last, we hope, that our readers will be invited to study. Both start from the same premiss, the assumption by native Indian princes of powers and privileges never for a moment surrendered to them by any of the Governments that preceded our own. Both in effect declare the possession of such powers to be "incompatible with the idea of one supreme controlling Government, and with the due exercise of the duties which in all ages and countries Sovereignty has been considered to carry along with it." Both strongly condemn the impolicy of aggrandising the princes at the expense of their subjects, and both alike maintain that the time for revising our relations with the former has already come. They differ from each other mainly in the different reasons that impel them towards a common conclusion. The "Ex-Political" laments that our failure to assert our paramount rights has enabled the native Princes to free themselves from all legislative control, and to claim exclusive jurisdiction within their own territories. The writer in Fraser, on the other hand, specially deplores the loss of revenue arising from the mistake of treating an Indian Prince as if he were absolute master of the land he rules, in the same sense that the Duke of Athol is absolute owner of his estates; and he maintains that no native prince within our territory should be allowed to keep up his private armies any more than Saxony after Sadowa was allowed to maintain a separate army entirely free from Prussian control.

For the complaints thus concurrently mooted there is only too much ground. In our dealings with the Native States we have made a series of blunders whose full significance only now appears. We are at a loss for new means of raising revenue, because we have never taken our share of the revenues accruing from the land in the Native States. We spend fifteen millions yearly on a native and European army strong enough to deal with the armies of native princes as well as to guard our own especial dominions. The ex-King of Oudh draws a pension of £120,000 a-year, because he was treated as absolute owner of his country's revenues. At this moment the surplus revenue of Mysore is being carefully put aside for the private purse of the minor in whose name we are administering the country. We have not even the satisfaction of knowing that of the eleven millions of land-revenue alienated to the private use of native princes, anything like a fair proportion is laid out for the public advantage.

What then is to be done? Is it possible to recover some of the ground we have thus unheedfully lost? Do the treaties hitherto made with the native princes absolutely debar us from trying to re-assert our manifest rights; to discharge our undoubted duties as the paramount power? On these points neither of the writers in question gives forth an uncertain sound. The "Ex-Political Agent" deems it "clearly impossible that any power holding the position the British Government now occupies in India, can long permit the continuance of those Imperia in Imperio which at present exist." He lays much stress on the duties we owe "to all ranks indiscriminately subject to our supremacy; to the inhabitants of Native States as well as to their feudal superiors." Let the native princes, he says, enjoy all rights and privileges to which they can fairly lay claim; but remember that we are equally "bound by our position and engagements to protect the interests" of their subjects, who, in the presence of our well-ordered rule, are growing less and less patient of a state of things fatal to the secure enjoyment of personal freedom, hereditary rights, and the fruits of a man's honest toil. From his point of view the writer in Fraser is equally thorough-going. He would begin by turning all the subsidiary princes into constitutional sovereigns. In Hydrabad for instance the whole private army of Arabs and Mussulmans should at once be disbanded, the Contingent should also disappear, and the capital itself be garrisoned at the Nizam's cost by troops from our own army. A handsome Civil List should be assigned to the Nizam; but every rupee besides should be laid out as public money for public purposes. Treat Sindia again in the same manner, and so on with all the other princes, until no army is left in the whole peninsula except our own, which might then be reduced to sixty thousand native and sixty-five thousand English troops. On the general soundness of these proposals, Anglo-Indian opinion is by this time pretty well agreed. It might still be a question whether sixty thousand native added to as many European troops would ever suffice to garrison so vast a country as India, or whether some part of the private armies might not be in a measure incorporated into our own. But of the principle of the reforms advocated we have no doubt whatever. It is simply intolerable that any native feudatory should be allowed to maintain an army of his own, and to squander millions of public revenue without contributing his full share to the maintenance of our Imperial army and to the furtherance of all great imperial ends, including the proper government of his own dominions. It is absurd to suppose that any existing covenants prevent us from exerting our inalienable right, as masters of India, to enforce something more than a merely nominal supremacy on the States within our borders, to see that each contributes its due share to the common administration, and to do away with all local armies except those which obey our own officers. Even the ruler of Kabul has had the sense to wage war against the military independence of his chiefs. The recent transfer of certain charges from the Imperial to the provincial account-books will not lighten by a straw the popular burdens. But how many millions might be saved yearly if the cost of maintaining a fourth of our Indian Army were divided among the numerous chiefs who have hitherto paid much more for the warriors of their own hiring? It is simply a question of salus populi suprema lex, before which no privileges enjoyed by native rulers to the detriment of the country at large should be allowed to stand.

THE NEW ENGINEERING COLLEGE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—With surprise and regret I observe in your Mail of the 17th instant that a deputation from University College, London, has been sent to protest against the establishment of the proposed new Engineering College for the Indian service. The deputation in question is totally ignorant of India and its wants. The extreme importance of the Indian Department of Public Works, and the deficiencies which at present exist in its organisation, both render desirable, nay, necessary, such an institution as that referred to. As for University College itself, it by no means fulfils the requirements of the case. Look at the system which prevails in it! Its professors are professors but in name. There is no salary attached to their chairs; consequently, they are in most cases absolutely obliged to employ their time in obtaining an income by other means. How, then, can they do justice to University College? University College certainly does scant justice to them! But, Sir, the requirements of officers destined for the Indian Department of Public Works in the matter of education are special, and apart from ordinary routine. Besides the instruction necessary for a civil engineer, a knowledge of Indian languages, and a general knowledge of India, its capabilities and specialities, must be added to it. In other departments of the public service, as in the military, no officer is entitled to take charge of a troop or company or to hold any staff appointment unless he has previously passed certain examinations in the native languages. The wisdom of such a rule is too self-evident for discussion. Yet Civil Engineers are not subjected to it, although of all others ability to make themselves understood by their native subordinates is actually essential! The nature of their duty compels them to have far more intercourse with natives than other employés of the Indian Government, and the consequence of non-ability to make their meaning understood in the vernacular, and to comprehend what is said to them, is that Government is continually suffering heavy pecuniary losses at the hands of dishonest men, who take advantage of their officers' incompetence to understand the true state of the case. I have personally known instances of understrappers in the Department of Public Works amassing large fortunes at the expense of Government by these means.

In 1846 the barracks in Loodhianah were built with such wretched materials that one stormy night they fell bodily to the ground and crushed to death no less than five hundred men, women and children. The modus operandi of the fraudulent subordinates is this. They themselves—nominally in the name of a third party—supply the materials for building, and supply them of the rottenest and worst description. They face the outer part of the wall with good brick, but fill up the interior with common dried mud. Then lime is mixed with chalk dust, and old timbers exposed to rain for years are purchased as cheaply as possible (often forcibly taken from the poor villagers in the name of Government), and used to support the roof. Such practises are usual and common amongst the clique of men attached to the office of an Executive Engineer, who divide the spoils thus nefariously gained amongst them. How is this? Because the engineer officer is unable to converse or understand the language! His routine of duty is this—he visits all the new buildings, gaols, &c., from six to eight A.M., and then during the heat of the day in an Indian climate he is obliged to return to his quarters, since he could not do otherwise without endangering his life. After this he is occupied in his office duties until sunset. If he ever detects a subordinate's malpractices, there is enormous difficulty in obtaining evidence in the face of an almost universal conspiracy to suppress it.

In 1844 Captain John Gilmore, Executive Engineer at Benares, was so worried and annoyed by his unsuccessful endeavours to convict some of his subordinates of frauds, of which he was morally certain, that he sank under the agitation it caused him. The only way to remedy these evils is to thoroughly educate young men as Civil Engineers, at the same time teaching them the ordinary Indian dialects, and giving them a general knowledge of the special requirements of the country to which they are to be sent. After arrival in India they should undergo a preliminary examination before being placed under a superior officer, to learn practically their profession. But in the first instance it is hard to see how they are to obtain the special education required without the establishment of an Engineers' College such as that now advocated.—Yours obediently,

January 23. BRICK DUST.

Notices of Books.

Scenes from the Ramayan, &c. By Ralph T. H. Griffith, M.A., Principal of Benares College. Second Edition. Trübner and Co. 1870.

Of all old Sanskrit poems, the Rámáyan or Rámáyana is the one which has struck deepest roots in the affections of Hindu readers in all ages, and which at the same time best adapts itself in an English form to the literary tastes of Englishmen at the present day. It is full of passages which repay translation into English verse, and Mr. Griffith did well in publishing two or three years ago his collection of choice extracts from the popular and pathetic poem of which Mrs. Manning has furnished an interesting outline in her excellent work on "Ancient and Mediæval India." Professor Williams, in his "Indian Epic Poetry," had previously discoursed at greater length on the same theme to which Mr. Talboys Wheeler has lately devoted a whole volume. A complete translation in verse of the whole of Valmiki's great poem is already promised us from Mr. Griffith's graceful and scholarly pen. Meanwhile, we offer a hearty welcome to a second edition of the extracts which have already won him the amount of popularity indicated by the rapid sale of the first. Read with the illustrative help of Mrs. Manning's twenty-second chapter, in which, by the way, they are frequently quoted, these really elegant extracts will convey to the general reader a very correct idea of the best things to be found in old Hindu poetry. Keeping with sufficient closeness to the meaning of the original, Mr. Griffith has produced a series of poetic pictures at once pleasing in themselves and worthy of the poem whence they were taken. His verse flows freely, with a good deal of rhythmical grace and lightness. The language, always simple like that of his model, never loses its strength or dignity.

The extracts carry us along the main stream of the story of Rama from the day when Vishnu promised to take upon himself a human form, with the view of punishing the hated giant Ravan, to that of Rama's reunion with his faithful Sita, the purest and sweetest, one might say, of poetic heroines, a woman such as Chaucer sometimes loved to draw. Here is the way she pleads for leave to follow the fortunes of her banished bridegroom Rama:—

> Fear not for me; when by thy side I go
> My happy feet will never weary grow.
> Though wild and rough the thorny ways I tread,
> They shall feel softer than a silken bed.
> When the wild wind with dust my raiment dims,
> I'll call it perfume to refresh my limbs.
> And when with thee in grassy glades I lie,
> Watching the landscape with delighted eye,
> Till by thy side I gently sink to rest,
> What thing on earth shall be so richly blest?
> The fruit thy dear hand gives me there to eat,
> Little or much, shall be like amrit sweet.
> Ne'er will I murmur at my lot, or grieve
> For mother, father, or the home I leave.
> My food shall be wild fruit, the flower, the weed;
> I will not vex thee by a word or deed.
> With thee is Heaven, where'er thou art not, Hell;
> O lead me hence that I in Heaven may dwell.

For good companion pieces we might quote Sita's bold defiance of Ravan, and her proud vindication of herself from the unjust taunts of her newly recovered lord. Very touching too is the scene—pp. 58—67—between Rama and his poor mother, who also wants to go with her son, though her steps be slow,

> As a poor cow, in her great love will run,
> Watching the wanderings of her little one.

A nobler chivalry than that of old Greece leads Rama to share in the performance of funeral rites over his slain antagonist—

> Hatred dies
> When low in dust the foeman lies.
> Now triumph bids our contest cease,
> And knits us in the bonds of peace.
> Let funeral rites be duly paid,
> And be it mine thy toil to aid.

How feelingly the poet could write of natural scenes, one more extract may serve to show:—

> 'Twas a day of early rain-time filling my young soul with love,
> When the sun had dried the earth-dews with his hot beams from above.
> * * * * * * * * * *
> Balmy cool the air was breathing, welcome clouds were floating by,
> Humming bees with joyous music swelled the glad wild peacock's cry.
> Their wing-feathers wet with bathing, birds slow flying to the trees,
> Rested in the topmost branches waving to the western breeze.
> Like the ocean many-twinkling, gold-shot with gay peacocks' sheen,
> Gleaming with the fallen raindrops, sea-bright all the hills were seen;
> While like serpents, winding swiftly, torrents from the mountains side,
> Hissed along, some brightly flashing, turbid some and ochredyed.

Besides this strings of pearls from the Ramayan, not a few of which have been added for the first time to this edition, Mr. Griffith has translated in Spenserian stanzas Kalidasa's picturesque poem of "The Messenger Cloud," once before translated by Professor Wilson. The new version will bear the comparison suggested. Altogether it is a volume to read through and leisurely, and in reading it you are continually tempted to remark how modern much of it looks, and to speculate on the mental affinities of the Sanskrit-speaking Aryan with the latest English outcome of the Western Goth. The highwrought but sometimes morbid morality of the poem, the sentiment that gushes somewhat freely about it, the frequent pictures of human love, constancy, obedience, tenderness, and all the virtues, join in commending Valmiki's poem to the sympathies of a public which can never bring itself to enjoy anything that lacks a strong moral seasoning. An older poem than the Máhábarat, it contrasts with that warlike epic in much the same way that the Odyssey contrasts with the Iliad.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

FINANCIAL DECENTRALISATION.

The Englishman points out that, in the first place, the assignment which it is proposed to make from the imperial revenue will so nearly equal the charges transferred to the local Governments that all fear of the change being accompanied by an oppressive increase of local taxation will, we are glad to say, be definitively removed. The departments of the administration which will, in the first instance, be made over for better or for worse to the local Governments, will probably be the Police, Education, the Medical Services, the Jails, Roads, Civil Buildings, Miscellaneous Improvements, Registration, and Printing. The allotments under these heads for the current official year were a little over five million sterling, and the assignment which will henceforward be permanently transferred to the local administrations will fall short of this sum by, we believe, less than £350,000. It is not inconceivable that these administrations might find it possible, under the new system, to economise to this extent; but, at all events, this sum represents the maximum loss the local Governments can suffer by the change—a loss which ought to be more than compensated by the enlarged powers they will wield, as regards both the selection of objects of expenditure, and its control, by the element of certainty which will be introduced into their affairs, in itself an important aid to economy, and by the exemption they will obtain from the delays and disappointments attendant on the existing system of circumlocution. Certain unavoidable conditions will, doubtless, accompany this transfer of financial control from the Supreme to the subordinate Governments. Existing rules regarding the salaries, allowances, and leave of absence of officers of particular grades and classes, will have to be observed. A limit will be put to the power of the local Governments to create new appointments, and they will not be allowed to create or abolish new grades or classes of officers. Accounts will have to be rendered to the Supreme Government, and last, not least, no power will be conferred on the local Governments to impose new taxes, without the previous legislative sanction of the Supreme Government, which will exercise the utmost caution in disallowing the imposition of all such taxes which would be of a nature to harass the people. At some future period, we believe, each Government will have definitively allotted to it its own establishment for Public Works; but for the present the Supreme Government will, in all probability, continue to provide this establishment, charging for it proportionally to the amount of the respective allotments for expenditure under this head. The financial control with which the Governments will be vested in this department will not, of course, relieve them from the obligation to keep in repair existing roads of importance; but in every other respect it will, we believe, be unfettered.

The Pioneer thinks it probable that the measures for what is called financial decentralisation which are about to be promulgated by Government will cause some disappointment at their limited scope. They might indeed, in our opinion, have safely and without unmanageable derangement of existing systems been carried further. Nevertheless, they deserve to be cordially welcomed such as they are, while there is no assertion of finality about them to preclude gradual extension. On the contrary, they necessarily involve ulterior development, and will make it easier. The true reformers—as Bentham pointed out, and we imagine he was sufficiently Radical——are not those who in everything clamour out for "thorough," but those who at each successive moment most practicably compromise between the habits of the present and the wants of the future. In this view, we cannot refuse to the present measures of Government the praise both of liberality and statesmanship. The departments of which the financial control will now be entrusted to the local Governments are, we believe, Jail, Police, Education, Roads, Civil Buildings, and minor public works, as well as some of the smaller heads of civil administration. To meet the expenses of these departments, a share of revenue will be relinquished to the various Governments, amounting to about one-third of the whole sums hitherto devoted to the total requirements of the local administrations. It must be remembered that of the remaining two-thirds, which will continue under the control of the Government of India, a very large proportion is necessarily appropriated to charges of judicial and executive administration which are virtually fixed beyond alteration. These heads of expense could not, under any circumstances, be interfered with by the local Governments, and to have included such charges among their attributions would therefore have been illusory.

ABOLITION OF KURRACHEE DEPOT.—Under instructions from Government, the Kurrachee depot is abolished.

THE LATE MR. HAYWARD.—DETAILS OF HIS JOURNEY AND DEATH.

The following information regarding the late Mr. Hayward we have received from a most reliable source, so there is every reason to consider it absolutely correct:—

Mr. Hayward first became known in Cashmere as a gentleman fond of travel and research amongst the wonders of nature, and subsequently as a member of, and agent for, the Geographical Society in London, to which he transmitted from time to time many valuable items of information regarding Lower Central Asia and the Himalayas, but before he had been very long in the country he was unfortunate enough to allow himself to run in debt, from which his friend the Dewan Kirpa Ram kindly relieved him.

His Highness the Maharajah showed a good deal of interest in the adventurous gentleman, whom he had constantly for a visitor, treating him in a very friendly manner, and from time to time gave him help and protection in travelling over the territories of Cashmere, but at the same time cautioning him of the extremity of danger he would be likely to suffer by crossing the frontier, where his Highness's friendship would be considered rather against him than in his favour.

Contrary to advice Mr. Hayward went into Yasseen during 1869. He was then very well treated by Meer Wulli, the Governor, and while remaining in that state his mind was filled with complaints against Cashmere, which were a constant topic of conversation; in fact, the whole past history of Meer Wulli's government was aired, with a view to enlisting Mr. Hayward's sympathy and help in moving the British for aid against Cashmere, more especially as related to the country of Ghilit, which the Meer wished to have restored to him.

From the many little details that have come to light, but which are too numerous to repeat, the impression made upon the natives of the frontier was to the effect that the kind treatment Mr. Hayward experienced in Yasseen was entirely due to the interested motives of the Chief, whose object was to make him a tool against his hereditary enemy; but in return for it a promise was given by Mr. Hayward that he would lay the whole matter before the Governor-General of India, and also state it in the public papers, which might be an additional help to his host; and he further informed the Chief that he was sanguine of a successful issue to the efforts promised.

On his return to British territory Mr. Hayward carried out his promises faithfully, but of course he did not meet with the success so confidently hoped for by his late entertainer.

When the late Lieutenant-Governor paid his last visit to Cashmere, our traveller then expressed his intention of visiting the source of the River Oxus and Bam Dera in Budukshan, and solicited his Highness' aid and protection, who in reply pointed out that the countries spoken of were as hostile to Cashmere as were the Swat Valley and the country surrounding the Kyber to the British, and that no express or implied authority could be given for such a journey, which could not hold out any hope of safety to European travellers, but that his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab was in the valley, and he should be consulted.

Mr. Hayward next waited upon his Honour, and in the meantime the Maharajah forwarded a paper to his vakeel, Dewan Nihal Chund, to be laid before his Honour, in which all the Maharajah's objections and doubts were expressed. The paper was duly submitted, but there was no order passed upon it, because in a public durbar which was held about that time the Lieutenant-Governor expressed himself as follows:—"Everything which was due to your Highness and to the British Government has been done by Mr. Hayward; both have refused to give official sanction to his scheme, but, as he is determined, he cannot be actually prevented going, so it rests with your Highness only to aid the project by supplies and protection as far as possible, but there will be no responsibility in the matter upon you."

Mr. Hayward received his supplies, and was duly protected all through Cashmere and into Ghilit, from which country he went into Yasseen. At this time the Kardar of Ghilit furnished a report of the success of the journey so far, and that the traveller had gone on to Yasseen. This was at once forwarded in original to the Punjab Government.

At the first meeting with Meer Wulli, he appeared to be full of kindness for his former visitor and present guest, but circumstances very soon altered.

The ostensible causes of offence were that, contrary to the ordinary courteous custom of the country, Mr. Hayward did not alight from his horse during his interview with the Chief.

That some presents had been brought for the Meer, but instead of presenting these at once, Mr. Hayward only referred to them, promising to open the boxes and give them as soon as he reached his quarters.

The last and most important matter was the unpleasant communication Mr. Hayward had to make to the effect that the British Government distinctly declined interference on behalf of the Meer. The bad temper of the Chief displayed itself then, and his avarice was thoroughly roused by belief in the wealth which he expected would be found in the traveller's boxes.

When Mr. Hayward was first surrounded and threatened by Meer Wulli's men, as it is believed more with a view to robbery than murder, the unfortunate gentleman became very nervous, and in the hope of freeing himself stated that if his safety was insured he could get Rs. 50,000 paid to the Meer as a ransom by the Kardar of Ghilit. This offer, instead of producing the anticipated effect, excited the fears of the chief, who, thinking if he put his victim to death no part of his crime would ever come to light, gave the order for him to be slain, and the same night took possession of the goods and books of the deceased.

The Kardar of Ghilit obtained information of the business, and reported on it to his Highness the Maharajah of Cashmere, who at once forwarded the original paper to the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, with a statement of the belief that the crime was committed through ill-will to Cashmere, and a proposal to send an army up to Yasseen in order to exact a terrible retribution.

In the meantime the Governor of Chuttral, Aman-ool-Mullick obtained further information, which he submitted to the Maharajah, also letting him know that Meer Wulli had been dismissed and had run away to Swat.

His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor considered it would not be advisable to send up an army to Yasseen, but recommended a strict investigation to be made of the circumstances surrounding the murder, and if possible to get back the effects of the deceased, more particularly his writings and books.

Mr. Drew, who is in the Cashmere service, was entrusted with the work of investigation. He accordingly went up to the frontier of Ghilit accompanied by a small force, just sufficient for his protection, and through his careful management the particulars herein given were learned, and the effects and books of the deceased obtained.

Some of the papers recovered by Mr. Drew threw a little fresh light on the matter, and directly implicate Aman-ool-Mullick, the Governor of Chuttral, as being one of the principal movers in the affair, while Meer Wulli occupies only the second place as having been a mere tool; and there certainly appears to be a ground for this assumption, if it is considered that the Governor of Chuttral could have arrested Meer Wulli instead of simply dismissing him, and that the place of refuge of the murderer is in the dominions of the Akoond of Swat, who is a blood relative of Aman-ool-Mullick's.

The whole of the documents are in the hands of Government, and doubtless some official action will be taken by it.—Mofussilite, Dec. 27.

Miscellaneous.

THE BUDGET.—The Pioneer confirms the report that Government intends this year to bring forward the Budget early, in order to admit of a full and unhurried discussion of such financial measures as it may contain.

SCHOOLS OF ART.—The Supreme Government has sanctioned Rs. 15,000 a year, and whatever else may be obtained from private sources, including fees, for the support of the Art School at Madras. The School of Art in Calcutta costs Rs. 19,000 per annum, exclusive of the expenditure of the fees realised.—Calcutta Examiner.

THE PESHAWUR FAIR.—From accounts received, the Pioneer fears the Peshawur fair has not this season kept its last year's promise of success. If, as we are told, the total sales have not exceeded three lakhs, there is indeed a falling off. But the display of goods was manifestly less than last year. Then, for instance, Cashmere sent a great stock of shawls and wools, while this year that interesting region was almost entirely unrepresented at Peshawur. Even with regard to such goods as were brought, the merchants complained that there were no purchasers. It would be premature to despair, but thus far it is clear that the fair has failed to secure a solid popularity.

INOCULATION.—The Pioneer rejoices that Dr. Charles' scheme for spreading the practice of inoculation has been peremptorily rejected by Government. "The memorandum of the late Inspector-General of Hospitals in Bengal appeared to us conclusive on the question. He established, in our opinion, in the first place, that inoculation offers no better security against small-pox in the subject of the operation than good vaccination; and in the second place, that inoculation often actually causes local outbreak of small-pox, inasmuch as it is practically impossible so to isolate inoculated patients as to securely circumscribe the disease. It is true that Dr. Charles suggests certain measures for this purpose, but it is sufficient to reflect on their complication in order to be convinced that their effective application could not always be counted on. Under these circumstances, we welcome the distinct language of the Lieutenant-Governor, that 'to recognise authoritatively the pernicious system of inoculation would be a decidedly retrograde step.' It remains that the names of inoculators in each district should be carefully registered, in order that, in case they should refuse to be instructed and enrolled as vaccinators, their proceedings may be jealously watched."

RAILWAYS.—A new difficulty that has arisen will for a time impede the completion of the bridge over the Ganges River at Cawnpore. The O. R. Railway Engineers are said not to have left sufficient waterway in constructing the bridge, and Government has appointed the Superintendent of Irrigation to inquire who is right. The dispute may not be settled for several months.

SINDH AND THE PUNJAB.—"Some of our contemporaries," the Pioneer writes, "are very painstaking in discussing the terms on which Sindh is to be united with the Punjab. Our information, on the other hand, leads us to believe that no such union is contemplated at all—at least for a long time to come; and the conference between the dignitaries of the two provinces has had for its object, unless we are mistaken, the clearer demarcation, not the obliteration, of their mutual boundary."

ROORKEE.—The Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces has passed a high eulogium on the native students of the Thomason College at Roorkee. At the last annual examination of that institution two native pupils of St. John's College at Agra obtained the Assistant Engineer's certificate, and were tenth and twelfth on the passed list. Of the English students who distinguished themselves at the same examination may be mentioned Messrs. Greenwood and Blochmann, and Captain Branson and Lieutenant Carey.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—His Excellency Lord Napier of Magdala has halted for some days at Bhaugulpore in order to clear off arrears of office work, which his extended and rapid progress had made somewhat formidable. It is understood his Excellency's future movements and halts will be in the following order:—Bhaugulpore to Colgung, 1st January; Caragola, 2nd; Selligorie, 3rd; Darjeeling, 4th to 7th; Julpigoree, 8th; Cooch Behar, 11th; Buxar, 13th and 14th; Doobree, 21st; Tezpore, 25th; Gowhatty, 26th to 28th; Shillong, 1st to 4th February; Sylhet, 7th; Cachar, 9th; Chuttuck, 11th; Dacca, 13th and 14th; Kooshtea and Calcutta, 17th February.

DEATH OF MR. G. KELLY, PUNJAB POLICE.—The announcement of the death of Mr. George Kelly, of the Punjab Police, will have been received by our readers with deep regret. Mr. Kelly was an officer of the first rank in abilities, and an honour to the Uncovenanted Civil Service of the Punjab. His services generally, and the specially public-spirited manner in which he exposed himself during the trying cholera times of 1867, received marked commendation from Government. A career of great usefulness and promise has been cut short at the early age of thirty-two, and we feel quite sure that his own department of the public service feels his loss quite as much as do his numerous private friends.—Indian Public Opinion, Dec. 20.

INDIGO.—We learn from Messrs. Moran and Co.'s market report that the price of fine indigo has declined by not less than from Rs. 5 to Rs. 10 per maund. This is attributed to the circumstance that the very general excellence of the season's indigo was recognised too late—i.e., after most of the large orders for Russia had been executed. Competition was accordingly less keen than for the finer qualities it would otherwise have been. The total sales since last notice have amounted to 2,700 chests. On the whole, it may be said that Bengal and Tirhoot have done well this season—certainly far better than was to have been expected—while Benares and Oude indigo has proved hardly so good as usual.—Pioneer, Dec. 23.

CONVICTION FOR MURDERING A EUROPEAN DURING THE MUTINY.—On the 20th inst. Kureem, a butcher, and two others were tried by the Sessions Court on a charge of murdering Mr. Boilard at the outbreak of the mutiny here in 1857. Kureem was convicted, the assessors concurring, and sentenced by the Judge to transportation for life. The sentence requires confirmation by the High Court. Mr. Boilard carried on business in the premises now occupied by Messrs. Hill and Co. It appears that he had taken refuge in the cellar (teykhanas), and came out, on the rioters promising to give him a safe conduct to the fort. One, by name Salaroo, a wretch who escaped justice from the absence of important witnesses some years ago, but has since died, then shot Mr. Boilard, who tottered towards the stables, but had hardly reached them when he was struck down by a blow with a tulwar and killed, some of the witnesses state, by Kureem himself. The other two men (who were not butchers) were acquitted, the evidence against them being comparatively weak. It is consolatory to know that Kureem is likely to meet at last with a portion of his deserts.—Pioneer, Dec. 24

COLONEL STRACHEY.—It was rumoured some little time back that on the return from furlough of Colonel Dickens, Secretary to the Government of India in the Department of Public Works, Colonel R. Strachey, then officiating for that officer, would be appointed to the projected Secretariat of Agriculture. But, as we have already stated, it having come to be understood that Mr. A. O. Hume will be the first Agricultural Secretary, there has arisen some little speculation as to how Colonel Strachey is to be provided for. I may, therefore, not be amiss to say that the probability is that that able and gallant officer's service in this country will terminate on the return of Colonel Dickens, that is, early next year. Colonel Strachey, however, we are glad to be able to think, will neither be "shelved" nor put on the "pension list." The well-informed say that he is certain to be appointed Consulting Engineer to the Secretary of State for India, with a bureau at the India House! An enviable billet of this kind is not likely to be vacated in a hurry by even the ably restless colonel, and Consulting Engineer to the Home Government of India he will probably remain until another turn of the wheel in his favour may cause him to be sent out again, not to a Secretariat, but as Chief Commissioner of a non-regulation province, member of the Executive Council, or in the still more exalted capacity of a Lieutenant-Governor.—Calcutta Examiner.

AN ILL-USED ORACLE.—There is an amusing story told by the Pioneer as current just now in Chumba. Rajah Gopal Sing, it is said, anxious to know whether he really was as much detested as people pretended, determined to inquire at the fountain-head—i.e., of the most popular Davee, or idol, in the State. The idol, by the mouth of one of its chelas, pronounced that it was a sad fact, and, moreover, Gopal Sing's raj would not continue two months longer. With a fine sense of justice, Gopal Sing, in all his indignation, allowed the audacious chela to go scatheless, considering him merely as the innocent medium of the insolent oracle; but upon the idol itself he took sharp revenge by the infliction of a sound flogging.

TORPEDO EXPERIMENTS AT THE HOOGHLY.—On the 22nd of December, we learn from the Pioneer, General Norman and the members of the committee appointed to consider and report upon the utility of torpedoes for the defence of rivers and harbours, took steamer and went down to Garden Reach, where several instructive experiments were conducted by Colonel Hyde, R.E., the Mint Master. "It was satisfactorily shown, among other things, that our authorities can supply torpedoes sufficient to destroy any boom that could be laid across a river; and it was also found that, owing to the strength of the tide, it would be exceedingly difficult to defend the Hooghly by fixing a stationary torpedo in the stream. It is not likely that any enemy will ever attempt to force a passage up the Hooghly, but it is quite within the bounds of possibility that the harbours of Bombay or Moulmein may be threatened by a hostile fleet on some future occasion. The committee purpose renewing their experiments as soon as the necessary arrangements can be completed."

THE KING OF BURMAH "TAKEN IN."—The uneasiness which a few weeks ago managed to spread itself over the country has, it would appear, crossed the Bay of Bengal, and is now creeping across Burmah. A European has, it is said, gained the favour of the King by guaranteeing to procure for him the cession of Pegu, Arracan, and Tenasserim—the cession, in fact, of British Burmah! The King has the misfortune to be ridiculously credulous, and even this monstrous fable is read by him as "a tale from real life," and both he and his Court are said to be looking forward to the speedy reunion of the country under Burman rule; and the permission given to the King to present to the Shoay Dagon Pagoda a golden umbrella set with precious stones is looked upon as a sign that the Government, when the time arrives, will be favourable to the change. This simplicity is refreshing, but it is also dangerous; for in February next a large body of Burmese —on dit 10,000 men—will escort the royal present to its destination, and if they are allowed to carry arms, the presence of 10,000 Burmese subjects in Rangoon is most undesirable. The King has agents scattered throughout the country, and a newspaper of his own which commands a very wide circulation; so that if the suspicions of his intention, which it is still found impossible to dismiss, are in the least degree justifiable, great mischief may be done before the British authorities could prevent it. Disquieting rumours are just now getting into circulation there, but as they have at present as little tangible foundation as they had in this country, it may be hoped that they will disappear as utterly and as speedily from Burmah as they did from India.—Pioneer, Dec 23.

THE CASE OF MR. KIRWAN.—CONVICTION OF HURRI RAM FOR PERJURY.—We have just heard that Hurri Ram, one of the witnesses who was produced by the prosecution in the late Criminal Sessions in re Crown v. Kirwan, and who was subsequently charged and tried for giving false evidence in the Chief Court, has been convicted by the Sessions Judge of Lahore, and sentenced to seven years' rigorous imprisonment and fine. As the prisoner intends to appeal we shall refrain from making any comments upon the merits of his case; but the utter uselessness of having assessors was so clearly shown in the present trial that we cannot avoid giving publicity to the following well-authenticated account of what occurred in Court. It appears that after the trial was concluded and the counsel for prisoner had addressed the Court, the assessors, three native gentlemen, were called upon to state their opinion. After some side talk their spokesman represented that this was a case where Europeans were concerned, and that it was impossible for them to decide it; that European assessors ought to be nominated in their stead. This representation having failed to enlist the Court on their side, the assessors made a second, viz., that the allegations made by the prisoner affected one Chimmun Lal, who was a native hakim, and that it was quite impossible for them to record any opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner under such circumstances. This objection being likewise overruled, two of the assessors at last returned a verdict of "guilty," while the third was courageous enough, despite the presence of the much-feared Chimmun Lal, to record "not guilty." The above is but one instance out of many which can be adduced to show that the opinion of native assessors, as a rule, is quite worthless; and as Mr. Fitzjames Stephen is now bringing an amended Code of Criminal Procedure before the Legislature, we would suggest that the mode of trial by assessors be entirely abolished. Their opinion is not binding upon the presiding judge, and when it is notorious that in nine cases out of ten they never give an independent opin it is difficult to see the necessity for keeping up the farce of plac hem on the bench.—Indian Public Opinion, Dec. 23.

IMPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Dec. 28.—The greater part of the past week has been devoted to holiday purposes, and business has not been much attended to since our last. To-day there is a rather better feeling apparent in the market, though so far it is only manifest in our improved demand for the lighter makes of Grey Shirtings, say up to 6 lbs. Stocks in dealers' hands have now become considerably reduced, and, were holders to show more firmness, it is probable a more active demand would set in, and some improvement on present very unremunerative prices be experienced. The Twist market continues very depressed.

THE COURT-MARTIAL ON ENSIGN G. P. GILBERT.—THE SUMMING-UP.

The Court assembled at Madras on December 10, to hear the summing-up of the evidence by Colonel G. F. Shakespeare, the Deputy Judge Advocate-General, who addressed the Court as follows:—

Colonel Parish, and officers of the Court-Martial,—It now becomes my duty to sum up the evidence in this case, which I will endeavour to do as briefly as possible.

The prisoner is charged with insubordination in having at Bellary, on September 19, 1870, disobeyed the lawful command of Lieutenant-Colonel Henry Friend Kennedy, his superior officer, commanding the parade, by refusing to advance when ordered to do so, saying in a loud voice, "No, I'll be damned if I do," or words to that effect, at the same time throwing his sword violently away.

The prisoner in his address has stated that the words alleged to have been spoken, and the act of throwing away his sword, should have no weight with the Court in their finding as to his guilt or innocence; but I would submit to the Court whether they can reasonably exclude these matters from their consideration in determining whether the prisoner is or is not guilty of the charge of "disobedience of lawful command," under the 38th Article of War. The question which the Court will have to decide is, whether a lawful command was given, and whether the prisoner did or did not disobey that command, without reference to any amount of obedience that may have been rendered by him previous to the command referred to. And then it will be for the Court also to say whether the words, "I'll be damned if I do," accompanied with the act of throwing away his sword, were uttered in regard to the order to advance, or what meaning is to be attached to them? The Court will observe that they are said to have occurred simultaneously with the act of disobedience. What meaning, then, will the Court attach to them? Are they to be taken as a distinct refusal, or are they not; and, if the former, a refusal to do what?

The following are some of the points which more immediately bear on the charge. Colonel Kennedy deposes: "To the best of my belief Ensign Gilbert did not move. I then said, 'Ensign Gilbert, advance,' and, seeing he did not move, I added the words, 'Quick march!' Instantly Ensign Gilbert made a half-turn towards me, and said in a loud tone of voice, 'I'll be damned if I do,' at the same time throwing away his sword to his right front."

Colour-Sergeant Lynch, in his evidence, says, "he (alluding to Ensign Gilbert) was then ordered by Colonel Kennedy to dress up, which he obeyed. The order was repeated by Colonel Kennedy, which he obeyed. The Colonel then addressed me, saying: 'Colour Sergeant, you are drill-sergeant of the battalion, show Ensign Gilbert his place.' I told Ensign Gilbert to dress up, which he did a short pace. Colonel Kennedy then said to Ensign Gilbert, 'Quick march, sir,' which he did not obey. He then repeated the same command, upon which Ensign Gilbert replied, 'I am damned if I do,' at the same time throwing down his sword."

This same witness, in answer to a question put to him by the prosecutor as to what distance the prisoner was from him when he used the words alleged in the charge, says, "about two or three paces, I should think;" and Captain Borthwick, when asked by the prisoner as to whether in obedience to the colour-sergeant's direction he moved up to his proper place to dress his company, says, "I can't say exactly the number of paces that he moved up, but I should say he was in his proper place, or very nearly so."

I have considered it necessary to allude to this point, because some stress appears to be laid in the defence on the circumstance that the prisoner had advanced to the spot wherein he was ordered to dress his company, and that is alleged to be the command with disobeying which he is charged; but it is for the Court to say whether, even supposing this is proved, it really touches the point at issue.

Evidence has been adduced on the defence to show that on the morning of Sept. 19 Colonel Kennedy's tone and manner were "harsh and aggravating," "most excited and aggravating," "very aggravating and overbearing," "most irritating," "loud and bullying," "bewildering," "confusing," and the prisoner has told you that it was owing to the treatment and provocation he received that he lost his self-control that morning. His conduct as an officer and a gentleman, as the Court are aware, have been spoken to by several witnesses in the highest terms—in fact, his character seems to have been unexceptionable up to the time of this unfortunate occurrence. These circumstances, however, if established to the satisfaction of the Court, would go to extenuate the offence—not to disprove the charge; and if the Court consider them established, they, of course, can give them such weight as they think proper in estimating the gravity or degree of the offence; but the charge being one which rests upon a fact, and not on a mere imputation, the Court, in coming to their finding, should first determine, according to the evidence before them, whether the fact has been proved or not, and find accordingly.

On the conclusion of the address the Court was closed to decide on the finding, which, with the whole proceedings, will have to be submitted to the Commander-in-Chief in India for approval.

Miscellaneous.

RICE IN BURMAH.—The prospects of the rice crop in Burmah, we learn from the Pioneer, are this year magnificent. There are, we are told, about 40,000 acres more under cultivation than in the previous year, while during the present season there has been little or no damage done to the standing crops. The total increase of productive land will therefore be about 70,000 acres, which, taking the average production throughout the provinces, should give an increase of about 3,500,000 baskets. Rice merchants, if they are only careful and do not allow reckless trading to run away with their profits, ought this year to be able to laugh at the hateful rice duty.

SIR C. SCOTLAND.—We learn from the Madras Times that Sir Colley Scotland will, in all probability, remain at Bangalore during the whole of next month, as his health is not yet quite re-established.

DEATH OF LIEUT.-COLONEL DRURY.—Lieut.-Colonel C. H. Drury, Controller of Military Accounts and Commanding Officer of the Volunteer Guards of Madras, died at that city on the 24th December. The deceased officer had been suffering from liver complaint, and was to have embarked for Australia, on sick leave, on the day of his death.

EDUCATIONAL.—Lady Napier presided at the late annual examination of the Famale Schools connected with the Free Church of Scotland Mission in Madras. There was a large attendance of friends and supporters of the Institutions. The girls from the Day School, the Balica Patsala, the Boarding School and the Black Town School were present. The proceedings were opened with prayer, after which the children were examined, a report of the working of the Schools was then read, and the prizes distributed. The ceremony was very pleasant.

ECCLESIASTICAL.—The Madras Mail draws attention to the anomaly that exists in the furlough allowances of the Ecclesiastical Department. An assistant chaplain can at any time of his service obtain two years' sick leave to England and will be allowed to draw £350 a-year; a senior chaplain can claim £500, and an archdeacon £600 per annum on medical leave. But a bishop forfeits the whole of his allowance if he goes home on sick leave, unless he has completed fifteen years' service in India. Bishop Gell, of Madras, who went home some time ago, is therefore in a worse position than an assistant chaplain would be under the same circumstances.

DEATHS FROM WILD BEASTS.—During the year 1869 not less than 311 persons were killed in the Madras Presidency. Of the killed 69 were males and 242 females. The districts in which the greatest ravages were committed are Ganjam, South Canara, Joypore, Coimbatore, Kurnool, and Vizagapatam. In Coimbatore one tigress during a series of years destroyed 140 people. She was killed at last by Major Davies, of the police, "to the great joy of the villagers, who paraded their dead enemy on a car through the streets with music, and gave a nautch in honour of their gallant deliverer."

IMMUNITY FROM CHOLERA.—Some very important statistics on the alleged immunity from cholera of persons working in gunpowder factories has been communicated by the Sanitary Commissioner of Madras to a local journal. He says that, according to Colonel Cadel, R.A., the artizans in English factories also believe in the preservative power of gunpowder. A careful search in the Madras records of the last twenty years shows that although the workmen have not been free from cholera that it does not disprove the alleged fact. Among 3,393 native workers there have been only twelve fatal cases of cholera in twenty years, and the mortality has been limited to a single case in the year, which proves that cholera could not have been epidemic in the factory. The ratio of deaths is 3·5 per thousand, whereas Mr. Balfour's statistics of cholera in the Madras native army is 4·3 per thousand. This ratio in favour of the gunpowder workers would doubtless be greater if the men were living in as healthy places as the native troops. Still the comparison is on too small a scale for general conclusions.

STATION TALK.

GONDUL, Dec. 21.—Crowds of people, from an early hour in the morning till long after mid-day, all anxiety to see a real live Governor Sahib, lined both sides of the road for a considerable distance from the bungalow set apart for his Excellency, and great was their disappointment to find that they had hardly got to their respective homes than the booming of a big gun gave notice of the Burra Sahib's having arrived. Before noting what has been done to welcome his Excellency to Gondul, for the information of your readers it may not be amiss to offer a few general remarks on the State itself, as well as this its chief town. Many of your readers will remember that the late Thakore visited Bombay last year, to confer with his Excellency regarding the restoration of a wretched favourite, disgraced by order of the Political Agent and by force of public opinion; and they will also remember that a very few days before his intended departure from Bombay he suddenly died, his son, an interesting little child of five years of age, succeeding in due order to the gadee. Gondul being considered of more importance than Limree, besides being more convenient to Rajkote, Captain Goodfellow, First Assistant Political Agent, Aden, on relieving Captain Lloyd, now on furlough in England, received charge of this State in lieu of Limree, and, during the short time he has been here, has effected many improvements, and made his presence felt quite as much as at Rajkote, over which he also has charge. Though small, the State is rich, its annual revenue since Captain Goodfellow's advent being about ten lacs of rupees; and this, despite the greatly diminished price of cotton, the chief product of the State. Whether Captain Goodfellow will be able to give as good a return this year, with the terrible state of the cotton market and miserable yield of cotton, is very doubtful. The country, with the exception of a few hills, is very flat, the soil for the most part being a rich black. Several roads are now under construction, but what the State requires to fully develop its resources is rail-roads. So far as I can make out, the people here are very anxious to see the Gogo, Bhownuggur, and Gondul line carried through, and infinitely prefer it to that projected from Veravul. The road from Rajkote here sadly wants bridging, and is, as it now stands, very awkward to travel on by night, especially in a horse trap. The town, built on the Gowalee river, is walled, and contains now a pretty contented population of somewhere about sixteen thousand souls. Its streets are narrow and irregular, but in much better condition than formerly, the houses being remarkably clean and tidy. The old palace, overhanging the river, is at present undergoing extensive alterations, and will, when finished, be, though small, handsome, and, what is of quite as much consequence, comfortable. Perhaps the principal feature about it is a very handsomely carved arcaded verandah, running along the whole front of the building. The new palace, which is in the same enclosure with the other, and is at present the residence of the young Prince and his mother, commonly called the Bhai, has nothing about it particularly worthy of notice. The bungalow where H. E. is residing is a well-built, comfortable, English-looking house, snugly situated in the middle of a fine garden a little to the west of the town, and is the residence of Captain Goodfellow. The followers of Swami Narayan are erecting a very handsome temple here; they want about Rs. 15,000 to complete it, but it would appear the funds are not available, and consequently work has stopped. On the south side of the town lines are being built for the mounted police, and to the west a jail and police lines. The jail is on the same principle (octagonal) as that at Bhownuggur, though on a smaller scale. The police lines are in four blocks, forming a square, and each containing twenty six separate rooms. These buildings are being erected by the same contractors who built the Rajkoomar College, and who were only a few days ago so highly complimented by his Excellency and Mr. Booth for the way in which they had finished that work. There is a traveller's bungalow and dhurumsala here; also an English and vernacular school, attended by somewhere about two hundred and fifty boys. From the top of the old palace a fine view is had of the famous Girnar hill with its temples. It does not look more than ten miles from here, though in reality nearly forty miles, to the south-west. It is evident considerable efforts have also been made here to give his Excellency a fitting reception. On nearing the town is a very pretty rustic arch, composed chiefly of evergreens, and having for its motto, in marigold flowered letters, the words "Welcome to Gondul." At the entrance to the bungalow, where his Excellency is lodged, is another very handsome arch, with a Union Jack floating at either side, and having for its motto the words, "Welcome the Governor." Similar arches have also been erected at the northern and western gates giving his Excellency a hearty "Welcome to Gondul." Arrangements not unlike those at Rajkote, though on a smaller scale, have been made for illuminating both town and suburbs; the most noticeable feature in these arrangements being an innumerable number of comical little flags with the word "welcome" printed on each, stuck up on the illumination poles all over the town. Almost immediately upon his Excellency's arrival the young Thakore paid his formal visit, which was returned by his Excellency soon after.

Miscellaneous.

THE RAJKOOMAR COLLEGE.—We learn that Mr. Moreshwar Atmaram, son of Dr. Atmaram Pandoorung, Bombay, has been appointed Professor of Science in the Rajkoomar College at Rajcote.

MILITARY.—In accordance with instructions from Army Headquarters, the detachment 1-2nd Queen's Regiment, under orders for Belgaum, would march from Sattara on the morning of the 10th January.

ADMINISTRATIVE.—At the instance of the Bombay Government the Supreme Government has sanctioned the abolition of the cattle farm at Cawie and of the cattle breeding establishment at Allygaum in this presidency.

SHIPPING.—The ship Ellen Bates, 1,015 tons, Captain Stewart, sailed on Monday, Dec. 26, for Liverpool, with 6,218½ bales cotton, 39 bales wool, 321½ cwts. linseed, 388 cwts. horns, 175 cwts. hemp, and 165 cwts. orchilla-weed. The ship Parana 750 tons, Captain J. England, sailed on Dec. 30, for London, with 2,300 bales cotton, 141 cwts. sursee seed. 266 cwts. horns, 99 cwts. coffee, 590 cwts. galls, 581½ cwts. gum, 40½ cwts. aloes, and 285½ cwts. olibanum.

DESTRUCTION OF ART REMAINS.—At the last meeting of the Bombay branch of the Royal Asiatic Society a proposal was made by Mr. Burgess that the society should represent to Government the wanton destruction of ancient remains of art that is going on in all parts of India. He mentioned several places where finely carved pillars had been destroyed, taken away, or built into modern houses or bridges, and said that as Government had shown some willingness recently to help in preserving archæological remains, he thought this was a good time to propose that the destruction be put a stop to. The meeting agreed to the proposal.

ADEN.—Mr. Mallet, a member of the Geological Survey Department, has on his way out to India made a halt at Aden with the view of ascertaining what facilities there are for supplying that settlement with a more abundant supply of fresh water. He went into the interior as far as to the foot of the hills which lie to the north of Aden. His opinion is that nothing can be done by means of Artesian wells, but that from wells near Mahilla, where the present Sheikh Othman aqueduct begins, good water might be obtained and brought in. It is believed that Mr. Mallet intends to submit a detailed report on the subject.

BEYOND THE SIND FRONTIER.—They do some curious things beyond the Sind Frontier. From the Sindian's latest jottings we find that in Lus Beyla corporal punishment is sometimes inflicted with branches of the prickly pear. They have ordeals, too. One Jaithmul (in Candahar) had a servant who was accused of theft. "Jaithmul boiled some oil in a cauldron, and dropped a pice into it, and ordered the servant to abstract the pice; if he succeeded in doing that without having his arm burnt he would be looked upon as innocent; if not, his guilt was at once to be declared established. The servant did as he was ordered, and got his arm fearfully scorched and burnt. To this there is a gratifying sequel:—"Nussurla Khan, who is the Sirdar at Candahar representing the Ameer, got tidings of the cruelty practised on Jaithmul's servant, and ordered both to be brought before him. On interrogating Jaithmul as to the reason why he had so tortured his servant, the Khan was informed of the circumstances of the case. Jaithmul was then ordered by the Khan to go through the same ordeal as that he had subjected his servant to, stating that if he had such faith in it, he, being of course innocent of the robbery, need not fear his arm getting burnt by plunging it into a cauldron of boiling oil. Jaithmul had but Hobson's choice left him, and he was, from last accounts, suffering the same agonies his servant experienced.

IMPORTS.—BOMBAY, Dec. 31.—A fair demand for the interior has existed during the week, in consequence of which, and the improved state of the home market, prices have recovered the decline noticed in our last report. A larger business would probably have been done but for the Christmas holidays, which have lasted nearly the whole of the week. Grey Goods: The market has been more active during the week, with an advance of 2 annas per piece. Shirtings are more in request; about 2,500 pieces 39-inch 4¾ lbs. were sold at Rs. 3-5; of 5¼ lbs., about 3,000 pieces brought Rs. 3-6; in 6 lbs., about 1,800 pieces were taken off at Rs. 3-15½ to Rs. 4-3; about 500 pieces 6¼ lbs. fetched Rs. 4-6; about 23,000 pieces 7 lbs. changed hands at Rs. 4-8 to Rs. 4-12½; in 8¼ lbs. about 20,000 pieces realised Rs. 5-8 to Rs. 5-12½. Of T-Cloths, about 3,500 pieces 32-inch 6 lbs. were sold at Rs. 3-6½ to Rs. 3-7. In Jaconets the following sales have transpired—viz., about 5,000 pieces 40-inch 2¾ lbs. at Rs. 1-13¾, and about 3,000 pieces 2¾ lbs. at Rs. 2-5½ to Rs. 2-6. Bleached Goods continue dull, and no sales. Dyed and Printed Goods have also continued dull. The only sale which has transpired during the week has been in Orange Prints—viz., about 1,000 pieces, at Rs. 3-7¾. Turkey Red Goods also continue dull, only about 500 pieces Cambrics were sold during the week, at Rs. 4. Grey Yarns: The market has been more active, with an advance of ¼ anna per lb. The sales which have taken place are as follows, viz.:—About 120 bales Mule No. 40, at 9½ to 10¼ annas; about 70 bales Water No. 30, at 9¾ to 10 annas; and about 20 bales Turkey Red at 22¾ annas. Metals have also been more active, with little or no change in prices. We have, however, no sales to report for the week.

EXPORTS.—BOMBAY, Dec. 31.—Cotton: The telegrams received during the week have reported a better feeling both in Liverpool and Manchester, and the message dated the 28th—the latest to hand—quotes Fair Dhollerah at 6¼d. The market here, following the course of Liverpool, has been pretty steady; and, while the quotations of Old Cotton stand about the same as last week, New Cotton may be quoted Rs. 3 to Rs. 5 per candy higher. The purchases made in Bombay for export amount to nearly 3,000 candies, among which there were of Old Cotton 1,060 candies of Dholleráh and Bhownuggur, at Rs. 188 to Rs. 194; 300 candies of Comptah, at Rs. 170; 200 candies of Ahmedabad, at Rs. 172 to Rs. 185; and 250 candies of Khandeish, at Rs. 165 to Rs. 175. And of New Cotton, 300 candies of Oomrawuttee-Akote, deliverable in February, at Rs. 193 to Rs. 195; and 300 candies of Hinguughat, deliverable in ten to fifteen days, at Rs. 215 to Rs. 219½. The market closes quiet, but steady.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE, C.S.

Fort William, Dec. 21.—No. 3,924.—The Governor-general in Council is pleased to lay down the following rules in continuation of Section VII. of the rules regarding leave of absence to covenanted civil servants published on June 16, 1868:—

A period spent without leave and without allowances (as, for example, in the case of overstaying privilege leave or joining time) is to be omitted from the three years on which the calculation of average salary is to be made.

It is not correct, in the case of the omission of any period from the three years, to introduce into the calculation an equal period which passed before the commencement of the three years. When any time is omitted, the calculation should be made of the average pay drawn during the remainder of the three years.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The following officers have been declared by the central committee to have passed the police examination by the higher standard on Nov. 5:—Mr. G. F. Taylor, officiating assistant district superintendent of police; Mr. A. C. Plowden (subject to passing in vernacular); and Mr. G. A. THE BENGAL CIVIL SERVICE AND THE NEW FURLOUGH RULES.—MEMORIAL TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

The Memorial of the undersigned Members of her Majesty's Bengal Civil Service to the Right Hon. the Earl of Mayo, K.P., G.C.S.I., Viceroy and Governor-general of India in Council.

Respectfully Showéth,—That in 1868 the Government of India took into consideration a revision of the then existing Furlough Rules, with the expressed object of giving greater facilities to its servants in regard to leave of absence to Europe.

2. That the junior members of the service then pointed out that the effect of the Revised Rules would be to retard very seriously the progress of their substantive promotion, and that they would obtain no equivalent benefit in return.

3. That the justice of the objection was universally admitted, and a provision inserted in the Revised Rules, allowing junior civil servants to draw officiating allowances on an enhanced scale, the seniors retaining the advantage of alien on their appointments while on furlough ; and that, as this retention of appointments most nearly affected the junior members then in the service, a proviso was made that existing members of the service should be allowed to draw furlough allowance at the rate of £500 per annum, although that sum should exceed what they might be entitled to under the New Rules, provided that any member who might avail himself of the permission should not draw more than £1,000, instead of £1,200, during any subsequent furlough.

4. That her Majesty's Secretary of State for India having decided that it is undesirable that any civil officer on furlough should draw more than £1,000 per annum, your Lordship's Government ruled that the option allowed to those who were members of the service in 1868 must be held to be withdrawn, although no mention, as far as your memorialists are aware, was made of it in the Secretary of State's despatch.

5. That as the object of his Grace's order was, your memorialists have reason to believe, to assimilate the maximum furlough allowance to the maximum pension, your memorialists submit that the reduction of the maximum from £1,200 to £1,000 affords no reason for the reduction of the minimum from £500 to £300, but, on the contrary, that as the minimum was fixed at £300 by the New Rules as a counterpoise to the increased maximum, the reduction of the maximum seems fairly to demand a corresponding increase of the minimum.

6. That in India any appreciable savings out of an income of Rs. 500 a month, subject to deductions varying from 6¼ to 13 per cent., cannot be made, and that your lordship will not fail to perceive that to pay an officer Rs. 450 per mensem for eight years, and then to permit him to take furlough on £300 per annum, is virtually to prohibit his taking furlough till a far later period in his service, and that if he be obliged to take sick furlough he must inevitably incur obligations which it has ever been the object of the Government to discourage ; the obvious intention of the Rules of 1868 being thus completely defeated.

7. That your memorialists have further to urge their claim to acting allowances, as fixed by the rules of 1868, the rates therein provided having been specially calculated to compensate the existing junior members of the service as far as possible for the loss which, it was universally admitted, must fall upon them alone, and that they feel it to be a singular hardship that concessions which were deemed just in 1868 should have been cancelled in 1869.

8. That your memorialists received the order reducing the rate of acting allowances from 30 to 20 per cent. with grave uneasiness, fearing it may prove a precedent for a reduction of guaranteed allowances, whenever a disturbance of the financial equilibrium may seem to the Government of the day to demand it.

9. That your memorialists humbly desire to draw your lordship's attention to the fact that they have not obtained their allotted share of the appointments in the non-regulation provinces ; although, in order that a steady and equal flow of promotion should be secured to the members of the Civil Service, it was considered necessary by the Supreme Government in 1856 (vide Resolution of the Government of India, No. 5,450, of Oct. 21, 1856) that the proportion of covenanted civilians to be employed in the non-regulation provinces should be as nearly as possible maintained at one-half. That owing in a great measure to the disturbances of 1857, the rule then laid down was lost sight of, till the hardships caused gave rise to a memorial from certain members of the service in 1863, praying that the rule might be adhered to. That the principle was reaffirmed by the Supreme Government, and that the Secretary of State (No. 44, of April 30, 1864), further declared that it was the desire of the Home Government that the proportion laid down in Lord Dalhousie's minute should be maintained. That though accordingly, in 1864 and 1865, several members of the Civil Service were transferred to the Central Provinces and Oudh, the number of civilians never reached the prescribed proportion, and now stands nearly thus :—

Punjab, 42 per cent.; Oudh, 27; Central Provinces, 30; while in the Berars' commission there is, as far as your memorialists are aware, only one civilian, the effect of which has been to aggravate the long stoppage of promotion, under which the junior civil servants in the regulation provinces are suffering.

10. That the service to which your memorialists belong is one in which the appointments which they shall or may hold are very strictly defined; and that, notwithstanding this, it is subject to frequent encroachment on the part of other servants of the Crown, to whom a far larger field of service is open in all parts of the world. That your memorialists consequently pray your Lordship to take into consideration their claims to political appointments of all grades, of which of late years they have held an unusually small number.

11. That your Lordship will not have failed to observe the number of military officers holding high appointments in the Punjab, who are prevented from retiring by insufficient or ill-adjusted retiring pensions, thus causing the present very serious stagnation of promotion in that province.

12. That your memorialists would fain suggest that in future appointments of civil servants the appointments to each province should, as nearly as possible, be of the same number in each succeeding year; that many junior civilians in the North-Western Provinces must, unless some remedy be forthcoming, suffer heavily for many years, if not for the whole length of their service, from the unusual number of appointments made in 1861-63; that, independently of this, the juniors in the North-Western Provinces can expect no substantive promotion for four years, or until the seventeen seniors now without appointments have been sooner provided for; and that, mutatis mutandis, many of the junior civilians in the province of Bengal are in the same hopeless position as those in the North-Western Provinces.

13. That your memorialists pray your lordship to modify the order (No. 101, dated April 24, 1869) concerning privilege leave, in so far as to substitute the period of three months for that of six months as therein prescribed; since it not unfrequently happens that an officer who intends to take furlough in the following spring is from the state of his health in urgent need of privilege leave in October, in which case he must at the risk of injury to his health, either renounce privilege leave, or condemn himself, in the event of his taking furlough, to travel to Europe in the extreme heat of May.

14. That, to sum up shortly, your memorialists humbly pray your lordship—

(1). To restore the rate of acting allowances to 30 per cent., as provided in the rules of 1868.

(2). To fix the minimum furlough allowance at £500 per annum.

(3)—If this (2) be impossible, to restore the Rules of 1868 as regards minimum furlough allowance; £500 per annum being the minimum for those who were members of the civil service when the Rules were made.

(4)—To restore to the service its undoubted right to appointments in the non-regulation provinces, so far as may be possible without injury to vested interests, and to reopen to it political appointments of all grades, from the majority of which it has of late years been excluded.

(5)—To modify the order relating to privilege leave before furlough.

15. That your memorialists in all this ask for little which it is not in your lordship's power to grant, and humbly pray your lordship to be pleased to take their prayer into earnest and favourable consideration.

Signed by two hundred and fifty-one Memorialists.

Official Papers.

PROPOSED TRANSFER OF PUBLIC CHARGES AND REVENUES TO LOCAL GOVERNMENTS, OUDH.

From the Officiating Secretary to the Chief Commissioner, Oudh, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Financial Department, No. 393, dated Lucknow, Jan. 28, 1868.

Sir,—I am directed by the Chief Commissioner to reply to your Circular No. 2,863, dated Sept. 19 last, regarding the proposed transfer to local Governments of certain portions of the public charges and revenues.

2. The principle on which these proposals are based appears to Mr. Strachey to be thoroughly sound, and he will endeavour to state the reasons which have led him to this conclusion.

3. It is beyond dispute that the normal financial condition of India, for a long time past, has been one of chronic deficit. The measures of extreme financial repression exercised on the public expenditure after the mutiny, and the imposition of new taxes, brought back a surplus for a year or two after 1860, but already we have drifted again into the old deficit. It is easy to see the cause of this. India is a country the civilisation of which is very rapidly advancing, bringing in its train a host of wants of all sorts, all of which require increased outlay. Unfortunately this is combined with a great difficulty in obtaining a corresponding increase of revenue. The calls for more money are commonly so reasonable that they can only be rejected in an arbitrary way, and, after all possible resistance, so much increased outlay is forced upon us, that the finances have again relapsed into what must be acknowledged to be a condition of distinct deficit, however we may attempt to palliate the evil, or explain it away.

The danger of this state of things is obvious. If any unavoidable necessity for a great increase of expenditure should suddenly arise; if, for instance, we are to find ourselves involved in a long and serious war; or if, on the other hand, some great failure should occur in the productiveness of some main source of revenue, such as opium, it is hard to say how our financial difficulties could be got over. The apparent means of adding to the Imperial revenues in India by new taxation are very limited, and it is essential that, if possible, means should be devised for checking the constant increase of expenditure.

4. It appears to Mr. Strachey to be undeniable that although the Government of India has been at all times most desirous of exercising an efficient control over this constantly growing expenditure, this control has practically completely failed to lead to the results that were desired. It is instructive to observe that the only departments in which the control of the Government of India over the expenditure has been really successful are those departments the administration of which rests actually, and not only nominally, with itself or with the Home Government. During the last seven years there has been little or no tendency in the military charges to increase. The home charges have also not greatly increased, nor has there been much change in the amount payable on account of interest of debt. Nor has there been any real increase, but rather a decrease, in the charges for public works. It is true that the total expenditure under this head has largely increased, but this is owing to special and extraordinary causes. If the unavoidable expenditure be deducted that has been incurred in constructing new barracks throughout India, and for works of irrigation, the public works charges are now actually less than they were seven years ago.

This is shown by figures below, taken from the Friend of India of Oct. 31 last, and the Chief Commissioner believes that they are correct. [Table omitted.]

5. The following figures give the details of the civil charges:—

Year.	Collection of Revenues.	Special Services.	Administration.	Miscellaneous.	Grand Total Civil Charges.
1861-62	4,659,000	906,000	5,775,000	3,721,000	15,001,000
1862-63	4,784,000	1,015,000	5,349,000	3,791,000	15,539,000
1863-64	5,320,000	987,000	6,233,000	3,815,000	16,355,000
1864-65	5,321,000	845,000	6,879,000	3,838,000	16,883,000
1865-66	4,974,000	883,000	7,429,000	3,657,000	16,943,000
1866-67	4,996,000	1,217,000	7,752,000	3,598,000	17,563,000
1867-68	4,995,500	1,274,000	8,036,000	3,818,000	18,123,000

"The civil charges in this period have grown three millions in spite of the incessant pressure of the Government of India to keep them down." These are the charges over which, from the necessity of the case, the control of the Government of India is most imperfect. We see in these figures, which represent the civil charges, the result of the incessant demands of the local governments for more money. They show at the same time the failure of the Government of India to control those demands, and they show the principal cause of the existing deficit.

6. Although the local Governments are mainly responsible for this increased and constantly-increasing expenditure, it would, the Chief Commissioner thinks, be unreasonable to blame them. A local Government has now no real incentives to economy. So far as it is concerned, there is a purse of unlimited, because unknown, depth on which it is entitled to draw. It knows that its demands for increased expenditure are in themselves proper. It sees the necessity for improvement in every branch of the administration; every such improvement involves larger expenditure, and having no specific income assigned to it, each local Government does no more than its duty in endeavouring to obtain for its own province as large a share as it can get of the general revenues of the empire. And it finds by experience that the less economy it practises, and the more importunate its demands, the more likely is it to persuade the Supreme Government of the urgency of and of the propriety of its requirements. It feels that in representing these requirements, it does what is right, and it leaves to the Government of India, which has taken that task upon itself, the responsibility of determining how far it is possible to satisfy the demands that have been made.

7. Mr. Strachey believes that the Government of India has done everything which it can to resist these constant demands for increased expenditure. But it has been proved by experience that the demands are of a character which cannot be resisted. The only remedy is to prevent the demands being made, and this can only be secured by imposing on the local Governments a real and effectual responsibility for maintaining financial equilibrium in the local finances. This is what has been proposed in the scheme under consideration. Certain portions of public revenue would be assigned to local Governments as a certain fixed income, out of which they would be obliged, under all circumstances, to provide for certain portions of the public expenditure.

8. It may seem strange that a measure which is thus put forward as the true and only remedy for the evils of the present state of things should be looked upon by some as a certain means of aggravating those evils. What one party considers likely to increase economy, the other regards as destructive of it. What one party looks to as a support to the central authority, in maintaining an equilibrium, and an efficient control of the finances, the other thinks subversive of these things. It is manifest that there must be some serious misconception or fallacy on one side or the other. To see how this is it will be useful to consider what is really meant by economy—what are the motives that conduce to it, and how the control over the finances is in fact exercised.

9. It is as true for States as for individuals that economy signifies the due application of given means to meet given requirements. It is essentially relative. It cannot be predicated in reference to absolute amount of outlay, nor to character of outlay; but only in the light of the relation of the actual means to meet expenditure, and to the actual calls for such expenditure. The expenditure which, with small means, might be little short of criminal from its excess, might with greatly enlarged means be almost as objectionable on the score of parsimony. Outlay on objects of mere luxury, or of the most ephemeral value may, under certain conditions of public or private wealth, be not only innocent, but almost obligatory, while under other conditions it would be altogether indefensible.

Therefore, to establish any true standard of economy it is essential first to fix precisely the actual relation between available means and apparent requirements. It is in proportion as such a relation is distinctly fixed and felt, that a spirit of economy is possible; and in proportion as the one is wanting, so must the other be also. The positions of the Government of India and of the local governments in relation to public revenue and expenditure precisely illustrate this conclusion, and attest its truth.

10. The Government of India has upon it the entire responsibility of providing funds for the whole of the expenditure of India. As a matter of course, the available funds are limited, while the objects requiring outlay are almost inexhaustible. The Government of India is thus forced by its position to restrict the grants of public money, and to weigh carefully the relative importance of all claims made upon it, knowing that if the available revenues will not suffice, money must be borrowed or financial disorder arise. Turning to the local Governments, we find that they are in a position in which it is quite impossible for them, or for the central authority, to say what portion of the revenues raised under them is properly applicable to local wants. These revenues go into a common fund, and to determine how much of this fund ought to be given to one province, and how much to another, is, under the present system, impossible. The wants to be met from this common fund are equally ill-defined in their character. What are local and what are fairly assignable to the central authority remain in doubt, much in the same way as in the case of the revenues. It therefore becomes impossible for a local Government to say of any proposal to increase the public expenditure that it is barred on economical grounds, because it is impossible to say how much of the local revenues are properly available for local outlay. The standard of economy wholly fails, and the only possible test of propriety is that which, in India especially, is the worst conceivable—namely, what has till now been the custom.

Under such a rule, could it really be enforced, all the better tendencies of any Government must be crushed down, and stagnation drive out progress.

Under these circumstances, any decision relative to proposed increase of expenditure is either adopted in an arbitrary manner by the central authority, or it forms the subject of discussion and argument, in which the local Government will commonly have the advantage, having all the positive reasons on its side, while the Government of India can only use those of a negative order. And in such a case the tendency of external opinion, which is guided by no sense of economy, will almost always be to side with the party proposing improvement and increased expenditure.

11. Such have, it is believed, been the general causes which have led, and are still leading, to the growing public expenditure of India, and to a constantly recurring deficit.

The legitimate conclusion seems to be, that in proportion as the revenue available for local expenditure and the charges to be regarded as local become defined with precision, it will become possible to set up a true economical standard for the local Governments, which cannot in any way be blamed for not now having that which it is impossible for them to obtain. When the definition and limitation of local revenue and charge become complete, the tendency to economy will have the best prospect of becoming developed.

12. All experience shows that restriction of expenditure can only be secured by absolute restriction of means. Under despotic Governments embarrassed finances are notoriously the rule. In England the history of finance shows conclusively that public expenditure has only been restricted during those periods in which additional taxation was necessary to meet fresh outlay. As soon as the revenues began to grow spontaneously under the improved fiscal system which accompanied the adoption of free-trade principles, and additional resources were provided without pressure, the expenditure followed closely the increased income, and the efforts of the economical party in Parliament have been quite unavailing in reducing it. The truth is, that popular control over the finances of a country acts almost exclusively through the medium of resistance to new taxation. The supply of money being limited, the Executive Government is forced into economy, and into improved financial measures. Thus economy is developed from within by reason of the external resistance which refuses the means of increased outlay, and it has little to do with mere popular opinion acting directly. Self-taxation means difficult taxation, and therein lies its only true strength as a cause of economy.

13. The Chief Commissioner believes that if the scheme now under discussion be adopted, local governments will for the first time be provided with the economical standard which they require. They will know, in each case, that they possess a certain income which cannot be exceeded, and they will be obliged to regulate their expenditure accordingly. And although it is difficult, and indeed impossible, for the Government of India to maintain an efficient control over local expenditure when it attempts, as it now does, to exercise that control in detail, there would be little difficulty in maintaining such a general limitation of the power of local expenditure as would be obtained by the assignment to each local Government of a certain income to meet certain branches of expenditure. The whole tendency of the proposed change will be not only to increase the inducements to the local Governments to exercise economy, but also to strengthen the Supreme Government in its power of limiting the aggregate expenditure of India within the aggregate available revenues.

14. If Mr. Strachey believed that the adoption of these proposals would lead to the surrender of any real check which the Government of India can now exercise upon local extravagance, he would say that the scheme must be rejected. We require greater, not less, control of the finances. The question must be discussed from an imperial point of view, and if the proposed measures cannot bear this test they are unsound. But the Chief Commissioner cannot perceive that the control of the Government of India over local financial management would be in any way weakened.

The control of the Government of India over the finances is now generally exercised in two ways: first, by limiting the budget grants; and, second, by requiring a preliminary sanction to be obtained to fixed charges and establishments. The action in the first of these cases is seldom made in any other way than by arbitrarily reducing by a lump sum some principal head or sub-head of the estimates, the local Government being left to make the detailed adjustment of the reduction as it thinks fit. The proposed new plan, instead of an annual review, makes once for all a final limitation of the aggregate of certain grants, and the internal distribution of details would be left precisely, as now, to local discretion. There is nothing in what has been proposed that would prevent the Government of India from interfering in the future, on general grounds of policy, in any degree or manner with the measures of any subordinate Government in respect to its proposed expenditure. The position of the Government of India would not in this respect be affected by the adoption of these proposals.

The questions relating to the sanction of fixed charges and establishments have, it is stated in Mr. Massey's memorandum, been purposely left for future consideration, and it is not necessary to enter now into this part of the subject. It is a question rather for the future than for the present, whether the existing stringent rules for the prevention of permanent increase of charge ought to be in any way relaxed. So long as these rules are maintained—and their abandonment has not been proposed—it is impossible that any serious increase of local outlay could take place without the assent of the Government of India and of the Secretary of State. For the bulk of the civil charges are on account of fixed establishments, the expenditure on which cannot be increased without special previous sanction.

16. In carrying out any measures for the transfer of the local financial administration to the local Governments, it seems highly desirable that the Government of India should at the same time strengthen its position by effecting such an increase of the public income as will enable it to carry out the change of system, not only safely, but also in a liberal spirit. Every effort should be made during the period of transition, which will necessarily occupy some few years, to do all that is possible to stimulate the general revenues, so as to give elasticity to the local assignments of income, and, as far as may be, to obviate the want of new local taxes in this interval. The possession of a surplus revenue in excess of present wants might place it in the power of the Government to give very important aid to the material progress of the country. Commerce might be relieved of needless burdens, and facilities for transport, on which the vitality of commerce depends so essentially, might be extended, with certain increase to the public wealth and probable improvement to the revenues of the State. Increased activity in road and railway extension; the removal of duties on the export trade of the country, both by sea and land; the relief of the internal trade by a more careful limitation of local town duties to articles of purely local consumption, are objects which might be attained in this manner. The attempt might also be made to obtain relief from the imposts placed on commerce in foreign States under the protection or control of the British Government. The adoption of such a policy would probably go far to remove into a distant future the embarrassing question of further general increase of taxation; and in the few special cases in which any measure of local taxation might be needed the improved wealth of the country could not fail to render its imposition less difficult.

It should be added that if the present scheme be carried out, many sources of imperial revenue may probably become far more productive than they are now. Not only the local Governments, but their principal executive officers throughout the country, may be expected to take a very different and a far more intimate interest in the growth of the public income, when they see that the increase of revenue does not merely go to fill the imperial treasury, and to provide for objects regarding which they perhaps know or care little, but that it gives them the means of carrying out improvements in which they take an immediate, and, indeed, a personal interest.

17. The Chief Commissioner thinks that he has now entered sufficiently into the general questions involved in these proposals, and that he has stated sufficiently the reasons for which they seem to him to be worthy of adoption. With regard to the details of the scheme that has been drawn up, he does not think it necessary to say much. Personally, he thinks that it might advantageously be carried much further. But he is aware that these propositions are, by many authorities whose opinions deserve the utmost respect, looked upon with great suspicion, and that there is much difference of opinion regarding the results to which they may be expected to lead. This being the case, the Chief Commissioner thinks that it would be wise to try the new experiment at first upon a moderate scale. Taking this view, he sees no objection to the details explained in Mr. Massey's memorandum, and he does not think it necessary to suggest any alterations in the scheme that has been proposed. He would adopt that scheme as it now stands.

The figures that relate to Oudh have been examined, and they may, for present purposes, be considered approximately correct. Some of the entries are not now capable of proper check. Among these may be especially noticed the estimated receipts from income and licence taxes. Until the exact form which these taxes are to take be determined, it is useless to make any revised estimate of the amount that they may yield. But, speaking generally, it may be said that the figures given in the memorandum show approximately the amount of the charges that would be transferred, and of the assignments of revenue which it would be necessary to make if this scheme were adopted.

18. The Chief Commissioner has treated this question as a financial question only, and he thinks that at the present stage of the discussion this is desirable. But he wishes to state his belief that the adoption of these proposals will not only be economically advantageous, but that it will lead to much administrative improvement in other departments. The control now exercised by the financial department of the Government of India is for the most part financial only. Its control consists, in a great measure, in playing off the apparent economy of one province against the apparent extravagance of another—in the investigation, not of facts, but of figures. It is no reproach to the Government of India that this should be the case; it cannot check the details of local expenditure in any other way. No really satisfactory and rational control of such details can be applied except by the authority which is carrying on the actual administration of the province.

19. The latter part of para. 14 of your circular calls for information regarding the present local taxation in Oudh. This is given in the statement appended to this letter. The funds have been divided, as desired, into provincial and local, but the division has necessarily been made in a somewhat arbitrary manner. The total amount of the provincial funds, according to the estimates for the year 1868-69, will be Rs. 4,33,924, and that of the local funds Rs. 7,18,705, giving a grand total for the province of Rs. 11,52,629. If further and more detailed information be required regarding these funds, it will be found in the Chief Commissioner's Circular No. 100, dated Oct. 4, 1867, a copy of which accompanies this letter.

It is worthy of remark that the total amount of these local funds, the control of the expenditure from which is now left entirely to the local administration, very nearly corresponds with the total amount of the public revenues, which it has now been proposed to transfer to the provincial accounts.

These so-called local funds are, in reality, in many cases just as much public funds raised for purely public purposes as any of those which are included in the Imperial revenues. If the local administration can now be trusted to spend eleven lakhs of rupees a-year on roads, bridges, police, education, dispensaries, and the other objects of public utility to which the local funds are devoted, the Chief Commissioner cannot see why it may not be trusted to spend as much more, in the manner that has been now proposed, on objects of an essentially similar character.

20. The Chief Commissioner asked the opinion of the Financial Commissioner upon these questions, and a copy of Mr. Davies's letter is forwarded for the information of the Government.

Copy of a Letter from the Financial Commissioner of Oudh to the Secretary to the Chief Commissioner, dated Nov. 26, 1867, No. 5,750.

In reply to your letter No. 3,765, dated Oct. 24, 1867, I beg to state that I have not had time to obtain the opinions of other officers.

2. In brief, the scheme appears to be to give over to the local Governments certain funds, which, being added to other local funds, will constitute the revenue to be administered by the local Government under a separate budget. But equivalent charges are to be transferred also. It is hoped that by this arrangement the local Governments will gradually acquire the experience necessary to the proper independent management of the local finances, and that the Supreme Government will in time be relieved of the duty of providing for certain items of expenditure, more particularly the construction and repair of roads. If the local financial administration result in a deficit, it will, under certain circumstances, be supplemented by grants-in-aid from the Supreme Government; if in a surplus, the amount will be carried to the credit of the local resources, and be, under general rules, at the disposal of the local Government.

3. The prominent advantage of the scheme consists in getting rid of the detail attending the exercise of the supervision now maintained by the Supreme Government. The local Governments, professionally aided as they are, must evidently be quite as competent as the Supreme Government to decide upon the propriety of the assignment of funds for the repairs of roads. Therefore there is no reason why such charges, which are unavoidable and recurring, should require other sanction than that of the local Government.

4 The roads themselves would, I think, be better and more cheaply repaired than at present, for the work would be under the district and divisional authorities and their subordinates, who would have superior opportunities of inspection.

5. It is clearly contemplated that wherever it be necessary, a cess shall be imposed on the contributors of land revenue. But I imagine this can only be done in Oudh at the time of settlement, for the engagement between the Government and the landholders takes the form of a contract, the terms of which are for the term of settlement equally binding on both parties. As, however, a road cess is already provided for, it is not probable that any difficulty will arise in this province.

6. I highly approve of the proposal that a certain fixed fraction of municipal revenues, together with equivalent charges, should be left to the exclusive administration of the better class of municipal committees. I think that by some such means only as this can we hope to interest the leading citizens in providing the taxes necessary to the proper protection, conservancy, and improvement of towns.

7. I see no cause to suppose that there will be any difficulty in consolidating the assignments in question with the unappropriated local funds into the provincial revenue, to be administered under the present financial rules with the aid of a local accountant.

8. I am of opinion that civil buildings should be amongst the charges made over to the local Governments. No advantage is gained by the transmission of the plans and estimates of these to the Central Government.

9. In short, I see no objection to the principle on which the present scheme is based being carried out much further than is now proposed. It might be declared that each local Government must, under any circumstances, be liable to a certain expenditure, and that all above that figure is contingent on the policy of the empire. The local Government might, I conceive, be trusted with the exclusive management of its finances within the limit of its estimated unavoidable expenditure. Charges without that limit ought to be under the superintendence of the Central Government. For example, it is not probable that the cost of judicial or revenue establishments, or of jails, or of repairs of roads or of minor public works generally, would be reduced even if a war broke out, or the annexation of a new province called for an extraordinary outlay. But allotments for settlement or survey, or canals or railways, might be curtailed from various causes affecting the position of public affairs.

FIELD ARTILLERY.

The future armament of our field artillery was the subject of a highly-interesting lecture at the Royal Artillery Institution, Woolwich, on Monday evening, the 16th inst., there being about two hundred and fifty officers present. The lecture was given by Lieut. C. Jones, Royal Artillery, Instructor Royal Gun Factories, Royal Arsenal, an officer of high attainments. He glanced briefly at the muzzle-loading v. breech-loading controversy as having been practically decided in favour of the former, and next addressed himself to the question of metal. Bronze, though adopted as the field gun for India, where the natives had made only bronze guns for generations past, and where other materials were difficult to obtain, had been proved by recent experiments quite unserviceable, the gases generated in the explosion of gunpowder having lacerated the bore in running over the shot, and the rifled projectile having disregarded the grooves in the too soft metal and cut out a system of rifling for themselves. Steel by itself was too brittle, being liable to burst at any moment without warning, as one of the Prussian 9-pounders did on service in 1866, a contingency which had induced even Krupp to abandon homogeneous steel, though he still built up his guns of the same metal in coils. With the exception of the 7-pounder mountain howitzer, known as the Abyssinian gun, with which they only fired small charges, England had no steel gun, for they were unsafe, and would shake the confidence of the gunners who had to man them. Wrought iron alone did not possess the necessary hardness for the interior of the barrel, but a steel barrel, strengthened with wrought iron coils, furnished the very best construction yet discovered. These guns, of which they had manufactured some 4,000 in the last twelve years, were almost as secure from bursting as bronze guns, there never having been an instance of one having burst from fair usage. The principal argument in favour of bronze guns was economy, as the old metal was worth almost as much as new, but the saving of a few thousand pounds would surely not call for the conversion of our whole armament when we have all the appliances ready for constructing the present service guns up to 35 tons in weight. The lecturer contended that in the material and mode of manufacture the English artillery was the best in the world, and that there was no sufficient reason why they should give up this advantage, and revert to a system which was confessedly imperfect. For the same reason, however, that they proposed to give the infantry the Henry-Martini rifle, while their present arm, the Snider, was the best in Europe, they must make their field guns still more serviceable. The 16-pounder shell gun just made in the Arsenal was destined to supply the present want. Every campaign ended in the introduction of a larger projectile, and the present war, from which Lieutenant Jones gave numerous illustrations, tended in the same direction. The calibre of the new gun, though its projectile was enlarged and its powder charge 3 lbs., was 3·6 in., for it had been shown that the service 9-pounder of 3-inch calibre fired a 12 lb. shell with even greater effect than one of 9 lb., showing that in order to be effective as a 9-pounder its calibre ought to be reduced. The lecturer worked out in detail the problem of carrying into action heavier projectiles without increasing the weight of the equipment, and concluded a very effective lecture amid loud applause. Col. A. T. Phillpotts, Royal Horse Artillery, who presided, then invited discussion. Gen. J. H. Lefroy spoke of the extensive use of bronze guns in European armies. Col. Younghusband, on the other hand, said that, with the exception of Russia, no country placed any faith in the metal. Capt. T. B. Strange, in speaking of equipment, advocated the removal from the limber of the "useless rubbish," in the shape of knapsacks, carbines, and camp kettles; and Gen. Lefroy thought they might make their spare wheels run behind instead of carrying them. The lecturer advocated the retention, at all events, of camp utensils for the comforts of the troops; and, after some further remarks by Col. Milward, C.B., Col. Domville, Capt. C. O. Brown, Capt. Harvey, and others, the proceedings terminated with a vote of thanks to the lecturer.

THE MANŒUVRES OF THE PRUSSIAN ARMY.

On Wednesday evening last Colonel Gray, 1st battalion 4th (King's Own) Regiment, delivered a highly interesting and instructive lecture to the officers and non-commissioned officers at Aldershot on "The Prussian Regulations for Conducting Great Manœuvres, and the Manner in which a Staff of Umpires is used for Conducting and Controlling such Manœuvres."

Colonel Bray said that, in company with Sir Charles Staveley and other officers, he visited Berlin in the year 1868. They were struck with admiration at the Prussian military system; at the way all the Prussian officers were instructed, and the practical way all their duties were carried out. Their military manœuvres have a wonderful similarity to war itself, and the officers, from the highest to the lowest grade, are practised and trained in the highest branches of their profession; and this training is not confined to one particular arm of the service, for a Prussian officer is capable of handling artillery, cavalry and infantry combined. General Trochu says that the exercise of the French troops in time of peace gave them no proper conception of real warfare. He (Colonel Bray) looked into a dictionary a few days since for the word officer, and found that it is defined as a commander and leader of men; therefore they ought to be instructed so as to make them commanders and leaders of men. (Applause.) In time of peace the greater part of an English officer's time is taken up with regimental duties, &c. There are many things in the Prussian system that he would like to see introduced into the British Army. The mode of training its officers was worth following. There was no use in blinking matters; we must march with the age—(applause)—and modify our systems of drill and manœuvres. In 1868 he saw 20,000 Prussian troops drawn up in review order for the King on a sandy plain about three miles from Berlin. Several other officers were with him. All branches of the Prussian Army were represented at the review. They were most favourably impressed with the martial bearing of the Prussian Guards, and amazed at seeing such fine soldiers after three years' training; they are not as well "set up" as the British and French soldiers, but their officers and sergeants are fine intelligent men. Among the officers you will not see any weak or slender as you sometimes may see in the English Army. On the day succeeding that of the review all Berlin seemed to be on the move, and it was very apparent that something important was impending. This was the departure of the troops across the country, as if proceeding on an actual campaign, with every requisite for a week's earnest war. Every officer is furnished with a large map of the surrounding country; those maps are printed at the expense of the Government. Every officer, from the general to the lieutenant, carries his map in his belt, and consults it whenever the troops are halted. Every officer is also furnished with a powerful opera-glass. In such matters as these we ought to take a leaf out of the Prussian books, for to the carrying of a map and opera glass he attached great importance; and these articles should be at once adopted as parts of the British officer's dress. When the force to which he was attached arrived at the ground allotted for it to occupy, the opposing force was miles away. The enemy's object was to outflank their force (the one to which the British officers were attached, and which was posted between the "enemy" and Berlin), and gain the approaches to the capital. The ground outside Berlin is sandy, and intersected by hedges, ditches, &c. The farmers fix poles in the ground, topped with straw, to indicate to the troops that they are to avoid these fields as much as possible. Damage done to crops is assessed by staff officers and civilians, and paid for by the Government. The damage done is slight, and the farmers like to see the troops in their vicinity; for those surrounding cantonments, such as Aldershot, gain greatly by the presence of the troops. Any hedges or palings that have been injured during the manœuvres are quickly repaired by the Prussian pioneers, who follow their regiments, so that the Government has but little to pay. The defending army went immediately under cover, taking advantage of every object that would furnish cover or concealment; the artillery and cavalry dismounted, and the infantry piled arms. Meanwhile, animated discussions about the enemy's objects and designs were going on among the officers, and reports from the cavalry scouts and videttes were constantly received. Those scouts went out early in the morning, spreading themselves like a fan for miles over the country, penetrating woods, searching villages and farm-houses, and by means of signals and chains of communication, apprising their commanders of every move of the enemy, whose videttes were similarly employed. Those videttes consisted of from one to four men; officers were looking out with the greatest earnestness for the enemy—so earnestly that a person was almost convinced that a real enemy was in front. The supports of those outposts were concealed over all the country, behind hay-ricks, farmyards, hedges, ditches, &c. So earnestly and perfectly were these duties carried out that sometimes an officer, or a single dragoon, was pursued at full speed by a whole section. Intelligent mounted orderlies are detailed to carry messages. All manœuvres are as strictly carried out as if the troops were engaged in action. Such manœuvres are never witnessed in this country. At first he (Col. Bray) could not understand the way the videttes tried to conceal themselves from him until he found himself suddenly surrounded, when his captors would laugh heartily at seeing him dressed in the uniform of a foreign officer. Their cavalry are handled with great skill. When he heard of what happened to the French at Wissenburg, Woerth and Forbach, he was not in the least surprised; it was what he anticipated from the commencement of hostilities; but our French friends ought to have done better. The lecturer would advise every cavalry officer to learn the rules of Prussian cavalry as laid down in the translation by Sir Charles Staveley. As our cavalry are but few, their officers ought to be acquainted with the most advanced and practical rules and manœuvres.

Miscellaneous.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £400,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 18th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta £399,000, and to Bombay £1,000. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders at 1s. 10¼d. received about 66 per cent.

INDIAN TEA COMPANY.—The half-yearly meeting of the British Indian Tea Company (Limited) will be held on the 6th of February.

BANK OF HINDOSTAN.—It has been intimated by the liquidators of the Bank of Hindostan, China, and Japan (Limited) that they have now paid off all the liabilities of the bank and interest thereon, with the exception of an unsettled claim in Bombay, which they have funds in hand to meet. A report and balance-sheet will be forwarded to the shareholders shortly.

FAILURES.—The suspension has been reported of Mr. George Triandafillidi, merchant, in the India trade. The liabilities are stated at £18,000, and the assets are estimated at as large an amount as £22 000. The Manchester Courier states :—"At a meeting of the creditors of Messrs. Milbourne, Clark, and Co., Manchester, commission merchants to India, the statement submitted showed liabilities £16,520 ; and assets—subject to consignments and shipments—£17,227. A committee of inspection was appointed."

MILITARY. —It appears to be almost settled that the first captains of artillery are to be converted into majors, a reduction being made at the same time in the proportion of regimental lieutenant-colonels, which are now considerably in excess of the actual requirements of the service. There can be no doubt of the propriety of this change, the command of a field battery being at least equal in responsibility to that of the functions performed by a major of either cavalry or infantry. When this change is carried out it may be presumed that the grade of lieutenant-colonel on major's pay will be abolished. A similar change will of course be made at the same time in the corps of Royal Engineers, in which the grade of first captain is perhaps even more inappropriate to the duties to be performed than in the Artillery. In each regiment the present second captains will then be styled simply captains.

THE LATE SIR H. DURAND.—The following lines were written by a friend of the late Major-General Sir H. M. Durand, C.B., K.C.S.I., upon hearing the intelligence of the death of that officer :—

Percy in blood ; in spirit Hotspur's son ;
Frank, brave, imperious ; moulded in the form
Of those who our third Edward gathered round,
When, 'mid the chivalry of Scot or Frank,
He bade, for England's banner, way be hewn,
Foremost where danger threatened. In the breach,
As in the Council, stedfast, calm, and true ;
Yet tender as a child to those in need,
And champion, aye, of widow or of maid ;
With hate and scorn for nought but mean and base ;
Holy in thought and word, and grave of mien ;
As one who on the edge of Life's dark sea,
Gazes to catch the light where dawns Eternity.

DEATH OF SIR WM. DENISON.—We regret to learn that Sir William Denison, who was taken ill on Wednesday, died on Thursday morning. He was brother of the Speaker of the House of Commons, and of the late Bishop of Salisbury. Sir William was a man of remarkable energy ; and, in addition to his military scientific learning, having belonged to the Royal Engineers, he possessed great administrative abilities. He had occupied many high appointments in the Colonies. He was appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Van Diemen's Land in June, 1846, when he received the distinction of knighthood. He was subsequently Governor-General of New South Wales, and was Governor of Madras from November, 1860, to March, 1866, and was temporarily Governor-General of India from the death of the Earl of Elgin to the arrival of Sir John Lawrence in January, 1864. The late Sir William Denison was the third son of the late Mr. John Denison, M.P., of Ossington Hall, Notts, by his second wife, daughter of Mr. Samuel Eastwicke. He was married to a daughter of Admiral Sir William Phipps Hornby, K.C.B. He entered the Army in 1826, and became a Colonel in the Royal Engineers Sept. 20, 1860.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

INVENTIONS.—The undermentioned specifications of inventions have been filed, in the office of the Secretary to the Government of the North-Western Provinces :—"Machine producing constant and continued motion, adapted for purposes now requiring steam, water-power or manual labour, such as pulling punkahs, working thermantidotes, sewing-machines, raising water, &c, &c.: by Dr. R. F. Thompson, Civil Engineer, Hooghly. Improvements in bale-hoops and other bands, and in preparing, fitting and securing the ends thereof: by William McNabb, of Clapton, Middlesex, England, gentleman. Punkah-pulling machine: by A. R. Mackenzie, coffee-planter, Davalah and William Maylor, engineer, Calicut. Improvements in the construction of railways: by G. A. Huddart of Brynkir, in the county of Carnarvon."

THE LATE RAJAH OF KOLAPORE.—It is not improbable that some dispute will arise about the rightful heir to the late Rajah of Kolapore. The Rajah left two wives, but had no children. The difficulty is that according to Hindoo law the widows have not the power to adopt a son without the expressed wish in writing of the deceased husband. Under these circumstances it is very likely that our Government will nominate the successor. The State is a rich one, and its income over ten lacs.

INDIA OFFICE, 19th January, 1871.

RHEEA OR CHINA GRASS FIBRE.

THE SECRETARY of STATE for INDIA in COUNCIL announces that the offer of PRIZES for the INVENTION of MACHINERY for the PREPARATION of RHEEA FIBRE, made by the Governor-general of India in his Notification of the 11th January, 1870, published in this country on the 10th of February, is extended to the 11th January, 1872:—

And that Packets of Dried Stems of the Plant have been received from the Governor-general, samples of which will be given to persons anxious to compete for these Prizes. His Excellency in Council wishes it to be distinctly understood by all persons to whom the samples are given, that the required Machinery will have to operate on green and fresh stems, and that these dried stems are merely sent in order to give the manufacturers a better idea of the nature of the plant, and of the difficulties to be overcome, than could be obtained from a mere verbal description of them.

Applications for Samples are to be addressed to the Reporter on the Products of India, India Museum.

By ROBERT SEWELL, Madras Civil Service.

Post 8vo., pp. 28 and 334. 8s.

 The object of this work is to supply the want which has been felt by students for a condensed outline of Indian History which would serve at once to recall the memory and guide the eye, while at the same time it has been attempted to render it interesting to the general reader by preserving a medium between a bare analysis and a complete history.

THE

AND THE

COSTUMES OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA

Prepared under the Authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

By J. FORBES WATSON, Reporter on the Products of India.

Imperial quarto, morocco back, cloth, with numerous coloured Photographs. £3. 3s.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

THE TIMES.—"On no point, perhaps, in regard to India, has greater ignorance prevailed in England than in respect to the clothing of her vast population. Late as it is, and for the first time within the last hundred years of our Indian domination, the work just compl[illegible] by Dr. Forbes Watson supplies this great and alm[illegible] unaccountable want of information, and supplies it, to[illegible] in a most complete and intelligible manner. It would be impossible to follow Dr. Watson's work in detail; but, whether to the manufacturer or to the general reader, the interest throughout will continue unbroken. His book is written in a clear and thoroughly intelligible style throughout; it is handsomely got up, and embellished by numerous coloured photographs, from which the various styles of costumes and portions of clothing, male and female, will be more readily understood than from mere descriptions."

THE MORNING POST.—"The conception of this splendid work reflects the highest credit upon the wisdom of the department to which we are indebted for its publication; and the manner in which it has been executed by its author. No one can fully appreciate the value of this work without seeing it, because neither analysis nor extracts can give any idea of the immense mass of minute facts which it contains, and the admirable manner in which they are grouped and made subservient to the practical requirements of the manufacturer and the merchant, and the cravings of the student of ornamental art. The illustrations are as magnificent as they are appropriate. In fact, as mere productions of beauty and taste, they give the work the air of a book of art luxury, and we have no doubt them from this feature it will find many admirers and purchasers beyond the ranks of trade and commerce."

THE ATHENÆUM.—"We may safely say that a more important work on the manufactures of India has never been given to the public, than the industrial Museum, and this Commentary by Dr. Forbes Watson. Advantages are sometimes slow to follow, even when the channel for them has been skilfully made and clearly marked out, but we certainly do anticipate very great results from this work, and that before long its author will be acknowledged to deserve a place amongst the real benefactors of India."

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW.—"It is a matter of national importance to study and ascertain what the traditions of India in respect to dress really are. This task has been most ably performed by Dr. Forbes Watson in the volume before us. We call attention to the work and to the subject, not as a matter of mere curiosity, but as an inquiry of direct interest to the manufacturing industry of Europe. Dr. Watson has evidently brought his personal Indian experience to bear upon a mass of materials which, in less skilled hands, would most likely have proved wearisome and unintelligible. As he has arranged his details, they are as entertaining to the general reader as they are full of information and instruction to the manufacturer."

THE ART JOURNAL.—"The work, indeed, is as well fitted, as far as embellishment is concerned, for the drawing-room table as it is for the study; and its contents will be found far more interesting to the general reader than its mere designation would lead to a supposition that it might be. The motive and purpose of its publication is highly creditable to the present Home Government of India."

CHALLENGE to the WORLD.—The Bristol Daily Times and Mirror, August 5th, has the following:—"Messrs. J. C. Swan and Co., of 16, Queen-square, in this city, have invented a pocket microscope, which is a marvel in all that such an instrument should be. It has great power, remarkable definition, and does not require focussing. The cheapness of the article will make it exceedingly popular when its merits are more widely known. It is called the 'Bristol Microscope,' and is a great credit to the inventor, as much for its extreme simplicity as its power."—The Western Daily Press says:—"The Bristol Microscope has a magnifying power of 20,000 times," &c., &c.—The Western Daily Telegraph says:—"The Bristol Microscope is the most compact and useful scientific instrument we have ever seen; it possesses extraordinary power, and is very easily managed," &c. The price of the Bristol Microscope is only 2s., or, free by post, with printed directions, for twenty-eight stamps.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

PAIN, UNEASINESS.—Before actual suffering commences there is always more or less uneasiness in the affected part, on which assiduous friction with Holloway's Ointment exercises such soothing influence that pain is averted. It removes all deep-seated pains, affections of the joints, nervous and rheumatic aches. In diseased conditions of the spinal cord, curvature of the back, weakness of the loins, coldness and numbness of the legs, twitchings and spasms, this searching Ointment, aided by Holloway's Pills, is unfailing. For pains and tenderness it is a specific. In tightness of the chest and difficulty of breathing, palpitation, and flatulence, it is always successful. In ulcerations, inflammation, and abscesses, whether deep or superficial, Holloway's Ointment and Pills always cure.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, January 7; Agra and Madras, January 5; Calcutta, January 4.

FOR full particulars of the accident which caused Sir Henry Durand's death we must wait yet another week. What is already known amounts to this, that Sir Henry was riding an elephant of unusual height, that in passing under a low archway in Tank, a small town not far from Dera Ismael Khan, the howdah was swept away, Sir Henry falling senseless on the ground, and that he only recovered his senses to find the lower part of his body paralysed from a fatal injury to his spine. In other words, he appears to have broken his neck. In Calcutta it was supposed that the elephant had taken fright at the noise around him and bolted through the archway before his mahout could stop him.

THE news of Sir H. Durand's death had found its way all over India when the last mail left Bombay, and the feeling it has everywhere evoked is one of unmixed sorrow. The greatness of the loss sustained by India is universally admitted, as well as the difficulty of filling his place. On the 3rd January, two days after his death, the Indian Government, "with feelings of the deepest sorrow," made public announcement of the sad event which had deprived the Viceroy of "an able and experienced comrade," and the Indian service of "one of its brightest ornaments." The Friend of India describes Sir Henry as "a man so pure and lofty in his aims and acts that he never held an office without adorning it, and without leaving it higher in that public estimation which alone is of value to a public man." The Englishman avows that in Sir Henry Durand "his family, his country, and his friends have had a loss that time will not soon remedy." In Calcutta, says the Times correspondent, "people speak as if they had lost a personal friend. He was so generous, they say, so kind, as well as so brave and true. There are some who tell of him as a trenchant writer, others who knew him as a soldier, the bravest of the brave; others who remember him as a wise and skilful officer, as a commander prompt, daring, unhesitating, with a brain as cool as ice and a will as sharp as fire; others, again, who point to him as a commissioner, hunting out all manner of oppression and wrong doing with a scathing power; others who recollect him in the Supreme Council, where he again and again made self-seeking and jobbery cower into the shade; but in all cases—in all the recollections that I have heard—there is a deep vein of sorrow, and in many cases an absolute outburst of grief."

ON the last day of 1870 Lord Mayo opened the Goalunda extension of the Eastern Bengal Railway. The new terminus, it is hoped, will become the central storehouse for the wealth of Dacca and Assam. Only the day before the opening Mr. Hill, the traffic superintendent, stepped off an engine and was killed.

THE Government Resolution touching the new scheme of localised finance gives at some length the reasons for a reform with whose main features the telegraph had already acquainted us. Under the present system, says the document, the local Governments have few motives to economy, for want of the needful liberty to manage their own outlay. They are apt to ask for more than the Supreme Government can spare, and the latter in its turn, being driven to choose between many demands, does not always select the most reasonable. Hence a continual conflict between local and imperial authorities. The Supreme Government, owning itself unable fully to understand local needs or gauge the extent of local resources, has therefore resolved to transfer to the Provincial Governments the duty of dealing financially with their own affairs. Each province has its own wants, which may best be supplied in its own fashion. In respect of Jails, Registration, Police, Education, Medical Services, Printing, Roads, Miscellaneous Public Improvements, and Civil Buildings, a total sum of £4,688,711 will be assigned to each province in the following shares—to Bengal, £1,168,592; North Western Provinces, £640,792; Punjab, £516,221; Central Provinces, £261,263; Burmah, £275,332; Oudh, £206,948; Madras, £739,488; Bombay, £880,075. These sums make up a total less by £330,801 than the total outlay for the same purposes last year.

WHATEVER else it may do, the new arrangement will get rid not only of much unpleasant feeling towards the Central Government, but of a great deal of surplus correspondence both with the Supreme and the Home Government. A vast deal of roundabout business will thus be abolished, to the great saving of time, trouble, temper and stationery. In India the new move has generally been hailed as the beginning, however partial or undesigned, of a change in the direction of local responsibility to local opinion in all matters of Government. One paper however unkindly regards it as an attempt to rid the Central Government of the unpopularity consequent on the raising of new taxes.

THE Banks of Bengal and Madras have respectively declared dividends at the rate of 5½ and 7 per cent. for the year.

THE working of the Punjab Tenancy Act appears to have thoroughly falsified the predictions of its opponents. Lord Lawrence must be gratified and not a little amused to learn from the Report on the Administration of the Punjab for 1869-70—a report issued by a former opponent, Sir H. Durand—that up to the present time the Act has "worked smoothly." The tenants who had lost ground under the late settlement have been "very active" in reasserting their old rights, while very few of the proprietors have cared to avail themselves of the right to evict occupancy tenants on payment of compensation. According to the Financial Commissioner, "no excitement whatever has occurred from the introduction of the Act in any class of people connected with the land," nor is any excitement or difficulty deemed likely to occur.

WE are sorry to learn by telegram that the Loshais have again raided into Cachar, and attacked several tea-gardens. Mr. Edgar however with the help of a friendly chief was trying to cut off the raiders.

A BARRACKPORE telegram asserts that Yakoob Khan, on his way to Kabul, came to blows with his father's followers about the governorship of a province which they refused to promise him. After "a crushing defeat," Yakoob got away with a few followers, no one knew whither.

MAJOR-GENERAL BARROW, who succeeds Mr. Davies as Chief Commissioner of Oudh, appears to have earned a fair claim to promotion on the score of his past services in the Oudh Commission. As far back as 1859 Sir Robert Montgomery in his Report spoke of Major Barrow as having given "valuable assistance to the Chief Commissioner in re-settling the revenues of the Province," and displaying "judgment and sound sense in his proceedings." If these qualities, combined with an honest devotion to duty and a very kindly feeling towards natives of all classes, go far to the making of an efficient Governor, we may hope that Oudh will lose nothing by the General's promotion. It is said indeed that his sound judgment might be bettered by a little more self-reliance; if that be true, the character of his government will be largely moulded by that of his leading advisers. Of Mr. Davies as successor to Sir H. Durand we can only trust that his future will match his past career. It is something at any rate to know that his acquaintance with the Punjab is of old standing, and that Lord Mayo's choice has fallen upon him at a crisis when only the best choice possible could be deemed wise or tolerable.

OUR obituary for the past week records the death of an old Indian officer, whose name in Indian history will always be linked with some of the great works accomplished under Lord Dalhousie. Sir Proby Cautley, who died last Wednesday, in his sixty-ninth year, had seen service as an artillery officer in the early days of his career. But from 1831 to 1854 he was chiefly employed on engineering and scientific duties, such as the Great Trigonometrical Survey and the construction of canals in Upper India. His greatest work in the latter line was the Ganges Canal which, with Lord Dalhousie's vigorous aid, was ready to receive the waters of the Ganges into its main channel in the early part of 1854. Soon after the memorable opening of the great canal Colonel Cautley retired from Indian Service with a name which recommended him in 1858 for a seat in the new Indian Council. Two years later he became chairman of the Public Works Committee in that Council, and with the true Anglo-Indian appetite for work he discharged his duties at the India-office with unflagging steadiness, until the consciousness of failing health forced him some months ago to retire into that private life which few men knew how to adorn with so intellectual a grace or so genial a courtesy.

WE are sorry to see that the two great companies which supply the means of telegraphic intercourse between England and the East have suddenly determined to raise their rates all round. Henceforth the charge for a ten-word telegram to India west of Chittagong is raised from £1. 17s. to £3, or only a shilling less than the old rate for telegrams of twenty words. For these latter the new charge is higher by a pound. Such is the revised tariff of the British Indian Company, and the Indo-European is about, we understand, to follow its rival's lead. This retrograde movement seems hardly wise. It is very annoying, no doubt, to find one's hopes of profit thwarted by unseasonable breaks in the telegraph cables, and shareholders will expect their dividends at any cost to the public convenience. But is it not rather early to discontinue the experiment of moderate rates, or do the figures for the last six months betray a manifest want of elasticity in the traffic? Has sufficient allowance been made for the disturbing influences of the present war? Did the directors of the British Indian forget to make provision for those ills of frequent breakage and costly repairs to which telegraph cables are still liable? It is an odd coincidence that both companies should raise their charges at the same time, thereby nipping in the bud any rash hopes which their apparent rivalry might have led the sanguine to conceive.

A VERY different kind of step has just been taken by the Peninsular and Oriental Company. They announce a very large reduction in the rates of passage-money to all the ports between Southampton and Australia. The passage money to Calcutta for instance is to be reduced on the 18th March from £95 to £70, and via Brindisi on the 28th from £87 to £65. The fare to Bombay by either route will be £65 and £60; to Aden £45 and £40; to Melbourne and Sydney, £85 and £80; to Shanghai and Yokohama, £100 and £95. There is a proportional reduction in the second-class fares. All this of course is not pure gain to the passenger who prefers strong drinks to tea and cold water. Such an one will have to pay separately for his wine and beer, and on all a separate charge of £3 or £2 will be levied for the journey through Egypt. Nevertheless the reduction will even then be found an important boon as regards every place except perhaps Bombay, where £5 only will be saved by the new rates to those who drink water. The actual gain is somewhat capriciously distributed; the new fare to Bombay being £20 more than the new fare to Aden, whereas under the old rates there was only £12 difference between the two places. Passengers to Madras on the other hand may save nearly £20 by the new tariff, and on the journey to Yokohama there will be a saving of nearly £50, or one third of the original sum. On the whole however the Company deserve some credit for a liberal concession to the public demands. A few will grumble at the separate charge for wines, but the majority will doubtless be well pleased with an arrangement which consults their pockets in preference to their appetites.

THE late reduction in the rates of Overland letter postage have naturally evoked a demand for similar reductions on newspapers and books. A memorial to this effect has already, we believe, been numerously signed by merchants and bankers connected with the Indian, Chinese, Japanese, and Australian trade. The demand is so reasonable that it cannot long remain unsatisfied. Eightpence for a newspaper weighing a fraction over four ounces must surely be considered a prohibitive impost on many journals which would else find ready encouragement in India. You may indeed send anything under eight ounces for the same sum, but that only aggravates the present grievance. Not only should the present scale be lowered, but the steps in it should be more numerous. It is too wide a leap from four ounces to eight for instance. Would it not be possible to begin with a penny for two ounces, and exact another penny for each two ounces more up to a certain weight? We would go further, and demand a material reduction on the present rates for letters. When the Brindisi route is firmly established by the Mont Cenis Tunnel, it would surely become possible to charge no more than sixpence on Indian letters. We are certain that at least three or four times the present number of letters would be sent through the Post-office at the lower rate; for the shilling postage acts as prohibitively on those concerned as it used to do in England in the days before Rowland Hill.

TRAVANCORE.

IN one of the leading journals published at Madras we noticed the report of a case of defalcation in the Travancore Treasury. The principal feature in the report which we purpose to discuss is the objection raised by the British Resident of Travancore to a barrister appearing to conduct the case.

We are at a loss to know the grounds (if there be any) upon which the Resident based his objections to the case being conducted by Mr. Gantz, a member of the Madras Bar, unless he did so through a native vakeel. It is an undeniable fact that Travancore has long since attained to such a position in the civilised world as to understand the status of a gentleman called to the English bar and admitted to practice in the High Courts in India as compared with that of a native vakeel, who may be, and in all probability is, merely a "mooktear," who has been permitted to raise his voice within the walls of a Court where he may have been admitted to practise through the influence of his friends or the mercy of the judge. That this is the position of a vakeel in Travancore is to be presumed from the fact that H.H. at once granted permission to Mr. Gantz on his application to conduct the case.

We are astonished at the conduct of the British Resident in this matter. He cannot be excused for his ignorance of the rights and privileges of a member of the bar of England, who is entitled to precedence in all Courts of Justice in her Majesty's dominions, a right and privilege which the Resident was bound to uphold and maintain, and for ignoring which he is justly liable to censure.

It is strange that a gentleman who discharged the functions of a magistrate should be ignorant of the relative positions of the two classes of practitioners, and that he should suffer himself to be snubbed by H.H. the Maharajah, who, with his wonted intelligence, permitted Mr. Gantz to appear and conduct the case, thus recognising a distinction which is acknowledged in all her Majesty's dominions except by the British Resident in Travancore.

We admire the bold and straightforward conduct of Mr. Gantz in dealing with the Resident's objection, which he showed to be worthless in the face of his Highness's order; and we fully subscribe to the legal proposition which he advanced, and of which the Resident should have been aware, that "his Highness, being the supreme authority of the country, was by every principle of constitutional law the fountain of justice and the head of all the Courts; and that if his Highness chose to set aside any custom or rule of procedure which had hitherto obtained in his Court, he was perfectly at liberty to do so, and neither the Resident nor anyone else had the right to object."

From the way in which he questioned the right of a Barrister to appear in any legal proceeding, we are led to infer that the rules as to the admission of practitioners in the Courts at Travancore are not framed (if any exist at all) with such clearness and precision as to prevent those unseemly controversies which retard the proceedings of the Court and are disastrous to the interests of the suitors.

We are hardly justified in supposing that Sir T. Madava Row, the able and highly intelligent Dewan, has not directed his attention to the subject of these comments, and if he has not yet done so we would take this opportunity of seriously commending to his consideration the importance of admitting only qualified persons to practise in the Courts at Travancore, where we are glad to learn that the law administered is based upon the English system of jurisprudence, and of framing proper rules for the guidance of the Courts in all judicial matters. We are prompted in making these suggestions as to what should be the legal status of Travancore by the deep interest we take in the prosperity and success of that extensive dominion which is so ably governed by the present Mahajarah, through his experienced and enlightened counsellor, the Dewan, Sir T. Madava Row, who, we learn, is to occupy a seat in the Legislative Council at Madras, a distinction to be conferred upon him as a further mark of the appreciation by the British Government of his services and enlightened rule in the Travancore territory.

PARTISAN WARFARE.

IF Colonel Hamley had taken counsel with his calmer judgment, his letter in the Times of last Tuesday would hardly have found its way into print. From a military writer of his mark we expected something better than the hasty echo of an unreasoning cry. That a good many people in this country should have been led by their prepossessions or by some amiable weakness to back up French denunciations of German cruelty, was the most natural thing in the world. Sentiment goes a long way with most of us, and French rhetoric has a very persuasive power on temperaments of a certain order. The teachings of history and the voice of reason are alike unheeded when an eloquent and imaginative people call upon the world to cheer them in their noble uprising against a ruthless invader. The absurdity of disconnecting France from all complicity in the war begun by her late Emperor is forgotten in the interest aroused by the sight of a resolute nation fighting for its outraged hearths and homes. Not a few people have come to look on the invasion of France in requital for an unprovoked attack on Germany as a downright crime; and a very natural yearning for a strengthened frontier and the repossession of old German soil has been denounced as a wicked scheme for the annihilation of a great country. No terms are found too laudatory for the bush-whackers who break all rules of civilised warfare, nor any too scathing for the troops who seek by just reprisals to enforce obedience to those rules.

All this, we say, is natural enough. But from an officer of Colonel Hamley's fame and experience we had a right to look for criticism of a calmer sort. We had a right to hope that he at least would have kept his head cool amidst the heat engendered by party feeling with regard to the present war. Instead however of trying to lead his countrymen towards fair and rational conclusions, he seems bent on urging them quicker than they would otherwise go in a direction the very reverse. His letter to the Times betrays throughout an amazing blindness to the cardinal facts in the military history of the last six months. His sympathies colour his reasoning and distort his views to such an extent, that he can see no possible excuse for the German method of waging war in a country invested with lawless freeshooters who stick at no means of circumventing a hated foe. In his eyes this partisan warfare is a sacred duty, and no atrocity committed by a Franc-Tireur can justify the retaliation it provokes from the opposite side. It is the Germans who have reverted to the barbarous practices of a bygone age. Their system of warfare is "a detestable anachronism," and "an ineffaceable stigma attaches to the army which practises and the nation which sanctions it." If Colonel Hamley could only put himself for a moment in the place of those he reviles, he would realise the ridiculous character of such an indictment against an army conspicuous for disciplined self-restraint so long as it had only to deal with a recognised foe. To contrast its later severities with the milder conduct of the Prussians in Bohemia or the English in Spain, is a piece of transparent sophistry which ignores the wide difference between the contrasted cases. Suppose the Bohemians had adopted the French plan of irregular warfare and treacherous surprises; would not the Prussians have been driven to stern reprisals in self-defence? Does any unprejudiced person blame the French in Spain for trying to put down the guerilla nuisance with a strong hand? "If the inhabitants of a village"—says Dr. Arnold—"will go out on their own account to annoy an enemy's march, to interrupt his communications, and to fire upon his men wherever they can find them, they too must be patient if the enemy in return burn their village, and hang them up as brigands. For it is idle to say that the mere circumstance that an army is invading its enemy's country, puts it out of the pale of civilised hostility; or, at any rate, if this be maintained, it is worse than idle to say that it may not retaliate this system, and put out of the pale of civilised hostility those who have begun so to deal with them."*

Here we have the well-reasoned utterance of a clear-thinking judicial mind. The sometime Professor of Modern History at Oxford was not to be taken in by sounding pretences about the right of a nation to treat the civilised invader like a beast of prey. With him the one question is, which side first sets the example of departing from the laws of civilised warfare. Now there is no evidence to show that the Germans were the first to break those rules, while the French have openly gloried in the kind of warfare carried on by their Francs-Tireurs. It is a well-known fact that German soldiers have been murdered on the line of march or shot down amidst peaceful villages under every circumstance of lawless treachery. To the men who slay them this may seem a just and noble revenge; but their admirers have no right to quarrel with the Germans for treating such outrages as wanton departures from the rules of honourable warfare. The latter are bound in self-defence to meet cruelty with cruelty, on pain of losing the advantages they had won in fair fight or by means of superior strategy. It is utterly absurd to suppose that any civilised army would tolerate against itself the inevitable atrocities of partisan warfare. Severity must be employed to deter others from the commission of like atrocities, and it is only inseparable from so sad a state of things that the innocent should often suffer for the guilty. Have we forgotten the Indian Mutiny and many a little war on the Punjab frontier? That the system of repression pursued by the Germans may in some few instances have been carried too far, is by no means unlikely; but that it has generally served its purpose, the progress of the campaign in all directions has abundantly proved. Nor has the fact of their being invaders anything to do with the point at issue. No such plea can be allowed to save the French from the natural consequences of treating disciplined soldiers like mere outlaws. On their own heads must rest the blame of the "detestable anachronism" which Colonel Hamley would place to the German account. In war one army must invade the other's country, and the notion that Germany has thereby put herself in the wrong, is an argument more pleasing to French vanity than creditable to our common sense.

Instead of reviling Germany for her treatment of France, Colonel Hamley would have done the world a greater service by adding his voice to that of others who have protested against the "anachronism" of irregular partisan warfare. The evils of such a warfare, undertaken in a cause however good, are always sure to outweigh its benefits. Let us listen once more to Dr. Arnold: "The truth is, that, if war carried on by regular armies under the strictest discipline is yet a great evil, an irregular partisan warfare is an evil ten times more intolerable; it is in fact no other than to give a license to a whole population to commit all sorts of treachery, rapine, and cruelty, without any restraint; letting loose a multitude of armed men, with none of the obedience and none of the honourable feelings of a soldier; cowardly because they are undisciplined, and cruel because they are cowardly." For such reasons he held—and most thinking persons will probably agree with him—that all irregular risings of a whole people against an invading army ought to be "impartially condemned, as a resource of small and doubtful efficacy, but full of certain atrocity, and a most terrible aggravation of the evils of war." Even in Spain, where Wellington derived some little help from guerilla bands, Napier believed that, if English aid had been withdrawn from the Spaniards, "one of the surest means by which the French could have gained the goodwill of the nation would have been the extirpating of the partidas." The Prussian uprising of 1813 succeeded mainly through the opportune triumphs of Austrian and Russian arms. In France the guerilla system has achieved next to nothing against numbers and superior discipline; but it has seriously aggravated every evil incidental to a hostile invasion, and has taught the French themselves to claim protection from Prussian dragoons against the baleful interference of their own Francs-Tireurs.

MOHAMMEDAN INTRIGUES.

[COMMUNICATED.]

From private letters received from India we learn that during the months of September, October, and November numbers of lithographed proclamations, purporting to emanate from the Emperor of Russia, have been circulated, through the post, among the influential natives of the North-West Provinces and the Punjab. In these proclamations the people are requested to be of good cheer, for the day of their deliverance from English oppression is at hand, and to be prepared to render active assistance to their deliverer.

We think it right to publish the information, not because we fear immediate Russian invasion of India, but because the attempts to unsettle the minds of our Indian subjects are increasing in boldness and frequency.

The natives of India have for many years past been taught, by insidious means, to believe that Russia is the greatest Power on earth, and that her invincible forces have only to appear to subdue everything before them. The peoples of our Eastern Empire are not a thinking, reasoning people. They are easily allured by anything that dazzles the imagination. Everything about us appears to them orderly and humdrum, and tales of Russian grandeur are accepted as facts not to be controverted. The masses are fervent believers in the tradition that has come down to them, and that tradition is that a mighty power will appear and deliver them from English bondage; and that power they have decided can only be Russia. The Sikhs believe that their great leader and priest—Gooroo Govind Singh—will return to earth and restore them to power, aided, in the first instance, by a great nation, whom he will eventually overthrow. The Mohammedans as firmly believe that their Prophet will return under somewhat similar circumstances, and the Hindoos, generally, are sanguine of delivery by one of their own gods. The effect of these things combined is slowly, yet surely, working evil for us in the future, and it is not a moment too soon to stare that evil in the face and meet it boldly.

Gentlemen with considerable Indian official experience will assure us that these things scarcely merit serious consideration, for that the hearts of the people are with us, and that we are daily acquiring a firmer hold on them by our just laws and Government. We sincerely wish we could accept the assurance as conclusive of the stability of our rule in India, but stubborn facts impel us the other way. We know and have studied all the races that inhabit the country from Bengal to Peshawur, and our experience of them justifies us in stating

1st. That the millions of Mohammedans whom we govern, to a man, detest us.

2nd. That the warrior races would willingly join any formidable enemy who may oppose us, and

3rd. That the so-called independent chiefs and princes are bitter in their hatred of us for reducing them to the position of puppets in the hands of our political agents.

Until the time arrives when education and freer intercourse with us will have enabled them to appreciate our rule, we must satisfy them that we are invincible. But they will not be so satisfied while intrigues are allowed to spread unchecked. Our indifference to the attempts, whether made by Russia or our dissatisfied subjects, to endanger our rule, is attributed, not to our contempt for the intrigues, but to our inability to crush them.

We cannot help condemning the laxity which permits hundreds and thousands of dangerous proclamations to be issued through the public post, and the evident incompetence of the police to detect the senders. Every proclamation must bear the post-mark of the town or district in which it is posted; and surely ordinary intelligence ought to be sufficient to trace the person or persons who post them.

We need hardly point out that indifference to such matters is sure to bring upon us trouble in the days that are coming. Ever since the Mutiny of 1857 rumours of disaffection and risings of the people have been kept alive with a persistency which ought to induce the belief that some great Power is at work and the desire to oppose and crush it.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE BATTLE OF THE GAUGES.

The Times of India allows that once in a campaign a battle or fort may be lost through the delay of a single hour, more often that of half-a-day. One has also heard of similar mischances from attack being delivered an hour too soon; but no one will admit there are any conceivable circumstances that practical politicians or generals would care to reason on, under which the Indian Empire or any important station in it might be lost because of a single hour or even a day's delay caused solely by some material impediment to transport. There was no break-of-gauge excuse between Meerut and Delhi in May, 1857; but a tremendous revolt, that eventually shook the Empire, gained head solely because of half-a-day's delay in pursuing a troop of cowardly miscreants who, once within the walls of the Mogul's city, became formidable military and political antagonists. If it be said this remark is travelling out of the strict line of argument, we reply it is needful in order to restore the sense of proportion which is lost sight of by those who, for the sake of an imaginary military emergency that may arise once in a century, would tax every ton of traffic, and inflict a permanent and all but unendurable burden on the country. If in any military emergency that fate has in store for us, or that the possible folly of our rulers (as from 1852 to 1857) can invite, our Empire in India or any considerable province of it can be lost in the time that might be required to transhipa regiment of cavalry or a park of artillery, then the sooner we begin to make arrangements to retire the better, or also make the avowal (wholly contrary to fact as it is) that we only stay in India for an indefinite but perceptibly limited period, or as long as we can, and whilst we make anything out of the country. In one sentence occurring between those we have quoted, our contemporary puts the practical issue which has to be debated—"If there were no break of gauge, men and material would reach the point of concentration in less time." Just so; and the question is—how much less, how often is the obstacle likely to arise? and is it worth while, for the sake of the uncertain, exceptional, and limited advantage, to incur a certain and ever present evil? It is, we repeat, a question of proportion, and is scarcely touched by the very general proposition "that in war, time is of inestimable value"—a remark which itself requires the very large qualification supplied by the word "occasionally." We have endeavoured, in regarding these questions from the theoretical standpoint, to follow as closely as possible the cue set by those who insist on uniformity; but this is not the way to treat the subject. We admit, of course, that transhipment would occasion a certain amount of delay; but let anyone, along with that, take into account—and no one can better estimate than our local contemporary—the thousand and one unavoidable hindrances, impediments, and mischances which, under the most perfect arrangements in India, must beset any rapid concentration and hastily combined movements of troops. Now let the mind dwell upon these difficulties which are inseparable from the hypothesis of a military emergency suddenly arising and sufficiently formidable to shake the four corners of the Empire. Would the detention at the "point of disjunction" enhance these difficulties by one-tenth? He would consider this carelessly, we say, who should put down the artificial impediment at one-twentieth. Then there is to set against that the substantial credit we claim, namely, that for the price of this occasional delay the country gets several hundred more lines of rail, and in half the time, compared with what would be the case were we to defer to those who insist on uniformity, and who would make ten thousand miles of communication subject to the conditions that obtain on the present five.

THE LATE SIR HENRY DURAND.

The Englishman holds that in Sir Henry Durand, his family, his country, and his friends have had a loss that time will not soon remedy; and those who knew him only as a public man will not forget the high sense of duty, the unsparing industry, the thoroughgoing honesty, which marked his whole career. From the date of his arrival in this country in 1830 up to the time he died, full of honours, though not of years, he did right-good service wherever he chanced to be; and whether as a young lieutenant blowing in the gates of Ghuznee, or as an experienced councillor of State directing the administration in which he had taken so large a part in his younger days, he thought of nothing but how to do his duty, and thinking did it. He was the only survivor of a school which numbered Outram, Henry Lawrence, and Sleeman among its members; and although we have still good men for the work before us, they are of a different and perhaps less lovable stamp.

The Bombay Gazette thinks the melancholy death of Sir Henry Durand will have produced a painful feeling throughout India. Recently established in the Government of the Punjab, he was engaged in a minute survey of the frontier, from which much might have been expected, when an accident abruptly terminated his eventful career. If not the last, he was one of the last of the Romans—those soldier-politicals who have done so much to illustrate the rule of the English in India. A long life, with the striking incidents of which the public are familiar, has unhappily ended in a tragedy; but it has this compensation, it will serve to grave his name more deeply on the page of history. The shocking incident may cause some changes in the Executive Council, unless the Secretary of State can find a man to his liking outside that body; but it will not be easy to discover a man more fitted for the post than the gallant soldier and gentleman who has so strangely been taken away.

The Friend of India has the painful duty this week of recording the death of a man among the truest who ever held rule for England in India; a man so pure and lofty in his aims and acts that he never held an office without adorning it, and without leaving it higher in that public estimation which alone is of value to a public man. Seven months ago, almost to the day, we had the pleasure of saying what the writer of an article on the subject of Sir Henry Durand's appointment to the Lieutenant-Governorship of the Punjab felt to be true and right of Sir Henry's character and services. When those lines were penned the writer little thought how soon they would again be called for as testimony to the name and memory of that great man, when his voice would be silenced and his great heart stilled for evermore. It is a pleasure to the present writer to look back on those words—not his words—so warmly, so lovingly penned, so lit up with a feeling that no wealth or position could have commanded from any man capable of so putting word to word on any subject ever given to human pen. In that article—which we thought for some moments of simply reprinting—we follow, from stage to stage, all but the latter part of the unselfish career of Sir Henry Durand. We see him landing at Calcutta in 1830, the fellow-voyageur of Dr. Duff, another hero as dauntless and as pure. We see him again in 1870 as he declares in all the simplicity of true genius—of that genius which fears God and has no other fear—that his work had been as nothing compared with that of his fellow-passenger. We see him again, four years after his first landing, at the head of a party of engineers, prosecuting valuable scientific investigations, opening the way to new studies; then contributing to the scientific reviews careful and thoughtful papers, in strong and nervous language, adding to human thought line on line, and fact on fact, till the time for action came; then blowing up the gate of Ghuznee; then telling as only such a man could tell the story of the Cabul war; then striving with wise against unwise counsel in Persia; then acting as Lord Ellenborough's private secretary, and "never once seeking his own private ends, but sacrificing himself for others," when "he had such influence with the Governor-General that he had only to ask and he would have received;" then making all bad men his enemies and all good men his friends at Moulmein, striking with all his might—and what a might it was!—against all wrong, scorning to pander to it, or treat with it, or hold any terms with it, in high quarters or in low. That was Sir Henry Durand, and very appositely and forcibly indeed do the lines applied by the same writer to another hero apply to him:—

"To reverence the King as if he were
Their conscience, and their conscience as their King,
To teach the heathen and uphold the Christ,
To ride abroad redeeming human wrongs,
To speak no slander, no, nor listen to it,
To lead sweet lives in purest chastity."

THE NEW FINANCIAL PROGRAMME.

The Englishman, remarking on the resolution which directs that each local Government shall yearly submit its accounts to the scrutiny of its local public, thinks it will be impossible for a subordinate Administration to create vast permanent drains upon the revenue without attracting public attention. The enormous abuses by which, in Bengal, for example, the police force was erected into a lucrative asylum for favoured dependants on the Government, and by which, year after year, the expense of the Administration was increased without in the least degree increasing its usefulness, will never be again ventured on. But it is not the accounts alone that have to be subjected to the criticism of the local public; each subordinate Government must also submit to its local public the means by which it proposes to raise such local revenue as it may find necessary for the ensuing year. If these measures are not of a character to command the general assent, we shall be able to criticise them with an amount of detailed knowledge which it is at present impossible to bring to bear upon the wider schemes of the Imperial Budget. It will be in vain for a Provincial Governor to shut his ears to the outside voice, for there will be henceforth a Court of Appeal in which both the measures proposed by the local Administration, and the objections brought against them by the local community, will be impartially tried. The Governor-General in Council reserves, in the amplest terms, the right to consider and the power to refuse any financial schemes which the subordinate administrations may devise. While, therefore, a local Governor will thus have a strong support against anything like factious opposition on the part of particular sections of his local community, we may be sure that well-grounded and unanimous objections on the part of that community will tell with conclusive weight against an obstinate or wrong-headed Administration. Whatever the Decentralisation Scheme may fail to effect—and we confess that we should have liked to have seen it of a more comprehensive character—it will at least force the subordinate Governors to place themselves in accord with the public opinion of the communities over which they preside. There are three Local Governments which have no Councils, and, we think, to make the proposed publicity really valuable a Council of Finance in some form or another should be organised at Allahabad, Lucknow and the Punjab. It will be too late to give the public information after the Local and Imperial Governments have discussed and decided the question by a demi-official correspondence; at all events it would be by far the more satisfactory system of discussing a new cess or an increase of an old one, than merely publishing a resolution in the Gazette for the public to look at or to overlook, as the case might be.

AKBAR AND LORD MAYO.—The Asiatic does not approve of the treatment to which the discourteous Maharajah of Jodhpore was subjected by the Supreme Government. According to this journal, one of the young India School, the Governor-General ought to have treated the recusant with genial contempt, and have told him either to attend the Durbar or stay away, as if his attendance or non-attendance were matter of perfect indifference. The instalment of punishment awarded on the spot is described as "harsh and demonstrable"—meaning public, and the Maharajah is informed that he might have gone to law with the Viceroy. This is a very good specimen of the new school, and we are not going to debate with them. It is sufficient to repeat their views, which serve to point the road these softly speaking gentlemen would have us go. Three hundred years ago, in 1570, Akbar, in one of his many expeditions into Rajpootana, chanced to be near the frontier of Jodhpore; and "Maldeo, the old Rajah of Jodhpore," writes Mountstuart Elphinstone, "sent his second son to meet him. This Akbar resented, as an imperfect substitute for his own appearance; and afterwards, assuming a superiority to which he was not entitled, made a formal grant of Jodhpore to Rai Sing of Bikaneer, a junior member of the same family." Akbar was a politic, but not a severe or harsh monarch, and had he possessed the power as well as the indubitable supremacy of the British Government, there can be no doubt that he would have enforced his sentence at the head of an army. The policy adopted by the Viceroy, who wields a force to which no Delhi Emperor ever pretended, is much less harsh than that of Akbar; and moreover, the Viceroy represents the actual Paramount Power. We cite the conduct of Akbar merely to show that in 1570, as well as 1870, a slight put upon the sovereign authority was resented on grounds of policy, and not permitted to pass by with impunity. The appeal to our fears, which forms part of the pleading in the Asiatic, is as irrelevant as the implied suggestion that the Maharajah might have gone to law. When we refrain from punishing insult, lest we should shake "the loyalty of an ancient noble," we shall deserve the fate of ignominious expulsion, which will then not be far distant.—Bombay Gazette.

VICEREGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

The Council met at Government House on December 30, under the presidency of Lord Mayo.

The Hon. Mr. Strachey moved for leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to advances of money by the Government for the improvement of land. He said that a system of making advances of this description had been in force in many parts of India almost since the commencement of the British rule in this country, and that there had also been in force several old regulations, passed in the beginning of the last century, bearing on this subject. Thus the present measure had for its object the consolidation of these old laws. The security for the advances to be made was good and complete, inasmuch as the very lands on which money was to be advanced, and on which improvements were to be carried out, were proposed to be securities. Then in regard to the recovery of the money advanced there would be no difficulty; it would be recovered in the same manner as they recovered arrears of land revenue. This measure of consolidation would be a favourable step to the grand scheme for the consolidation of all the statutes in force in this country—a scheme which his friend Mr. Stephen wished to consummate; and the Government believed that the principles of the measure for the purposes of carrying out works of agricultural improvements were very good. The works on which advances were to be made were not works of magnitude, requiring great engineering skill and a large outlay of money, but works of improvement within the capacity of the proprietors of land, with such little help from Government as would be deemed necessary. Those works would, for the most part, consist of wells, drains, reclamation of waste-lands, and so forth. But there was, he thought, another class of works on which advances might be made with benefit, and advances on these works have hardly been made at all. He alluded to the subsidiary irrigating canals which, he thought, should be connected with the main canals undertaken by Government. If the proprietors and occupiers of land could be induced, for the purposes of irrigation, to have small canals leading to the main ones, then a great impetus would be given to the agricultural prospects of this country. Although these subsidiary works require little engineering skill and expense, yet the cost, he thought, was greater than the proprietors and occupiers of land could well afford; and this was a serious obstacle in the way of agricultural improvements. Unless this encouragement was given he was of opinion that it was impossible that full benefit could be drawn from the main canals undertaken by Government. Under present circumstances it rested with the proprietors and occupiers of land to take, or not to take, advantage of the main canals—they did as they pleased. In some instances there was extreme delay in taking water after the main canals were made, and this delay was a great obstacle to the improvement of agricultural prospects and the accession of wealth. The Government believed that there could be no object to which the proposed advances could be more advantageously and properly devoted than this; and in making the advances there could not possibly be any loss or risk. The system of making advances was known by the people and generally appreciated. Into the details of the scheme he did not think it necessary to enter. The conditions under which the advances were to be made, the manner in which they were to be recovered, and so forth, would be fully set forth when he would introduce the Bill. The local Governments were all consulted regarding this measure in a letter which was printed in the Gazette of India about six months ago. Answers had been received to that letter from all the local Governments in North India; and although many suggestions had been made, yet the measure was generally appreciated by all the authorities consulted. This system, which had long been in force in India, though under many divisions, was identical in principle with that existing in many parts of England and Ireland in the shape of the Land Improvement Act, which, he thought, was well known; and he was of opinion that there was no country in the world to which a system of this kind was more properly applicable than India; for in India there was one great source of industry —agriculture; and one great source of work was the land. The honourable speaker then made some further remarks on the benefits that would accrue to India, both agriculturally and financially, if the proposed system were adopted; and also on the position of the Government as the chief landlord with reference to the subordinate proprietors and occupiers of land. The motion was put, and agreed to.

The Hon. Mr. Cockerell moved for leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Abkari revenue in Northern India. He said that this was a consolidated measure, embodying the substance of five Acts bearing on the subject. He then made some remarks explanatory of the objects and reasons of the measure, and concluded by suggesting the desirability of confining the measure to this presidency only. The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon. Mr. Robinson introduced the Bill to consolidate the law relating to the manufacture, importation, and sale of arms and ammunition, and the right to keep and use the same ; and to move that it be referred to a select committee, with instructions to report in six weeks. This was also a consolidated measure, its objects being to consolidate the three Acts in which the law relating to arms and ammunition was contained. The motion was put, and agreed to.

Colonel the Hon. R. Strachey moved that the Hon. Mr. Inglis be added to the select committee on the Bill to regulate the construction and maintenance of public works for irrigation, navigation, and drainage. The motion was put and agreed to.

Miscellaneous.

BANK OF BENGAL.—The Bank of Bengal has declared a dividend for the half year at the rate of 5½ per cent. per annum.

THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.—The new Department of Agriculture, it is intended, says the Daily Examiner, shall form a branch of the Home Department, the Agricultural Secretary drawing the same pay as the Home Secretary—viz., the reduced salary of Rs. 3,500 a month.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—Lord Napier of Magdala was, after having spent Christmas with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Maddocks, at Bhagulpore, to take the Carigolah route to Darjeeling, thence visiting Julpigoree, Buxa, Assam, and the eastern frontier districts, and arriving in Calcutta late in February.

CIVIL.—The Indian Daily News hears that Mr. E. F. Harrison, Comptroller-General of Accounts, intends shortly to proceed to England on leave, and that Mr. H. D. Sandeman, Accountant-General of Bengal, is likely to be appointed to officiate for him during his absence. In that case Mr. Mangles, the Deputy Accountant-General, it is probable, will act for the latter.

MILITARY.—The Pioneer is informed that all the reports on the Martini-Henry rifles sent out to India for trial have now been sent home. They are, it is believed, almost uniformly favourable ; and our contemporary hopes, therefore, "that in a short time the new arm, indisputably the best in use, will be in the hands of the whole British army."

A GOOD SUGGESTION.—In an article in the Englishman respecting the growth of cotton in Assam, the following sensible remark occurs: —"A reward is offered for cleaning and preparing the fibre of the Rhea grass. Surely cotton is of sufficient importance to warrant a like reward being given for a gin that would be within the reach of the grower." This question has been raised in Western India for a long time past, and as yet the Government have made no sign.

REDUCTION OF SALARIES.—A Calcutta paper, the Daily Examiner, says :—"The salary of the Secretary in the Home Department, and those of other Secretaries to the Government of India, are, it is said, to be reduced, the reduction in the case of the Home Department to be from Rs. 4,166 to Rs. 3,500 a month. The salaries of the Under Secretaries will, at the same time, be reduced from Rs. 1,500 to Rs. 1,000 a month. These contemplated reductions, at any rate those of the salaries of the Under-Secretaries, we cannot help regarding as both illiberal and impolitic, and calculated to have a most injurious effect on the future personnel of the Civil Service."

MAN'S ENEMIES.—Mr. Mackenzie, Officiating Joint Secretary to the Government of Bengal, has addressed to the Government of India an interesting report on deaths from wild animals and snakes, and the cost to the Bengal Government of destroying these dreadful enemies of the poor people of the jungle districts. The provision for reaching the end in view is by offering rewards, sometimes proportioned to the extent of the mischief done. For a man-eating tiger or a particularly destructive elephant a special reward is given. In Behar the wolves are so ferocious that marksmen are selected from the police to hunt them down, and other persons are employed to trap them, though all the good intentions are often thwarted by the superstition of the people, who believe that ill-luck rests on a village where a wolf is killed. This "beats anything!" In the war against snakes the Government, by paying only two annas for each snake killed, very soon expended Rs. 30,000. The Lieutenant-Governor recommends that in districts where the pest is great hunting parties should be organised.—Friend of India.

PUBLIC WORKS BLUNDERING.—"The state of the Montgomery Hall, Lahore," says the Indian Public Opinion, "has recently attracted considerable attention. Some time ago, a report having arisen that cracks had appeared in the roof, they were examined and declared to be unimportant. The places at that time plastered up have again opened, at least it appears so ; and to casual observers, not highly trained in the D. P. W. mysteries, a building in which every arch is cracked, the great end arches very widely, the cracks extending up the walls and along the roof, appears to require instant examination. It would be a pity to see this splendid hall, on some occasion when the vibration of dancing and music discovered its weak point, collapsing like the Allahabad Gun Carriage Factory." "The Public Works Department appears to be getting into hot water all over the country," says the Mofussilite, "the latest information being regarding the treasury buildings at Bareilly, which were built in 1865. They are now found to be in a highly dangerous state."

SUICIDE OF AN OFFICER AT CAWNPORE.—A distressing story reaches us from Cawnpore that Captain Johnson, lately serving at Allahabad with the detachment of the 1-14th Regiment, has committed suicide at the former place. We are told that while here the deceased officer had shown such distinct symptoms of mental disorder that he had been ordered to the headquarters of the regiment for medical examination. If the details as reported to us are in accordance with facts, there can be little doubt of his unsound mind at the time of the catastrophe. We are told that about noon on the 26th instant the deceased mounted his bicycle and rode some four or five miles to the tank at Nawabgunge. He there asked some natives to fetch him bricks, but they refused, under the impression that he would throw them at themselves. He, however, looked about for stones or bricks, and at last finding some hard materials, began to beat his head with them, and immediately afterwards hurried to the adjoining tank, a very deep one, and threw himself in. The natives, witnesses of the scene, then ran for the police, who dragged the tank. The body was easily recovered, but life was extinct.—Pioneer, Dec. 31.

FORESTS IN BENGAL.—The report on the forest administration of Bengal gives an insight into the great timber wealth of the country. The estimated area of valuable forests on Government land in Assam alone is over 4,000 square miles,—the forests of the lower Dehing river by themselves cover 600 square miles, and contain "the most excellent timber in Upper Assam"—possessing almost everywhere great facilities for transport by water. The Government is not, however, so jealous of its treasures as might be supposed, for private companies cut down without hindrance or remonstrance such timber as they require, and they have the misfortune to require a great deal and the judgment to choose the finest. Thus the Upper Assam Tea Company have a saw-mill in active operation in the neighbourhood of Debrooghur, and the Dehing Saw-mill Company is working unrestrictedly the "exceptionally fine poma forests on the Sessanuddy." The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, while fully recognising the value of these agencies for the supply of timber to meet all local wants, is of opinion "that it cannot be permitted that the system hitherto in force of uncontrolled use of the State forests by private companies should continue." The subject is certainly worth consideration.

THE PUNJAB FORCES.—In 1869-70 the Army in the Punjab was less by 3,961 men and 8 guns than it was in the previous year. In the former year 32,810 men with 123 guns held that province. Of the men 15,005 were British, the remainder of course native ; 2,346 Europeans, 3,467 natives, and 25 guns occupied Peshawur. The Punjab Frontier Force stood at 12,466 in 1869-70, costing Rs. 36,31,249. It is divided into 746 artillery, 2,827 cavalry, 8,891 infantry, 2 "staff." The Police Force of all descriptions numbered 1,701 horse and 18,034 foot, all natives, with 73 Europeans and 520 native officers of various grades, costing Rs. 29,12,411. Of the constables, 51·1 per cent. were Mohammedans ; 17·8 per cent. Sikhs ; 7·7 per cent. Brahmins ; 7·9 per cent. Rajpoots ; 12 per cent. Hindoos of other castes ; 1,058 were foreigners, of whom 215 belonged to tribes of the Trans-Indus Frontier. The proportion of Imperial police available for the prevention and detection of crime was that of one policeman to 2,620 persons, and to 13½ square miles ; "In Ireland the proportion of police to population is 1 to 420 persons." The total cost was a little less than 2 annas 8 pies, or 3¾d. per head of population ; "in England and Wales it exceeds 2s. per head of population."—Delhi Gazette.

BUDDHISM.—Dr. Murray Mitchell's lecture on Buddhism, lately delivered at the Bethune Society, Calcutta, shows a close and careful research into the history of that faith. He says that we are chiefly dependant for the life of Buddha on the Lahta Vistara, a work full of marvellous tales, in some cases so improbable as to have induced critics to regard the whole contents as a mere fable. In this opinion the lecturer does not entirely concur ; he believes that a King whose territory was somewhere between Oudh and Nepaul had a son named Buddha, born about the latter end of the third century, and who lived about eighty years. About this period sacerdotalism and caste were supreme, and Buddhism striking against the intolerable practices of Brahmanism was a natural and almost necessary reaction. Many circumstances tended to favour the faith and to make its adoption popular among the people. The proud domineering behaviour of the Brahmins was becoming intolerable, and their preaching was in a language not understood by the masses. On the other hand Buddha preached in simple words, in the vernacular to all castes. He spoke of morality and kindness to the lower animals, raised the status of the females, and spoke with earnestness and great force to the people. Dr. Mitchell says that it is not easy to decide from the meagre information how far Buddha's conceptions were original or borrowed from other sources, but he is inclined to believe that Buddha had greater merits than writers give him credit for. Buddhism as a product of the Indian mind, and the powerful influence it has had on the philosophy and religion of the Hindoos, must be especially interesting. Buddhism is materialism ; there is no soul—all is matter. Buddha never spoke of a Supreme Being, though his followers had perishable gods. Transmigration is not a Buddhistic doctrine, for there is no soul to transmigrate ; but at death there is a separation of mateer, and a new being is formed.

THE YEARLY REPORTS.—The Secretary of State for India is far from being satisfied with the preparation of the annual administration reports, and has written to the Viceroy on the subject. His Grace wishes it to be distinctly understood that the preparation of these reports constitutes a most important part of the duty of a Government, and that it is very desirable on all accounts that each report should exhibit a comprehensive view of administrative progress. Of the eight reports submitted those of the Punjab and British Burmah are considered by his Grace as the most complete and satisfactory; those of the North-West Provinces and the Central Provinces, he says, are not open to objection; and of the rest he adds that the report for Bombay is very much the worst. He then points out to his Excellency the Viceroy that an administration report, to be of any value, should afford to the reader an adequate view of the resources of the territory under the Government, and of the working of the various departments of the administration; and that it should also contain a clear and condensed statement of the more important questions which have engaged the attention of the Government during the year. The Duke also complains of the great want of punctuality which there is in the transmission of the reports, and intimates his desire that in future they may be despatched to him in January, so that they may reach the India-office during the month of February.

A MODEL RAJAH.—The young Rajah of Kaypurthala is devoting himself with much assiduity to the improvement of his State. The first great want was good roads. Two have been begun from Sultanpore and Kurtarpore to Kapurthala, and about five or six miles of each are thrown up though not yet made pucca. The memorial to the late Rajah is completed, and the walls have been finished round the palace gardens, and beautiful cast-iron gates got from Roorkee. We are glad to hear that, personally, the Rajah works hard to improve himself. He goes to office regularly every day. Already a good English scholar, he keeps up his reading, and has recently turned his attention to music so far as to take regular lessons on the piano! The Dewan Mutthra Dass, one of the most intelligent men in these parts, has also gone in for music, and even Jeypore must feel small when he hears that both the Prince and the Prime Minister of Kapurthala have positively tried singing! The Prince, however, came to the conclusion that he should prefer to practice on the violin, but the Dewan, we believe, still practises. In one point we hear a very favourable account of the Kapurthala State. It is said that a general desire for English education has sprung up, and that the chief men of the State, encouraged by the example of their Prince, are sending their children to school, and are anxious for their improvement.—Indian Public Opinion.

BURRA KHANAS.—Why do not the Government pass a Burra Khanah Act? There are laws for repressing public nuisances; why should there not be a law for abating one of the most serious evils that we daily experience in private life? Public nuisances are suppressed because they interfere with the comfort, or affect the health, of particular localities; and we may well ask upon what grounds burra khanas have been exempted from legislative control. They are undoubtedly evils of the first magnitude, and disturb the repose, not merely of particular neighbourhoods, but of the whole community, and urgently demand the attention of an intelligent Legislature. We feel sure that an Act placing burra khanas under suitable restrictions would be one of the most popular pieces of legislation that the Governor-General's Council could undertake. Which of our legislators will take up the matter, and earn the well-deserved gratitude, not only of the present generation, but of a long posterity? Mr. Martin rescued himself from oblivion by advocating the cause of oppressed animals, and Martin's Act still lives in our Statute-book as an undying memorial of the humanity of its author. Why should not Mr. Stephen now take up the cause of the oppressed diners-out in Calcutta, and immortalise his name by rescuing them from those dreadful scourges and tormentors of society, the givers of these dreary and unwholesome burra khanas?—Englishman.

SUCCESS OF THE PUNJAB TENANCY ACT.—After the numerous predictions made at the time the Punjab Tenancy Act was before the Legislative Council, of the ruin it would work to proprietors, the effect it would have in transferring whole districts from the hands of one class of owners to another, the amount of disaffection to our rule it would be certain to excite—our readers will be surprised to learn that, so far from these predictions being verified, the old recorded proprietors of the soil have treated the measure with the greatest indifference, and up to this time it has worked with perfect smoothness. The administration report says:—"Some delay took place in completing the arrangements for carrying the Act into effect, but it is now in full operation; up to the present time it has worked smoothly. The tenants who lost status under the operation of the recent settlements have been very active in suing to recover their lost position; but the proprietors have been singularly apathetic, and the provisions enabling them to evict occupancy tenants on payment of compensation are most rarely put in force. In forwarding the monthly return of tenancy cases for April, 1870, the Financial Commissioner remarked:—No excitement whatever has occurred from the introduction of the Act in any class of people connected with the land, nor do I anticipate that any excitement or difficulty will occur in working the Act." This, to our thinking, is about as complete an answer as could be given to those detractors of the late Viceroy and the members of Council who urged forward the passing of the measure. The result has fully proved its necessity and expediency.—Mofussilite.

CINCHONA.—In a report to the Government of Bengal, Mr. C. B. Clarke, Superintendent Botanical Gardens and Cinchona plantations in Bengal, calls attention to the state of Cinchona cultivation at Sikhim, and to the questions of its extension and the manufacture of quinine. He says that there are two Plantations at Sikhim, Rungyroong, and Rungbee. The elevation most suitable for the plant depends upon the kind of Cinchona, and varies from 1,000 to 5,000 feet. Mr. Clarke estimates the value of the produce of this year, 1870-71, at Rs. 15,000 from 100 acres; next year about 265 acres more will come into bearing. With reference to extension, he thinks that Government will have to consider whether it is only intended to supply sufficient Quinine for the service, or whether the benefits of the medicine will be extended to the public by producing it in large quantities and selling it at a cheaper rate than it can be had in the European market. He thinks it would be more economical to concentrate the manufacture at one place, and thus diminish the cost. Another consideration with regard to extension is the position of private Cinchona plantations. At present there are only a few and these will pay well if the bark maintains its present price of 1s. 8d. per lb., which can hardly, however, be if competition ensues, owing to the extension of Government plantations. In 1869-70 the quinine issued from the Government stores in the Bengal Presidency amounted to 2,671 lbs. Mr. Clarke estimates that the present plantations will yield 6,000 lbs. of quinine in a few years, and consequently if Government only wishes to manufacture sufficient for its own purpose there is no need to extend the cultivation. He thinks that the only point really worthy of consideration is whether the scheme would not interfere with private enterprise. The Government of Bengal referred the matter for the consideration of the Government of India, and the latter directs that measures be taken for the immediate extension of Cinchona Succirubra as well as the gradual planting of C. Calisaya—due regard being had to economy.

BLACKMAIL IN RAJPOOTANA.—A chapter of Indian life seldom opened to the readers of Upper India is that which tells of the predatory clans who levy their blackmail on undefended and moneyed travellers in Rajpootana. For the apprehension of these highwaymen and the redress of travellers, Courts of vakeels sit at Ajmeer, Aboo, Oodeypore, Jeypore, Jodhpore, and Deolee, the four latter being under the guidance of their respective political agents, and composed of the vakeels attendant upon those officers. The special objects of the Courts are the restoring stolen property to its owners, making the dacoits of Central India suffer for injuries inflicted on subjects beyond their own chief's jurisdiction, and the hearing of such cases within their powers as cannot be decided by any one State. Rules for their guidance have been published in the last issue of the Punjab Government Gazette, and are worthy a passing notice, as they deal of a subject which, although it seldom comes before the public, is undoubtedly one of the highest importance to Central India. Travellers in the native States, to be able to claim compensation, are in the above rules ordered to take "sufficient" precautions; that is, they must be escorted by armed men in the proportion of one man to every Rs. 1,000 worth of goods in their possession; they must sleep at night only at authorised places and under the immediate surveillance of the village chowkeydar, and while sleeping their escort must be judiciously disposed as sentries, and they must engage guides for the day time. When, in spite of these precautions, any crime is perpetrated, the injured person or his agent must accompany the tracking party, as also must those who in the first instance discovered the clue to the criminals, until another State is reached. At this point the State into which the pursuit has been carried is compelled by law to take up the chase, and villages refusing, when called on, to assist in pursuing dacoits, render themselves liable for the whole value of the stolen property. These rules seem somewhat harsh, but there can be no doubt that they are not more stringent than is necessary. For the hostility which too often exists between neighbouring States and the predilection which such enemies have for harbouring runaway criminals from each other's domains, render it at all times most difficult to capture, or even to pursue, the daring and fast travelling robbers of Central India; and nothing but severe regulations with an unbending application of their penalties could possibly ensure the administration of justice to travellers.—Pioneer.

COTTON CULTIVATION IN THE NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.—The prospects of the cotton crop of the North-West Provinces for 1870-71 are reported by the Secretary to the Board of Revenue as "everywhere favourable." The estimated area and yield are, we are told, respectively 7 and 126 per cent. in excess of the actuals of last year, but what we are to understand from the following is not—to us at any rate—very clear:—"The estimated area and yield are thus in area 7, and for produce 126 per cent. in excess of the actuals of last year. The deduction to be made for this on account of the partial injury suffered by some of the south-east districts is probably unimportant. The whole estimated yield of cotton in the Benares division, the Allahabad, Futtehpore, Banda, and Cawnpore districts, amounts to 16 per cent. only of the total estimated yield, and a large part of these districts escaped the late heavy rainfall. Probably about 8 per cent. of the whole estimated yield may have come under its effects, and of the estimated yield of this limited portion a quarter may possibly be deducted." Is the Board of Revenue "hedging," or is it only confused with its calculations? There is at Boolundshuhur an experimental cotton seed farm, but the results are, as in every other instance we can remember, failures. Nor without an unreasonable stretch of the imagination could any other result have been looked for, as—the old story—"the seed came too late." Now, it is no doubt most praiseworthy to institute "experiments," but if these are conducted carelessly and without sufficient foresight to, for instance, guarantee that seeds shall be ready at the proper sowing time, the praise merited is—well, inconsiderable. For proof that we are not carping idly, we may refer our readers to the report lately furnished to this Government by the Officiating Collector of Boolundshuhur. In this we are told that of the first sowing more than two-fifths were destroyed; a second sowing was effected with the following success:—"From the 150 beegahs under cultivation our produce under favourable circumstances (i.e., with a little more care) should have been 300 maunds. . . . . We have already stored 21 maunds of cotton of sorts, and the estimate of cotton in the plants gives 97 maunds. Our hope for out-turn should therefore be 118 maunds, but the frost is making sad havoc among the bolls, and the actuals may yet fall far short of our expectations." The result, in short, will, perhaps, be about 50 maunds "of sorts." —Pioneer.

IMPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Jan. 4.—Since last mail the tone of the market has gradually improved, and business now seems in a healthier state than has been observable for some time past. Stocks in dealers' hands and in the interior are comparatively small, and with a moderate demand; holders have on their part exhibited less anxiety to sell. Grey Shirtings: A fair demand continues to be experienced for the light makes of 39-inch, say up to 7lb., and prices have a hardening tendency; 8¼lb. are only moderately dealt in at rather better prices. The wide widths are very quiet. Grey Jaconets continue in fair request, but Madapollams and T-Cloths are very quiet. Grey Mulls, 39-inch, are more saleable, but for 44-inch the demand has again fallen off, and prices are easier. Grey Twist, 40's, have been more inquired for during the past few days, and prices have taken an upward turn.

EXPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Jan. 4.—Saltpetre: A fair amount of business has been done both in crude and refined kinds at Rs. 6-10 to 6-14 for the former, and Rs. 7-6 to 7-10 for the latter. The stock is about 4,000 to 5,000 bags in the market of crude kinds. Rice: Inquiry for Balam and Moonghy kinds; some transactions have been done at prices ranging 2 to 3 annas higher than our last quotations. Linseed: A moderate business has been done for shipments to Great Britain, but heavy shipments have been made for America at prices 1 anna higher than our last quotations. Rapeseed: There is an active demand for shipments, but we have heard of no transaction to report since the date of our last, owing to the scarcity of supplies from the interior. Teelseed: The market is bare of stock, and, consequently, we have heard of no change to report. Jute: We have heard of no heavy sales made in baled Jute, on account of the advanced rates of freight. There is some inquiry for loose Jute, and some transactions have been done at our last quotations. Raw Silk: About 40 maunds of Radnagore Silk have changed hands during the week at prices ranging from Rs. 13-8 to 17 per factory seer.

MILITARY.—We regret to announce the death of Major Brown, Paymaster of H.M.'s 45th Regiment (Sherwood Foresters), which took place at Fort St. George, Madras, on the afternoon of Jan. 1.

COFFEE.—We understand the coffee growers in the Ouchterlony valley and the Wynaad are most sanguine that the coming crop will be an unusually good one. In the Ouchterlony valley alone it is estimated that the produce of the several estates will amount to not less than 900 tons. If coffee planting with some adventurers is a bad speculation, with others it is the almost certain road to wealth.

COAL IN THE GODAVERY.—Colonel Haig, R.E., of the Godavery navigation works, has found coal near Dumagudiem, the headquarters of those works, about 130 miles from Cocanada. Although not quite so good as English coal for locomotive purposes, it is said to be good enough for use for welding purposes in the Government workshop. The question of working the seams, where its existence has been established beyond doubt, is under consideration. Dr. Oldham's opinion of the coal is said to be favourable.

DEATH OF A MAN-EATER.—A friend at Secunderabad informs the Pioneer that a man-eating tiger, which had been credited or debited with the deaths of fourteen persons during the year, was shot at Mahadopore, near Secunderabad, on Dec. 17, by Lieutenant Kennedy, 18th Hussars. The mother of one and the husband of another of the brute's victims had the satisfaction of assisting to skin him, after which, we are assured, he was devoured by the villagers. After this precedent there will be no safety for the inhabitants of the Jardin de Plantes if the blockade of Paris continues.

THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.—The Superintendent of the School of Industrial Arts has informed Government that there are a good many varieties of pottery to be procured in Southern India for the International Exhibition of 1871. Some of the descriptions are of characteristic and elegant shapes, while others are peculiar in quality and likely to prove of interest in European collections. He has written to several officials in the Mofussil, requesting them to inform him what would be the cost of good collections of pottery, glazed pottery, and porcelain, to represent the manufactures as at present carried on in these territories. The probable cost of the articles will be about Rs. 215.

SMOKING TIGERS.—Ootacamund has lately furnished us with a proof that tigers can climb trees to a considerable height, and a local paper now furnishes us with the following account of other hitherto unknown peculiarities of these animals. A correspondent, who signs himself "Not a Munchausen," writes to the Neilgherry Excelsior as follows:—"I observe you give an anecdote of a tiger snatching a cigar from a gentleman's hand and bolting with it. A friend of mine once had a tiger cub and a terrier pup in rearing. He was a great smoker, and the pets would play about the room whilst he indulged in the weed. The sweeper noticed that there was a gradual decrease of the cigar ends thrown away by his master, which could only be due to his master becoming less moderate in his habit, or the use of the cigar ends by some one else. Determined to ascertain the cause, he watched, and found one evening, after his master had retired to bed, that the tiger cub was the new customer for the cigar ends, his companion, the pup, bringing him a fire stick, stealthily abstracted from the kitchen! These are not the only instances of tigers taking to smoking. Mehemet Aly, the most enlightened ruler Egypt has ever had, kept a tame tiger, a full-grown one, to which he always handed his hooka after he had nearly exhausted the scented opium ball. On one occasion the Pasha having gone out to dinner, the hookabadar prepared the hooka as usual, and leaving the mouthpiece on the favourite chair of his Highness, went to watch his return. Entering the room with the Pasha, the first object that met their sight was the tame tiger lying fast asleep near the hooka. The Pasha called in vain, and the hookabadar shook the tiger in vain. He was dead drunk, having exhausted, by smoking, every atom of the scented opium ball."

DEFALCATION IN THE TRAVANCORE TREASURY.—A BARRISTER ALLOWED TO APPEAR FOR THE DEFENCE.—A defalcation of some

Rs. 30,000 has been brought to light in the Travancore Treasury and a Committee of Enquiry, vested with criminal powers, has been appointed to investigate the matter. The Head Accountant (who was the means of discovering the deficiency in the Treasury funds) and the shroff have, on the recommendation of Sir T. Madava Row, Dewan, been suspended, pending their trial. Mr. W. S. Gantz, barrister-at-law, appeared for the Head Accountant, and on the Committee's meeting was informed that the British Resident objected to his addressing the Court direct, but that he could conduct his case through a native Vakil. Mr. Gantz then said that he had received a telegram from the Fouzdar Commissioner of H H. the Maharajah stating that the "enquiry was postponed as desired—by order," which implied his right to appear. To this it was objected that the communication of the British Resident was of subsequent date; but the committee would have no objections to adjourn the case to allow of H.H.'s permission being obtained. Mr. Gantz accordingly petitioned H.H. for permission, which was at once granted. On the committee meeting next day Mr. Gantz was informed that H.H. had given his consent, but that no mention had been made in the petition about the Resident's objection, to which Mr. Gantz replied that the Resident's objection was worthless in the face of H.H.'s order; that H.H. being the supreme authority of the country, was, by every principle of constitutional law, the fountain of justice and the head of all the Courts, and that if H.H. chose to set aside any custom or rule of procedure which had hitherto obtained in his Courts, he was perfectly at liberty to do so, and neither the Resident nor any one else had the right to object. The Committee then referred the matter to the Judge of the Sudr Court, and Mr. Gantz was eventually allowed to appear.

THE BOMBAY COTTON CROP.

GUZERAT.—Mr. Stormont has submitted the following report regarding the state of the cotton crop in Surat and the surrounding districts, during the week ending the 31st December:—

"In the Surat and other districts, where the crop is late, no damage is apprehended to arise in consequence of the very extraordinary weather we have had during the past week. Rain fell on the 27th and 28th to the amount of 12 cents. The plants in the districts, especially on black land, are suffering from mildew; and this moisture will most certainly check it; not, however, directly, for, as every one is aware, a moist state of atmosphere is the life of all kinds of fungi; but the plants will, I believe, be so refreshed and invigorated by this unexpected syringing that their foliage will start into fresh growth and entirely throw off the disease. In districts where the crop is more mature, such as Broach, the effects will not be quite so happy, on account of the boll worm, for it seems that though the cloudy weather does not generate the insects, it certainly has some peculiar effect in promoting their extra development. It is rather remarkable that in Surat, where the rainfall was copious, the damage to the cotton pods is a perfect trifle, whereas in Broach, where the rainfall was scanty, the worm is much more abundant. The explanation suggested is that a lapse of nourishment rendered the plants less robust, and, consequently, a more favourable subject for insect depredations. Picking will here be general about the first week in February. There is every reason to believe that the crop will be a good fair one. The cultivators, for some reason or other which I do not understand, try to magnify every trifling mishap which may befal the cotton plant during its progress to maturity, such as too much or too little rain, cloudy, or cold weather, &c. An agriculturist of great experience in this part of the country informs me that he does not recollect a single season in which the crop, according to the ryots' accounts, did not suffer to the extent of four, six, or eight annas in the rupee. Those therefore who undertake to report on the condition of the crop from time to time, but who cannot afford to go into the districts to judge for themselves, or are incompetent to form an estimate from their own observation, generally give a very gloomy account of the season's prospects. I have just been over a district, which about a month before I had heard would probably yield a crop of about 24 annas. The crop is certainly looking well, but because there was a little mildew and boll-worm here and there, the growers brought their calculations down to a 12-anna crop. It is partly on this account, I believe, that the information derived from different sources, which sometimes appears in the same day's newspapers, is found to be so contradictory in regard to the expected crop."

SIND.—In a return for the district of Halla, in the Hydrabad collectorate, for the week ending December 30, Mr. Strachan states as follows:—"The weather has been slightly colder than the preceding week, the wind generally prevailing from a northerly direction. About the commencement of this week the sky had rather a watery appearance, but as yet we have had no more rain. Those cotton plants which are at all green are suffering from cold; the most exposed of the unripe pods are deeply tinged with a brown, unhealthy colour. Along the road between Hydrabad and Halla I have seen several fields in which the plants are still fresh and flowering; there are others where the cotton has been all picked and the cattle turned into them to graze. The cotton fields in the Hydrabad talooka are not so good as those in the Halla district. The soil does not seem to be so favourable to the cotton plant in the neighbourhood of Hydrabad as it is in the more northern divisions of the collectorate. During the past week a fair quantity of cotton has been seen moving towards Kurrachee. I have counted as many as twenty-five to thirty camels in one day laden with this staple, making for Ghotana Bunder, whence it is despatched by country boats to Kotree. Towards the end of the week it has been reaching Giddoo Bunder by land at from thirty to forty camel-loads daily. I believe no cotton on which advances have not been made some time ago has yet started for the ports. In Hydrabad the bazaar rate for cotton is Rs. 14·8 per maund. At Rs. 15 considerable business might be done, but it is hardly probable that merchants will offer this figure while Surat is under 7d. per lb. in England. The experimental fields are yielding good cotton and seed as yet; but the most exposed of the unripe pods are assuming an unhealthy, brown appearance. After the end of the coming week I will discontinue selecting seed; though it may in no way be damaged by the cold, it is doubtful whether it be good or not. The yield of American is upwards of 100 lbs. clean cotton to the acre, and we have not yet got the final picking. "S. J. HARRISON,

"Bombay, 6th January, 1871." For Cotton Commissioner.

STATION TALK.

SONPOORIE, Dec. 31.—His Excellency the Governor arrived at Bhownuggur on the 29th, and was received on landing by the young Thakore, the joint managers, and a guard of honour, the customary salute being fired as he alighted at the Motee Baug, or new palace, which was set apart for his temporary residence. From my letter from Bhownuggur, written previous to my departure for Rajkote, you will not be unprepared to learn that the town on his Excellency's arrival looked its best, the main street through which he passed being well watered, and literally crowded with red and white flags; these flags and several triple and single arches, also dotted over with flags, being the principal things noticeable in the arrangements about the town for his Excellency's reception. At five o'clock the same day his Excellency laid the foundation-stone of the "Alfred Hospital," the arrangements for which being exceedingly good, the ceremony was a decided success. Yesterday his Excellency visited the Thakore, and later on the jail, when a display of fireworks subsequently took place in the police compound, which was also illumined for the occasion. This morning the whole party, all anxiety to meet and to conquer the three panthers marked down for them several days before, left Bhownuggur between seven and eight o'clock, arriving here in good time for breakfast. The road from Bhownuggur here, as stated in my last, is in capital condition, and only wants a few bridges to render it one of the best roads in the province. Though the morning was bitterly cold, the drive was exceedingly pleasant, as it indeed could not fail to be, with fair horses, a good road, and pretty scenery the whole way from Wurtage, six miles from Bhownuggur. The scenery, more particularly about Sehore, the ancient capital of Bhownuggur, is strikingly pretty, the town itself being most picturesquely situated on a slope at the base of Sehore Hill, and having a fine broad stream of clear water running past it. This hill contains many panthers, though they are rather difficult to find from the density of the jungle brushwood which covers it from top to bottom; still, many have been got within the last few years, and no doubt with a little determination and perseverance many more could be got. Sehore to this station is five miles. The arrangements for the day here were first to have breakfast, and then to proceed in quest of the panthers, which yesterday lay in a small sugar-cane field about a mile and a-half to the west. Early in the morning, however, khubbur was brought in that the panthers had changed their place of abode over-night, and that it was uncertain where they had gone, or when they would be found. Hour after hour having passed away, and still no news of their whereabouts, several of the party went out in search of black buck, but had not, I believe, very good sport, the country immediately round them not being rich enough for those dainty animals. His Excellency, feeling far from well, has nevertheless been as much disappointed as the rest of the party at being robbed of his day's sport by the migratory habits of those cunning beasts; the chances are, however, he will get a shot at them on his return from Palitana, whither he goes to-morrow morning, since Captain Watson has men on the look-out for them, and it is not at all likely they have wandered far away.

PALITANA, Jan. 2.—His Excellency left Sonpoorie yesterday morning and arrived here in time for breakfast. Before leaving a small scene took place, caused by two or three of the Palitana Bhayads presenting themselves before him, and complaining of the Thakore's ill-treatment, bared themselves, and showed his Excellency numerous cuts and scars received from the swords of the Thakore's Arabs in the attempt to enforce his commands. I chanced to hear something about this affray when it occurred, and am in a position to say it is a wonder many lives were not lost, both sides having worked themselves up to a great pitch of excitement before any blows were given or received. As it was, several of the Bhayads received some ugly cuts, and two or three narrowly escaped with their lives, and will never be the same men they were. I believe the Thukore was in the right, though it is to be lamented he could not recover his just tribute without calling in the aid of his reckless Arabs. This, however, I regret to say is no isolated case, and is the clearest proof that, though much has been done in the province, much still requires to be done! His Excellency was met yesterday about a mile out of town by the Thakore and a large number of attendants, some on horseback, some on elephants, and others in gharries of sorts, the whole cavalcade following in the train of his Excellency's party to the new palace, which stands between the foot of the hill and south side of the city, and which was prepared for the temporary residence of his Excellency and staff, tents being pitched outside for the rest of the party. This palace is a large square building, possessed of no architectural pretensions, and with but scanty accommodation in proportion to its size. The reception-room is gorgeously furnished, and would look really handsome but for the mixture of Hindoo and European taste which prevails to such an extent. The Governor's rooms, however, have been very tastefully arranged, and give evident proof of English hands having been engaged in the arrangement.—Times of India Correspondent.

SURAT, Jan. 5.—His Excellency the Governor arrived here from Gogo yesterday (Wednesday) evening, perhaps glad, however much he may have enjoyed his tour, to exchange Kattywar for the more civilised districts intersected by the B. B. and C. I. Railway. He left Gogo in the steam yacht May Frere, which stuck at the mouth of the Taptee, and the party then went on board the tiny steamer Lady Nyassa, which in her turn came to a standstill about half a mile from the landing place. Small boats were brought into requisition for the rest of the passage. It was about five o'clock when he came ashore. The landing place—Howree Bunder, opposite the Small Cause Court, which (the Court-house) was in Surat's greater days the Commodore's Bungalow—had been dressed gaily for the occasion. At the head of the passage was a triumphal arch with the word "Welcome" on each side. There was the band of the 13th Native Infantry, and a guard of honour; and in the road a "street" was formed by the troops. Of course all Surat was there, on tiptoe of excitement. I expected, by the way, to see far more Parsees here than I did. I had thought Surat was the head quarters of these pushing prolific people, but Bombay, it seems to me, is far more entitled to the honour of that designation. I am told that after the great fire of 1827—which is spoken of as if it had happened last year—an immense number of Parsees left the place for Bombay and elsewhere, fearing that what happened, not once only, might happen again. Sir Seymour Fitzgerald was met on landing by Mr. T. C. Hope, the Collector of Surat; Colonel Adams, the Military Commandant; Colonel Fife, of the Irrigation Branch of the P.W.D.; Mr. Newnham, the Acting Judge of Surat, &c. Altogether there were about a score of European gentlemen. I need not repeat the names of the gentlemen with the Governor, as they are already familiar to you. Surat could produce only one chief for the occasion. This solitary personage was the Nawab of Sucheen, an independent prince, of the same family as your near neighbour the Hubshee, a Seedee therefore, and a descendant of pirates. I also noticed Hariba Dada, the prime minister—"acting," I presume—of the Gaekwar of Baroda. Captain Reeves, one of the Baroda politicals, was with him. There was of course a gathering of the local native magnates. The Governor shook hands with Chota Saheb (one of the sons-in-law of the late Meer Jaffer Ali, who was a son-in-law of the last Nawab of Surat), president of the managing committee of the Municipality; with Mr. Syed Husein Edroos, who wore on his breast the handsome decoration of a Companion of the Order of the Star of India; and with Mr. Syed Husein el Medini, the esteemed Judge of the Small Cause Court. His Excellency drove along the Jail Road, straight to Mr. Hope's bungalow, which was placed at his disposal, Mr. Hope taking up quarters in camp. Early this morning the Governor and his suite had a drive in company with Mr. Hope and other officers to inspect various public places. They visited the Hospital, which is a large and handsome building; the Clock Tower, being built on the Station Road at the expense of Khan Bahadoor Burjorjee Merwanjee Fraser; the Inundation Works, which have been constructed for the laudable purpose of keeping the town above water, as far as possible, when the Taptee comes down in too great volume; and several other places. It is admitted on all hands that during the few years that Mr. Hope has been Collector, Surat has made great progress. Though having a few good buildings scattered over it, in the neighbourhood of the castle especially, the town generally is irregular and ugly (I make an exception of the road to the station), and one is tempted to think that the best way to improve it would be to begin by demolishing it. That radical means being forbidden, it only remains to make the best of a bad job. Surat undoubtedly has good main roads, for which it has chiefly to thank Mr. Hope; the principal streets, too, are clean, and I am ready to take an affidavit that they smell sweet enough. The town clings, I am told (and am willing to rest content with the evidence of others on the point), to a peculiar and time-honoured system of sanitation that would not meet with the approval of Dr. Hewlett, and which even the local press waxes wroth and eloquent against. But time and good guidance will no doubt work a reform even in this respect. The slaughter-houses, the markets, the Inundation Works also, have come into existence in Mr. Hope's time. And I must mention the Public Park, a pretty though small promenade close by the Castle. The park seems to owe its existence to private contributors.

FRIDAY, Jan. 6.—Yesterday forenoon his Excellency held a levee, which was attended by the European residents and visitors, and also by a number of the more prominent native residents. In the afternoon there was another drive through the station—a visit being paid to the Castle among other places—and in the evening the band of the 13th N. I. played in the Public Park, the Governor being present. A number of matters of local importance were, I believe, under consideration yesterday. Survey and irrigational questions, and the need for the erection of a collector's cutcherry, were discussed. In the evening the Governor dined with Mr. Hope. This morning his Excellency went across the river to visit the town of Randeer, a place of some ten thousand inhabitants, and connected with this trip is the consideration of a most important matter—the proposed erection of a bridge across the Taptee, of which I shall say more in my next letter. A State breakfast has been given by his Excellency this forenoon, and in the afternoon addresses are to be presented in the Municipal Hall by the Municipal body and the Local Fund Committee. To-morrow (Saturday), in the afternoon probably, the Governor and his party leave this for Baroda. The Honourable G. M. Stewart, who accompanied the party through Kattywar, has gone to Bombay from this place.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MILITARY.—The 103rd Royal Bombay Fusiliers was one of the few regiments whose officers went over (from a strong feeling of esprit de corps) almost in a body with it when it was transferred to the Queen's service. As regards them therefore it has experienced but very little change, and most of the old hands go home with it. The regiment is at present commanded by Major Kempt. In bidding this gallant regiment a farewell, we look forward to the day when we shall again cordially welcome it to India after its tour of home service.—I hear on good authority that Colonel Gell, the Quartermaster-General of the Army, goes home on furlough in March. He will be succeeded probably by Colonel Schneider, the present Judge Advocate-General, whose place will be temporarily held by Colonel Field, who formerly acted for Colonel Skinner some few years ago.—The Kurrachee Depot has been abolished; this measure has long been under contemplation, and now that troops can be moved to and from the Bengal Presidency entirely by rail, the necessity for a depot at Kurrachee no longer exists. The command was lately vacated by Colonel Foster, of the 95th Regiment, when his corps went home, since which it has been temporarily held by an officer of the 66th Foot. Colonel Woolcombe, C.B., commanding the 18th brigade R.A., who has just brought the headquarters down from Kurrachee to Kirkee, proceeds home on medical certificate in the Malabar. The command during his absence will devolve on Colonel Connybeare.—I forget if I mentioned in my last that Colonel E. A. Green, commandant 19th Native Infantry, will retire from the service early in March. The command of the regiment will, I believe, be bestowed on Lieut.-Col. G. N. Price.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.—The general committee for dealing with Bombay's share in the forthcoming International Exhibition met at the Town-hall on Thursday, Jan. 15, to consider what answer should be given to the Secretary of the central committee regarding the amount that could be advantageously spent, and the space the Bombay committee would require for their collection. Mr. Ovans, the honorary secretary, thought the maximum should be fixed at Rs. 20,000, and explained that that would be required, since Government would be the sole contributor to the Exhibition. Many articles had on former occasions been broken during the transit, and but little compensation awarded to the owners, so that people would not now send goods unless the committee bought all, or nearly all, of the articles they wished for. Then though Government had in the first instance to buy the articles, he expected that they could be sold in London, and as prices in Bombay were at present remarkably low, a good portion of the grant would no doubt be realised in London. Government would, he might say, be the sole contributor from Bombay at least, and unless they gave a grant of Rs. 20,000 to meet the purchase of articles, Bombay could not be fairly represented at the Exhibition. On this explanation the following resolution was proposed by the Chairman, seconded by Mr. Lidderdale, and adopted—"That the secretary to the central committee be informed that the local committee are not yet in a position to furnish an accurate estimate of the money they can advantageously expend or of the space they will require for exhibition, but that such an estimate is being prepared and that the committee have no doubt that Rs. 20,000 will cover all expenses and would be glad to have this sum sanctioned as a maximum not to be exceeded." It was also agreed that the Honorary Secretary in forwarding the resolution to the Secretary of the central committee should mention the facts which he had just stated to the meeting. The sub-committee, we should add, have been hard at work since last meeting. They have made a vigorous inspection of the bazaars and secured a number of further specimens; we are not sure but they have discovered some trades before unknown. The Education Department has been placed under the charge of Principal Oxenham, and is now busy in its selection.

IMPORTS.—BOMBAY, Jan. 7.—In the early part of the fortnight a brisk demand for the interior set in, and this, combined with the improved state of Manchester, forced prices up, but the demand has latterly subsided. First holders have throughout naturally been ready to meet the market, and stocks in their hands continue to accumulate. If shipments of goods from Manchester continue on the same scale as in October and November, prices will, with difficulty, be maintained. The shipments of Plain Grey Cottons in October amounted to 23,143,553 yards, and in November to 23,689,506 yards, while the average shipments of the nine previous months of the year amounted to 11,961,875 yards per month. The average shipments, however, for the first months of the year are only 14½ million yards per month, against 17½ million yards per month for the corresponding months of 1869; but there is no indication of the interior being bare of stocks, while, with the rapidly increasing production of cotton, the natural tendency of prices is to a lower level. On the cessation of the war higher prices are looked for in goods as well as in cotton, but these will be of a permanent character. Bleached Goods have continued dull throughout the fortnight; the only sales which have taken place have been as follows:—About 500 pieces Shirtings, at Rs. 5-5 to 11-4, and about 1,000 pieces Tanjebs, at Rs. 1-11. Dyed and Printed Goods dull; sales as follows:—About 500 pieces Blue Orange and White Prints, at Rs. 4-1, and about 1,000 pieces Orange Prints, at Rs. 3-7¾. Turkey Red Goods dull; the undermentioned are the sales which have transpired:—About 1,000 pieces Cambrics, at Rs. 4-6 to 5-2; and about 600 pieces Prints, at Rs. 9-3 to 9-4. Grey Yarns: The market has been more active, with an advance of ½ to ¾ annas per lb. The following are the sales which have been effected, viz., about 20 bales Mule No. 20, at 3¾ annas; about 140 bales 40's, at 9¼ to 10¼ annas; about 380 bales Water No. 30, at 9¾ to 10 annas; about 50 bales Coloured Twist, at 13½ to 14¼ annas; and about 300 bales Turkey Red, at 22¼ to 30 annas. Metals have also been more active, with an advance of 8 annas per cwt. We have to report the following sales, viz.:—About 500 cwts. Copper Braziers, at Rs. 42½; about 250 cwts. Yellow Metal Braziers, at Rs. 36-4; about 200 cwts. Yellow Metal Sheathing, at Rs. 37-4; and about 400 cwts. Lead Pig, at Rs. 10-6. Coal: Market continues very dull, owing to continued heavy shipments from England. November sailings amount to 28,723 tons. The only cargo sold during the fortnight has been about 600 tons North Wales Main Steam Coal, at Rs. 19¼ to 21.

EXPORTS.—BOMBAY, Jan. 7.—Cotton: By the telegrams received during the fortnight there was in the early part of it a better feeling both in Liverpool and Manchester, but latterly the Liverpool market has been dull and heavy. Fair Dholleras throughout has stood at 6¼d. The rapid accumulation of stocks in the American ports was, as we pointed out in our last report, justly taken to indicate a much larger crop than had been estimated, and telegrams dated Dec. 21, and received on the 26th, report that the American crop is now officially estimated at 3,875,000 bales. With production increasing at this rate in America, the tendency of prices must be towards that level at which they stood before the American War. During the fortnight business was interrupted by the Christmas holidays, and while quotations of Old Cotton stand about the same as at the date of our last report, New Cotton may be quoted about Rs. 5 per candy higher. The purchases made in Bombay for export amount to about 5,000 candies, among which there were of Old Cotton 1,860 candies of Dhollerah and Bhownuggur, at Rs. 184 to 194; 465 candies of Kandeish, at Rs. 165 to 175; 325 candies of Ahmedabad, at Rs. 170 to 185; and 300 candies of Comptah, at Rs. 170; of New Cotton, 400 candies of Oomrawutee, deliverable in February, at Rs. 192 to 196; 400 candies of Hingunghat, at Rs. 215 to 221; and 300 candies of Akote, at Rs. 204 to 205. The market closes dull.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

MEDICAL CHARGES.

Dec. 21.—No. 1,192.—With reference to G.G.O. No. 370, dated April 4, 1867, the following allowances for additional medical charges will hereafter be admitted in substitution for those granted under previous orders:—

I. To a medical officer already in charge of a brigade of royal artillery or of a regiment or wing of British cavalry or infantry.

(a.) For the charge of an additional regiment of British cavalry or infantry, consisting of not less than six troops or companies, Rs. 150 per mensem.

(b.) For each additional troop or company when under six, Rs. 20 per mensem.

(c.) For each battery of royal artillery, when under charge of a medical officer of a regiment of cavalry or infantry, Rs. 20 per mensem.

II. When the substantive charge is less than a wing the medical officer will receive:—

(a.) For the charge of an additional regiment of British cavalry or infantry, consisting of not less than six troops or companies, Rs. 100 per mensem.

(b.) For each additional troop or company when under six, Rs. 15 per mensem.

(c.) For each battery of royal artillery, when under charge of a medical officer of a regiment of cavalry or infantry, Rs. 15 per mensem.

III. To a medical officer already in charge of a regiment of native cavalry or infantry, or acting in such charge:—

(a.) For the additional charge of a regiment of native cavalry or infantry, Rs. 100 per mensem, without reference to the amount that may be available from the salary of the absentee.

(b.) For the additional charge of a wing of a regiment of native cavalry or infantry, or of a detachment consisting numerically of not less than a wing, Rs. 75 per mensem.

(c.) For the additional charge of each troop or company of native cavalry or infantry in excess of or less than a wing, or for each company of sappers and miners, Rs. 10 per mensem.

(d.) For the additional charge of a field battery of native artillery or of a mountain train battery of the Punjab frontier force, Rs. 25 per mensem.

(e.) For the additional charge of any other field, mountain, or garrison battery of native artillery, Rs. 10 per mensem.

IV. A medical officer in substantive charge of a detached wing of native cavalry or infantry regiment will be allowed Rs. 100 per mensem, in addition to his Indian pay, provided that the aggregate sum drawn under this rule does not exceed the amount he would receive with a full regiment. No allowance will be given for the charge of a detachment of native troops of less than a wing, when such forms the sole or substantive charge.

2. No allowance is authorised for the additional medical charge of British or native troops of less than a battery, troop, or company.

3. When, under exceptional circumstances, medical officers of the British service fall into the additional charge of native troops, or medical officers of the Indian Medical Department into that of British troops, they will, in the former case, be entitled to the allowances under Part III., and in the latter case to those under Parts I. and II. above.

4. This order, which is in modification of that portion of G.G.O. No. 370 of April 4, 1867, relating to the grant of allowances for additional medical charges, is applicable to the three Presidencies.

RENT OF WARRANT OFFICERS' QUARTERS.

Dec. 26.—No. 414.—The following orders, issued by the Government of India, Military Department, are republished for information:—

Dec. 19.—No. 1,175.—In order to prevent any misunderstanding, and the necessity for further references on the subject, the Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council is pleased to notify that, subject to the charge for rent laid down in G.G.O. No. 859 of Oct. 11, 1866, warrant officers of grades below that of deputy assistant commissary are entitled to be provided with quarters by the public works department, whether by purchase, hire, or erection, agreeably to chap. XI., sec. 2, para. 1 of that department's code.

2. The rules prescribed in the public works department code, as extracted below, for facility of reference, will be strictly adhered to in all cases in which it may be necessary to hire houses for the accommodation of the warrant officers alluded to.

3. On account of quarters provided to the warrant officers in presidency towns, the public works department will, in addition to the rent payable to those officers, be entitled to receive credit for the amount of presidency house rent admissible to them, in conformity with the ruling contained in financial department's resolution No. 1,069 of Aug. 14, 1868, in the case of the presidency house rent of commissioned officers.

4. This order is applicable to the three presidencies.

Dec. 20.—No. 1,180.—The Right Hon. the Governor-General in Council is pleased to rule that when a warrant officer acts in a higher grade for another absent in India, and draws the pay of his own grade with a moiety of its staff salary and a moiety of that of the absentee, he will, in respect to quarters, be dealt with according to the rate of pay drawn by him, namely, that of his permanent grade; but if he acts for a warrant officer of a higher grade absent on furlough to Europe, and becomes thereby entitled to half the aggregate receipts of his substantive position and half those of the substantive position of the absentee, he is entitled to quarters in the higher grade, and is liable, if such quarters be provided for him, to stoppages of the higher grade on account of rent.

2. On the same principle a non-commissioned officer acting for a warrant officer on leave in India, and drawing the pay and half staff of his substantive rank and appointment, in addition to a moiety of the warrant officer's staff pay, will be treated in respect to quarters as a non-commissioned officer, but when acting for a warrant officer on furlough in Europe, and drawing full regimental pay, in addition to half the aggregate receipts of the warrant officer, he will be provided with quarters as a warrant officer, and be liable to stoppages in that grade on account of rent.

This order is applicable to the three presidencies.

Extract from Chapter XI. of Public Works Code, 3rd Edition.

Section II., Para. 1.—"It will be the duty of the officers of the public works department, under the orders of the Government, or in cases of emergency on requisition of the local authorities, to provide quarters, and all other necessary buildings, to the extent allowed by the regulations, for troops and public military establishments entitled to and requiring accommodation, and for the families of soldiers on actual service. The executive engineer will arrange this under sanction as above, by allotting public buildings which may be vacant, or which can be vacated; or where no suitable or available public buildings already exist, by erecting, purchasing, or hiring buildings, as according to his judgment may be most advantageous in each case; obtaining previous sanction when there is time to do so, and reporting his proceedings through the usual channel for the information of Government."

Section II., Para. 3.—"Should buildings be hired by the military authorities without the intervention of the public works department, and without the sanction of the Government of India, the executive engineer shall not be at liberty to defray the charge from the funds of the public works department until sanction is obtained."

Section II., Para. 4.—"Excepting in the case of buildings required for the accommodation of troops, &c., as above limited in paragraphs 2 and 3, and for buildings required for the use of the public works department, executive engineers shall in no case disburse the rent of hired premises, unless specially ordered to do so by the Government or Administration under which they are serving."

Section IV., Para. 28.—"In cases where rent for public quarters in charge of the barrackmaster has to be charged to warrant or non-commissioned officers on staff employ, barrackmasters are required to submit a monthly statement of such quarters to the executive engineer, who will recover the amounts from the departments to which the occupants belong."

CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY.—The affiliation in law of the "Queen's College" at Benares to the Calcutta University is authorised by the Governor-General in Council, with effect from Jan. 1.

BOOKS.—The C. in C. directs that the books of general orders of all descriptions, in regimental orderly rooms, shall be kept bound and in serviceable order at the expense of adjutants, who draw an office allowance for the purpose.

SUPERINTENDENT OF STAMPS, N.W.P.—For the purposes of the General Stamp Act, the Governor-general in Council is pleased to appoint the Commissioner of Stamps, North-Western Provinces, for the time being to be superintendent of stamps in that province.

DUTY ON TRANSPORTS.—The attention of officers has been called to Horse Guards order of Oct. 1 last, which rules that officers on furlough under Indian rules are not, unless it is absolutely necessary, to be detailed for any military duty on board troopships.

EDUCATIONAL.—The following law professorships have been granted and confirmed (Dec. 28):—Mr. C. F. Farran, B.A., has been confirmed in the appointment of Perry professor of jurisprudence, v. Dr. Reid, resigned. Mr. E. T. Leith, LL.M., has been confirmed in the appointment of Government professor of law, v. Dr. Reid, resigned.

STAFF CORPS PAY.—The Right Hon. the Governor-general in Council has ruled that the English regimental pay of rank, that is, "out of India" Staff Corps pay, shall be taken as the rate for regulating subscription to regimental band and mess funds in the Indian army. This order is to apply to the three presidencies.

TRAVELLING ALLOWANCES OF OFFICIALS, N.W.P.—The travelling allowances and joining time of Government officers from one station to another in the North-Western Provinces will, in future, be computed according to the Revised Polymetrical Table of Distances, published in the supplement to the Allahabad Government Gazette, dated 14th inst., which table will be amended from time to time as circumstances may require.

Official Papers.

THE DECENTRALISING RESOLUTION.

Fort William, Dec. 14, 1870.

The Governor general in Council is satisfied that it is desirable to enlarge the powers and responsibility of the Governments of presidencies and provinces in respect to the public expenditure in some of the civil departments.

2. Under the present system these Governments have little liberty, and but few motives for economy in their expenditure: it lies with the Government of India to control the growth of charges to meet which it has to raise the revenue. The local Governments are deeply interested in the welfare of the people confided to their care, and, not knowing the requirements of other parts of the country or of the empire as a whole, they are liable, in their anxiety for administrative progress, to allow too little weight to fiscal considerations. On the other hand, the Supreme Government, as responsible for the general financial safety, is obliged to reject many demands in themselves deserving of all encouragement, and is not always able to distribute satisfactorily the resources actually available.

3. Thus it happens that the Supreme and local Governments regard from different points of view measures involving expenditure; and, the division of responsibility being ill-defined, there occur conflicts of opinion injurious to the public service. In order to avoid these conflicts, it is expedient that, as far as possible, the obligation to find the funds necessary for administrative improvements should rest upon the authority whose immediate duty it is to devise such measures.

4. This is the more important, because existing imperial resources will not suffice for the growing wants of the country. Writing of roads and communications in October, 1869, the Government of India in the public works department stated that it had for some years "been satisfied that to attempt to provide and maintain all the roads required for the intercommunications of so vast a territory from the ordinary revenues would be to enter on an altogether impracticable task. The matter," it was added, "has been before this Government on several occasions since 1862, and the view now taken of it has already received, in general terms, the approval of the Secretary of State. It is only by a judicious system of local assessment and control that what is needed can be accomplished." This is not less true of some other departments of the administration.

5. The Supreme Government is not in a position to understand fully local requirements, nor has it the knowledge necessary for the successful development of local resources. Each province has special wants of its own, and may have means for supplying them which could not be appropriated for imperial purposes. A tax adapted to the circumstances of one part of the country may be distasteful or inapplicable elsewhere; and everywhere rates may be proper for provincial or local purposes which could not be taken for the imperial revenue.

6. These principles are now generally recognised, and important steps have been already taken to develope provincial resources. The Government of Bombay has for some years raised a considerable revenue for local purposes. Important measures to the same intent are under the consideration of the Legislative Council of Madras. The Government of Bengal is maturing a scheme, in accordance with the decision of the Secretary of State, for the levy of a rate for local objects in the Lower Provinces of Bengal. In all the other provinces of India provincial revenues have long been raised, and measures for increasing them are now being devised.

7. These measures have been promoted chiefly to provide for urgent administrative wants, the means for which are not otherwise forthcoming. It is inexpedient that the funds so raised should be intercepted, to any considerable extent, for objects the cost of which has been hitherto defrayed from the general revenues, even though such objects be of an admittedly local character. Moreover, the Governor-General in Council is not desirous that the demands on the people for provincial purposes should be indefinitely or too rapidly increased.

8. It would have been satisfactory had his Excellency in Council been able to propose the enlargement of the power and responsibility of the local Governments without charging upon local resources any part of the existing imperial expenditure. This cannot be done; but it has been determined to make as small a demand upon these resources as possible. At the same time it should be remembered that the relief of the Imperial finances has been a principal object in the discussion of such measures on former occasions.

9. The income-tax of six pies in the rupee imposed for the current year was never intended to be permanent, and the Governor-General in Council has already announced a resolution not to renew the tax for next year at this high rate, unless some unforeseen contingency compels him to do so.

10. It was thought at first that the income-tax could not be reduced to the desired extent without imposing upon local resources almost as large a sum as might be given up. Anticipations made so long before the beginning of the financial year must be uncertain; but, as far as the Governor-General in Council can now judge, it will be possible next year to give substantial relief from existing taxation, without the substitution of any considerable new burdens.

11. The Government of India is accordingly pleased to make over to the Governments, under certain conditions to be presently set forth, the following departments of the administration in which they may be supposed to take special interest; and to grant permanently, from the Imperial revenue, for these services, the sum of £4,688,711, being less by £330,801 only than the assignments made for the same services in 1870-71:—

Jails, Registration, Police, Education, Medical Services (except "Medical Establishment."*), Printing, Roads, Miscellaneous Public Improvements, Civil Buildings.

A statement (A) is appended explanatory of the method by which the assignments to be thus made have been calculated. This table is here omitted; it shows the estimated receipts and charges under the first six of the above heads during the current year, the "Police" charges in Bombay and the North-Western Provinces having been slightly reduced by the final adjustments necessary in consequence of the Government becoming liable for the superannuation allowances of the force.

12. The figures entered for "roads," "civil buildings," and "miscellaneous public improvements" are the grants for this year, exclusive of the sum of £135,679 reserved for certain works detailed in Appendix B, which will not in future be a charge upon local Governments, but will be separately provided for by the Supreme Government. The portion of this £135,679 reserved in each province bears the same proportion to the grant made to the province for the current year that the expenditure in the province upon the reserved works has borne during the last five years to the whole expenditure under these three heads.

13. To the £1,168,701 thus assigned for "works," £327,236 has been added for "establishments" and "tools and plant," being the proportion of the current year's grants for these purposes which appertains to that share of the total grants for "works" of all kinds which is transferred. This £327,236 has been distributed among the presidencies and provinces in the proportions in which the larger sum of £1,168,701 has been distributed. The Governments will henceforth provide themselves with "tools and plant" without the intervention of the Government of India. The future arrangements in regard to "establishments" cannot be settled without detailed correspondence. For the year 1871-72 the Supreme Government will continue to provide "establishments" as heretofore, and each presidency or province must bear a share of the cost in the proportion which the estimated outlay upon "works" from provincial funds* bears to the total estimated outlay upon "works," ordinary and extraordinary, Imperial and provincial, in all India. It is to be clearly understood that local Governments must maintain in efficient repair existing lines of through communication, such as the trunk roads, unless authorised by the Supreme Government to abandon them.

* By "Medical Establishments" here is meant the first subdivision of the Grant 22, Medical Services, as hitherto made.

14. The actual permanent Imperial assignments for "provincial services" will be then as follows; all receipts heretofore credited in connection with these services being given up to the provinces in which they accrue:—

Oude	£206,948
Central Provinces	261,263
Burmah...	275,332
North-Western Provinces	640,792
Punjab	516,221
Madras	739,488
Bombay...	880,075
	£4,688,711†

15. In calculating these allotments, £350,000 has been deducted rateably from the grants made to the several provinces in 1870-71. But it has been thought expedient to remit the reduction (£19,199) which would thus fall upon British Burmah, the circumstances of that province being exceptional. No additional deduction has been made from the other provinces in consequence of this concession to Burmah.

16. These assignments will not be classified in the Financial Statement and in the Imperial estimates and accounts, but will appear under a single new head "Provincial Services." The Imperial revenue will continue to bear such charges for the absentee and superannuation allowances of officers on establishments now transferred as have hitherto appeared in the Home accounts or under other heads in the Indian accounts. But it would be inconvenient and difficult to maintain any distinction between these officers and officers who are paid from other local funds, or who may be added hereafter for "Provincial Service." Questions of some importance regarding this and other like details will have to be settled hereafter.

17. Unless some fiscal misfortune, such as a heavy loss in the opium revenue, or national disaster such as war or severe famine, occurs, the Governor-general in Council will maintain for the future the assignments for "Provincial Services" at the amounts now fixed. They will not, in any case, be reduced without previous consultation with the Governments.

18. For the coming year the Provincial Service Estimates should be immediately prepared upon the basis of these assignments, which may be distributed, at the discretion of the Governments, among the several departments for which they will now be responsible. Any portion of the assignment made to any province that may be unspent at the end of the year will not lapse to the Imperial revenue, but will remain at the disposal of the local Government. The estimates and accounts of these Governments should, therefore, open and close with balances brought and carried forward. They should show, not only the receipts and charges of the new "provincial services," but also the income and expenditure of all existing local funds; it being understood, of course, that the Governments are not relieved by this Resolution from any legal or equitable obligation which may govern the appropriation of any particular local fund. It is essential that the estimates and accounts of all the presidencies and provinces should be uniform, and the precise forms to be used will be settled by the Supreme Government. The imperial financial year must be the provincial year of account.

19. Each local Government will publish its own yearly estimates and accounts in the local Gazette, together with a financial exposition (which should, where possible, be made before the local Legislative Council) analogous to that annually made in the Legislative Council of the Governor-General. The several estimates and accounts will be compiled and a general statement for all India published as a supplement to the Imperial estimates and accounts.

20. In preparing its estimates for the coming year, each Government will have to consider without delay how any deficiency in the way and means for its "provincial services" can most conveniently be supplied.

21. The financial control which is thus entrusted to the local Governments is to be exercised subject to the following conditions [it must be understood that these conditions are prescribed, for the present, tentatively, and that they are subject to revision as experience may require]:—

I.—Without the previous sanction of the Government of India—

(1.) No appointment is to be created with a salary of more than Rs. 250 a month; and no addition is to be made to the pay and allowances of any officer if they exceed, or would, after the addition, exceed Rs. 250 a month.

(2). No class or grade of officers is to be created or abolished, and the pay of no class or grade of officers is to be raised:

(3). No addition is to be made to the pay or allowances of any individual or class of officers that would lead to increase in the emoluments of any public servants doing duty in the same province, whose pay and allowances are charged to the Imperial revenues. The Government of India reserves to itself the right to forbid alterations in rates of pay or allowances which, in its opinion, would produce inconvenience in other provinces:

(4.) No moneys are to be removed from the public treasuries for investment.

(5). No services now rendered to other departments at the charge of the departments made over to the control of the local Governments are to be diminished, and no services now rendered to these departments at the charge of other departments are to be increased.

II. The rules of the Supreme Government in respect to leave of absence and absentee, deputation, and superannuation allowances are to be observed.

III. Returns, accounts, and estimates are to be submitted to the Supreme Government in such forms, and at such times, as may be prescribed.

22. The Governor General in Council is fully aware that this resolution will effect a wide change in Indian administration. It has been adopted after long and careful consideration, in the hope that it will be received by the Governments in the spirit in which it is promulgated. The Governor General in Council believes that it will produce greater care and economy, that it will import an element of certainty into the fiscal system which has hitherto been absent, and that it will lead to more harmony in action and feeling between the Supreme and the Provincial Governments than has heretofore prevailed.

23. But beyond all this, there is a greater and wider object in view. Local interest, supervision, and care are necessary to success in the management of funds devoted to education, sanitation, medical charity, and local public works. The operation of this resolution in its full meaning and integrity will afford opportunities for the development of self-government, for strengthening municipal institutions, and for the association of natives and Europeans, to a greater extent than heretofore, in the administration of affairs.

24. The Governor-general in Council is aware of the difficulties attending the practical adoption of these principles. But they are not insurmountable. Disappointments and partial failures may occur; but, the object in view being the instruction of many peoples and races in a good system of administration, his Excellency in Council is fully convinced that the local Governments and all their subordinates will enlist the active assistance, or, at all events, the sympathy, of many classes who have hitherto taken little or no part in the work of social and material advancement.

25. The additional powers of financial control which will now be assumed by the Governments must be accompanied by a corresponding increase of administrative responsibility. It is the desire of the Governor-general in Council to confine the interference of the Supreme Government in India in the administration of the "Provincial Services" to what is necessary for the discharge of that responsibility which the Viceroy in Council owes to the Queen and her responsible advisers, and for the purpose of securing adherence to the financial conditions now prescribed, and to the general policy of the Government of India.

26. The procedure of the departments of "registration," "jails," and police is to a large extent governed by law. No law exists upon the subject of "education," but the policy of the Government has been declared and prescribed in despatches from the Secretary of State, the authority of which, and of the rules sanctioned by the Government of India regarding "grants in-aid" and other matters of general principle, is not affected by this resolution.

27. Subject to these general restrictions, the Governments will henceforth enjoy full liberty in the expenditure of the funds appropriated to "provincial services." It must, however, be understood that in thus divesting himself of control, the Governor-General in Council divests himself also to a large extent of his former responsibility. If responsibility for expenditure is retained, control cannot be renounced.

28. The Governor-General in Council delegates to the local Governments this large additional share of administrative power without hesitation or distrust, believing that it will be exercised with wisdom, liberality, and prudence.

APPENDIX B.

Schedule of works for which separate funds will be hereafter provided from the Imperial Revenue.

RUSSIAN VERSUS BRITISH MERCHANTS IN PERSIA.—The Russians have, it is said, given the British merchants in Persia the go by, and the latter are naturally anxious to regain the lost ground. For this purpose the merchants of Bushire and Bunder Abbas have submitted a memorial to Colonel Pelly, our resident in the Persian Gulf, praying that he will endeavour to obtain the sanction of the Indian Government for the appointment of a native agent in the town of Yezd, where the Russians have of late unmistakably taken the lead. Russian prestige, we further learn, is well established throughout Persia, and the name Orose carries with it all the protection that could be desired. It would be as well if Angreze did the same.—Pioneer.

* NOTE.—"Provincial Funds" here does not include existing "Local Funds."

† NOTE.—If it be found, when the accounts of the year 1870-71 are made up, that the actual expenditure during that year for the official postage of the services affected exceeds the amount of the grants for that purpose, then the several assignments will be once for all increased by the difference.

KHUNGOWLEE SING v. HOSSEIN BUX—JUDGMENT.—Sir J. Colvile gave judgment in this case on January 20, which was argued on the preceding day. His lordship reviewed the facts, and said their lordships would humbly recommend to her Majesty that the appeal be allowed, with costs, and that the decision of the Court below be reversed.

NILCOMUL LAHOREE v. GONOSMONEE DEBIA.—This was an appeal from Bengal from a judgment given by the High Court of Fort William on the 3rd of May, 1864, so that the appeal has been pending more than "six years." Sir Roundell Palmer and Mr. Leith were for the appellants; Mr. J. D. Bell for the respondents. Lord Cairns gave the judgment of their lordships, remarking on the litigation that had been continued in respect to the property claimed over a number of years. After stating the facts and the law on the subject, he said their lordships would recommend to her Majesty that the appeal be dismissed with costs.

THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—The directors of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company have announced a considerable reduction in their rates of passage money to all ports at which the company's steamers touch, commencing with the packets which will leave Southamption on the 18th and Brindisi on the 28th March. An abatement of 20 per cent. from the charge for the return passage is also made to passengers from ports east of Suez embarking within six months from the date of their arrival, and an abatement of 10 per cent. to those embarking within twelve months.

SPECIE FOR THE EAST.—According to a circular of Mr. G. de Quetteville the total shipments of specie by the Peninsular and Oriental steamers for the East, during the year 1870, were £3,195,718 (of which £1,277,210 was in gold, and the remainder in silver), against £3.860,160 in 1869, showing a decrease of £644,442. From the Mediterranean ports they were £910,889 (£743,623 gold and £167.266 silver), showing a decrease of £3,292,934. The export by the steamers of the Messageries Impériales during the same period was £192,210 (£65,864 gold, £156,346 silver), showing a decrease of £934,361 as compared with 1869.

TRAFFIC THROUGH THE SUEZ CANAL.—Tables published in the East India, China, and Japan Monthly Shipping Register illustrate the rapid development of the route by the Suez Canal. Out of a total of 1.629,744,424 yards of cotton shipped to the East in 1870, 933,760,170 yards went by way of Egypt, and 26.239,137 lb twist out of a total shipment of 62,692,056lb. From the same tables it also appears that while the exports to Calcutta have increased 2 1-10th million pounds sterling, those to Bombay have decreased three-fourths of a million. To Hong Kong there is nearly a million excess, balanced by a reduction to other Chinese ports. The tendency to build large ships and steamers for the Eastern trade is shown by the fact that only 1,655 vessels sailed in 1870, against 1,880 in 1864, although the total tonnage in 1870 was 1,523,397 tons, while in 1869 it was 1,572,551 tons.

BRITISH INDIAN SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—We quote the following letter from the British Indian Submarine Telegraph Company (Limited).—"Sir,—in accordance with the arrangement made at the general meeting of shareholders, I beg to inform you that the gross traffic receipts of the British Indian Submarine Telegraph Company (Limited) for the past three months were as follows:—October, £5,156. 17s. 2d.; November, £7,453. 2s. 10d.; December, £8,920. The line of the British Indian Company was broken from Sept. 24 to Oct. 13. The Falmouth cable was broken on Nov. 29. and is not yet repaired. These breaks have seriously diminished the receipts of both companies, and the directors cannot, therefore, recommend quarterly dividends. The steamships Chiltern and Hawk sailed from Gibraltar on the 24th inst. to relay the section of the Falmouth cable, in which the break occurred, the bad weather having frustrated further attempts at successful grappling. We may, therefore, expect communication to be shortly re-establishd. —Yours truly, JOHN T. BURT, Secretary.—66, Old Broad-street, London, Jan. 27."

DEATH OF SIR T. P. CAUTLEY.—Sir Proby Thomas Cautley, K.C.B., late chairman of the Public Works Committee of the Council of India, died on Wednesday, at Sydenham. Sir Thomas was the donor of an extensive collection of fossil mammalia, &c., from the Sewalik Hills, in the North-west Provinces, on the palæontology of which district he was the author of numerous learned papers. The deceased knight was born at Roydon, near Hadleigh, Suffolk, of which parish his father was rector in 1802, and was educated at the Charterhouse and the Hon. East India Company's College at Addiscombe, entering the Bengal Artillery in 1819. from which he retired in May, 1854, on a colonel's pension. He served in Oudh in 1820-21 and at the siege of Bhurtpore in 1825-26, and was afterwards employed as a civil engineer, in which capacity he was engaged on the Eastern Jumna Canal, North-west Provinces. He was also the projector and designer of the Ganges Canal Works, which were opened with great éclat in April, 1854. In 1858 he was appointed a member of the Council of India, and in 1860 chairman of the Public Works Committee of that body, from which he retired a short time since. Sir Thomas married in 1838 Frances, daughter of the late P. Bacon, Esq., of Elcott, from whom he was divorced in 1850.

MILITARY DISCIPLINE.—A court-martial assembled at Rawul Pindee on the 9th Dec., to hear a charge of insubordination against Lieutenant W. B. Adams, R.A., who, while on parade at that place on the 19th of September, told Captain A. S. Hunter, his superior officer, to "go to hell." The prisoner was found guilty, and sentenced to be cashiered. On a recommendation to mercy, the Commander-in-Chief remitted the sentence, and ordered that Lieutenant Adams be sent to England immediately, as recommended by the Board of Medical Officers. Coming immediately after the Gilbert court-martial this sentence sets one thinking. If a Subaltern can get leave by telling his superior officer to "go to hell," why should there be any difficulty about a slight variation in the formula? "I'll be damned if I do," is surely quite as good in its way! On the other hand—to quote a military writer of reputation—"Prompt, ready unhesitating obedience in soldiers to those who are set over them is so necessary to the safety of the military state, and to the success of every military achievement, that it is scarcely possible to imagine a case were the subordinate officer would be at liberty to depart from the positive command of his superior; the justice of the Roman father who put his brave son to death for disobedience to his command has never been called into question, though many have wished that the feelings of the father had softened, in that particular case, the stern severity of the judge." Even a mild and Christian philosopher—Archdeacon Paley—was unable to suggest anything more than an expedient which might plead for the supersession of a military order. The question, therefore, naturally suggests itself, considering the cases of Lieutenant Gilbert and Lieutenant Adams, whether an officer may strike a compromise with his conscience by yielding obedience, de facto, to his superior, and at the same time relieve his excited feelings by saying, "I'll be damned if I do," or "go to hell?"—Broad Arrow.

THE OPIUM TRADE.—The Consular Reports from China for 1869, which have been issued, state that the consumption of opium in that Empire increases steadily. The question how far the native opium is likely to supersede Indian is one of great commercial importance. It is thought that from its superior qualities Indian opium will probably, to the point it has reached, about 76,000 chests, hold its own as an article of luxury. The native-grown drug has neither the strength nor the flavour of the imported, but the greater cheapness of the indigenous product enables it to displace the foreign in various inland opium marts. The British Consul at Canton states that the difference in price averages 40 per cent. He observes:—"1,100 piculs of opium paid duty here in 1869, being about 8 per cent. of the quantity which, if not actually smuggled, is, at least, brought in surreptitiously." The Consul at Foo-chow-foo states that the white poppy is cultivated in the prefecture of Wenchow-foo with great success, and is smuggled piecemeal into Foo-chow-foo in consequence of the Government prohibition of it; it is much used for mixing with the stronger Bengal kinds. The delegates of the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce, who went up the Yang-tze in 1869, found opium grown over a very large area in the province of Szechuen, Yunnan, and Kweichow. There the executive authorities shut their eyes to the existence of the plant, and the white poppy-fields may be seen on the most conspicuous places in the great river route, while the cultivation of it is nominally punishable with death. Duties are levied upon it, and establishments for the control of the trade in it are specially licensed by the authorities. The delegates stated that the popular belief is that four men in every five smoke, and one-half of the women. Szechuen sells opium to the natives of other provinces to the value of at least three million taels annually. Mr. Mongan, the British Consul at Tientsin, suggests that measures might be taken in India with a view to check the increasing production of the native drug in China. The Bombay merchant, before taking the Malwa opium to Bombay from the hand of the packer, has to procure a pass from the Government Treasury, costing Rs. 600 per chest, which pass frees the opium from further taxation in transit. The Consul remarks that if the transit duty were lowered, the China market could be supplied with Malwa at a cheaper rate, and that this would cause such an increased demand for it in those parts of China in which the taste for Indian opium still predominates that the Indian Government would probably gain more revenue by the lower rate on the larger quantity than from the present higher rate on the smaller quantity. The Bengal drug (Patna and Benares) is cultivated entirely by the Government itself, and is sold by auction at Calcutta in lots of five chests, with liberty to the buyer, on the fall of the hammer, to take succeeding lots at the same rate. The auctions are monthly; a minimum limit of Rs. 400 per chest, being the supposed cost, is placed on the drug, and all beyond is profit to the Government. The crop is apportioned in equal quantities to each monthly sale, and the quantity offered for competition is in a great measure regulated by the demand in the markets of China. No private individual is allowed to store opium; when a buyer wishes to export his purchases, they are shipped for him by the Government agent. It is suggested that if larger quantities were offered at the monthly sales, the Government would derive larger actual though smaller relative profits from the greater quantities sold, and these purchasers also could afford to sell their opium cheaper in China, and would thus compete on more equal terms with Chinese producers.

LECTURE ON INDIA.—On the 23rd inst. Mr. Iltudus Prichard delivered a lecture at the Russell Institution on the Commercial and Political Value to England of her Indian Empire. The lecturer said that when the Crown and Parliament undertook the direct administration of Indian affairs, great hopes were entertained that thenceforward the public and the press of this country would manifest that interest in India which was due to so valuable a dependency. India had no public opinion, at least it was allowed no weight in the policy of Government; wholesome reform could only be carried out under pressure of public opinion, and feeling the need of reform, and having no public opinion of her own to fall back upon, she looked to England to supply what was wanting; but she looked in vain. The Press ignored the subject, and Parliament was indifferent to it, because there was no public interest felt in it. Mr. Prichard then gave a sketch of India, of its scenery, its antiquities, and of the mythology and philosophy of the Hindoos. He then proceeded to dwell upon the commercial and political value to England of her Eastern Empire, and its value as affording a field for the employment of the educated and middle classes. He showed, by calculations made from official returns, that if England had not possessed India, she would have been the poorer by no less a sum than sixteen hundred millions sterling. He showed that England drained from India no less a sum than ten millions sterling; that the latter country consumed no less than a hundred and fifteen millions worth of British manufactured goods in five articles alone (including cotton goods), in ten years—and the resources of India as a market for English manufactures may be said to have only begun to be developed. After illustrating his subject with fact and figures, the lecturer proceeded to utter a warning note as to our tenure of India. After a century's dominion, he said, we hold India by no other tenure than that by which the Prussians retain possession of the suburbs of Paris. Statesmen have studied history to but little purpose if they have not learned that military occupation of a conquered country was only temporary. Our empire in India was consolidated on the basis of the many religious and political differences and race distinctions that prevented the people from amalgamating; it had been the end and object of our administrators to obliterate these distinctions and to weld the whole people into one mass; to compress the various races and creeds into one framework of civil and political unity. But just in proportion as we have succeeded in this great work, we have weakened our own position as a governing power. The system of our administration in India was too purely official to be really successful. England might as well look to the clerks and secretaries of the Inland Revenue-office and Custom-house, to the judges and magistrates, for a sound and healthy administration of the Government of this country, as expect exactly the same class of officials to administer wisely and well the government of India, unaided by any public opinion, shut out from all sympathy with the people, and utterly without the connecting link of intercourse by which the mind of the native can be known to its rulers. Mr. Prichard concluded by an allusion to the most "important question of the day"—"peace or war." The first gun fired, he said, on the shores of the Euxine would be heard over the whole of India, and the peace of that country would be endangered. He deprecated a resort to arms, except at the stern bidding of necessity, and called upon Englishmen to evince their moral courage by refusing to be driven by any idle taunts about their love of peace or preference for commerce over war into so tremendous a struggle. British dominion in India was to be secured only by enlisting the goodwill of the people, but the loss of the country would be followed by the decline of Great Britain to the position of a second-rate Power in Europe.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

TO INDIA BY RUSSIA AND PERSIA.—Captain W. C. Campbell, formerly aide-de-camp to Sir Hope Grant and Sir G. LeMarchant, and now Adjutant of H. E. the Governor's body guard, has just returned to his appointment from furlough to Europe. Captain Campbell made his way back to India by a novel and most interesting route, having travelled first by way of St. Petersburg, Moscow, Nijni-Novgorod, and Astrakan to the Caspian Sea, which he crossed, and then made his way across Persia on horseback through Teheran, Ispahan, Shiraz, and Bushire, a ride of about 1,000 miles. From Bushire he took steamer to Bombay. The journey occupied about three months. While in Russia, Captain Campbell noticed that large numbers of troops, armed principally with American breech-loaders, were being despatched to the South. But it was only when he arrived at Shiraz that he heard of the Black Sea question. Here is another little straw to show which way the wind has been blowing.—Madras Mail, Dec. 28.

TELEGRAPHIC.—The ships Scanderia and Edinburgh, the latter with the telegraph cable connecting Madras with Burmah, have, we are happy to say, arrived safely in our roads—the responsible duties connected with this undertaking having been most ably performed by those to whom the important work has been entrusted. The shore end of the cable has been safely lodged in the Government Telegraph office and telegraphic communication thereby effected with Burmah and other easterly stations.—Madras Athenæum, Jan. 5.

INDIA OFFICE, 19th January, 1871.

RHEEA OR CHINA GRASS FIBRE.

THE SECRETARY of STATE for INDIA in COUNCIL announces that the offer of PRIZES for the INVENTION of MACHINERY for the PREPARATION of RHEEA FIBRE, made by the Governor-general of India in his Notification of the 11th January, 1870, published in this country on the 10th of February, is extended to the 11th January, 1872:—

And that Packets of Dried Stems of the Plant have been received from the Governor-general, samples of which will be given to persons anxious to compete for these Prizes. His Excellency in Council wishes it to be distinctly understood by all persons to whom the samples are given, that the required Machinery will have to operate on green and fresh stems, and that these dried stems are merely sent in order to give the manufacturers a better idea of the nature of the plant, and of the difficulties to be overcome, than could be obtained from a mere verbal description of them.

Applications for Samples are to be addressed to the Reporter on the Products of India, India Museum.

NOTICE.

AS the Furlough Pay of Officers on leave in this country from Regiments in India will, after the 1st of April, 1870, be issued at the India Office instead of through the Regimental Agents as heretofore, and as this step is preparatory to the issue of Officers' Pay in other cases without the necessary intervention of a Regimental Agent, with the view of excluding from the Army Estimates in future the charge for agency we, the undersigned Regimental Agents, hereby give notice, that we are prepared to act as the Private Army Agents of Officers, and to draw their Full Pay, Furlough Pay, Half-pay, Retired Pay, or Pension, free of charge.

CHALLENGE to the WORLD.—The Bristol Daily Times and Mirror, August 5th, has the following:—"Messrs. J. C. Swan and Co., of 16, Queen-square, in this city, have invented a pocket microscope, which is a marvel in all that such an instrument should be. It has great power, remarkable definition, and does not require focussing. The cheapness of the article will make it exceedingly popular when its merits are more widely known. It is called the 'Bristol Microscope,' and is a great credit to the inventor, as much for its extreme simplicity as its power."—The Western Daily Press says:—"The Bristol Microscope has a magnifying power of 20,000 times," &c., &c.—The Western Daily Telegraph says:—"The Bristol Microscope is the most compact and useful scientific instrument we have ever seen; it possesses extraordinary power, and is very easily managed," &c. The price of the Bristol Microscope is only 2s., or, free by post, with printed directions, for twenty-eight stamps.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

ENJOYMENT OF LIFE.—When the blood is pure, its circulation perfect, and the nerves in good order, we are well. These Pills possess a marvellous power in securing these great secrets of health, by purifying and regulating the fluids, and strengthening the solids. Holloway's Pills can be confidently recommended to all persons suffering from disordered digestion, or worried by nervous fancies, or neuralgic pains. They correct acidity and heartburn, dispel sick headache, quicken the action of the liver, and act as alteratives and gentle aperients. The weak and delicate may take them without fear. Holloway's Pills are eminently serviceable to invalids of nervous temperament, as they raise the action of every organ to its natural standard, and universally exercise a calming and bracing influence.

CURATIVE ELECTRICITY.—Invalids who (from a want of practical knowledge of the application of Electricity and Galvanism) have been disappointed in obtaining a cure from the use of GALVANIC APPARATUS, are invited to communicate directly with Mr. HARRY LOBB, M.R.C.S.E., Surgeon Electrician, from whom may be obtained "CURATIVE ELECTRICITY," by post thirteen stamps. 31, Sackville-street, Piccadilly, London, W.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, January 14; Agra and Madras, January 12; Calcutta, January 11.

THE particulars of Sir H. Durand's death may at length be gathered from an official report of the Punjab Government to the Viceroy as well as other sources. It appears that after inspecting the outpost of Tank on foot, Sir Henry with the Nawab got upon an elephant to ride into the town itself. The first gateway was passed safely, but the second, which was hardly ten feet high and stood on higher ground, caught the howdah as the elephant passed, and Sir Henry fell violently to the ground upon his face. According to one account the mahout seeing the danger tried to make the elephant sit down, but it mistook the signal and rushed on. The Nawab himself escaped with a broken rib and some other injuries. Both he and Sir Henry at the last moment tried to crouch down in the howdah, but it crushed in upon them, and the latter as he fell struck a low mud wall on the right of the gateway. The blood streamed from his nose when he was picked up insensible and groaning as if in much pain. Three doctors attended him, but his state from the first left little room for hope, with his lower limbs and half his body completely paralysed, and partial paralysis of his arms. Still some slight hopes were entertained next morning, when he had regained consciousness and could swallow a little liquid food. At two however of the 1st January he became worse, by five all hope was gone, and at eight in the evening he breathed his last, retaining his faculties up to half an hour before death. In fact, as we said last week, his neck was broken, as it were, and nothing could have saved him. He was buried on the 5th at Dera Ismael Khan, with all the honours of his position, a good many of the native chiefs being represented in the procession that followed him to his grave.

ON the 9th January a meeting was held at Calcutta, under the presidency of Bishop Milman, to consider the question of a fitting memorial to the late Governor. Nearly all the leaders of European and native society in the town were present. It was resolved that a Committee, headed by General Norman and Rajah Kali Krishna Bahadoor, should take measures for the raising of a memorial of such a kind as may hereafter be determined by the subscribers.

SIR SEYMOUR FITZGERALD has been continuing his little progress through Western India. Leaving Surat on the 7th January, he spent four days at Baroda, the new Gaikwar, Mulhar Rao, doing the honours with magnificent grace. Besides the usual round of fireworks, illuminations, processions, durbars, &c., his Highness treated his guest to some elephant and rhinoceros fights, a description of which will be found in another page. At Ahmedabad the Governor was received with hardly less magnificence. From thence he was expected to return to Bombay on the 15th, after an absence of a month and a-half. During his tour Sir Seymour, of course, did not neglect business. At Baroda everything under that head seems to have gone off smoothly, and the Gaikwar's formal installation was to take place in a few days. At Surat, among other matters brought under his notice was a plan for bridging the Taptee—a much needed work. For £50,000 the thing could be done, it seems; but Government is expected to pay part of the expense, and Government, pleaded Sir Seymour, happens to be short of money.

THE tenth yearly Convocation of Bombay University took place on Jan. 10, the Vice-Chancellor, Mr. Justice Gibbs, taking the chair in Sir S. Fitzgerald's absence. The report showed 877 candidates for matriculation, against 839 the year before. Of these, however, only 142 passed in each year, a fact which Dr. Hunter had ascribed to the high standard of examination, but for which the Vice-Chancellor found a simpler explanation in the general failure of the candidates to qualify in English. The students came up before they were properly prepared in that branch of knowledge. In proportion to population however the students in Bombay were more numerous than those in the other chief presidencies. The Vice-Chancellor referred in passing to the appearance on the degree list of the first European British-born subject who has ever been enrolled among the Bombay graduates—Mr. H. E. Aitken, son of the late Rev. Mr. Aitken, a former Fellow of the University. During the year another scholarship had been founded by a private donor, in memory of Sir Joseph Arnould, who retired more than a year ago from the High Court of Bombay. Pointing to the many Bombay graduates who already fill professors' chairs, have become heads of high schools, and have recruited the ranks of the Bar and the Medical Service, the Vice-Chancellor could not but think that a satisfactory answer might thus far be given to the questions in which Sir Bartle Frere had once sketched out his views of the work that such an University ought to accomplish.

THE Indian papers contain nearly the whole of Mr. Forsyth's interesting report on his journey to Yarkand. It is very long, but full of incidents and descriptions, many of which have from time to time been reported in these columns. As far as Leh, the capital of Ladakh, where Mr. Shaw joined the mission, everything went quite smoothly; but once launched beyond the dreary Changchenmo Pass, and the limits of the Cashmere Rajah's power, Mr. Forsyth's troubles began. The report confirms all we had heard about the lean ponies and defective supplies received from the Cashmere officials, and the aggravation thereby added to the hardships which Mr. Forsyth's party encountered along the dreary rugged wilderness that divides Yarkand from Ladakh. Once near the capital of the Atalikh Ghazi, the scene changed as if by magic to breadths of cornfields and gardens of fruit and vegetables, watered by canals, and intersected by pretty lanes shaded by large poplars, through which came frequent glimpses of pleasant country houses. Alike by the wayside and in the bazaars of the city were ample signs of peaceful industry and prosperous trade. The city itself, which seemed to have very few guns and a limited garrison of curiously-armed and rustic-looking soldiers, is overawed by a new but poorly fortified town some hundreds of yards off. In ominous contrast with the peaceful life around was the sight of a human head withering on the top of a pole by the roadside.

Mr. Hickey's scheme for utilising sewage as a substitute for gas by means which would also neutralise its unwholesome properties, has at length been laid before a committee, which is to report on the question of applying his method to the lighting of Dumdum.

It is stated in a Madras newspaper that the Indian Government is considering the question of reducing the postage on newspapers, and that Mr. Monteath, the Postmaster-general, strongly countenances the idea of such a reduction. Several journals complain, by the way, of the extent to which English newspapers have lately been pilfered during the voyage out. This practice, from which we at home are not always safe, falls doubly hard on our friends in India, who are always exposed to the depredations of native clerks and postmasters on all that passes through their hands.

The battle of the gauges in India is stated in several of the papers to have been settled at last in favour of a gauge of three feet three inches.

According to Captain Strover matters at Bhamo have gone on promisingly enough since the departure of the late Woon, who behaved so rudely to the British Agent on his arrival at Bhamo. Shans and Kakhyens come and do business freely and openly. Villagers flock in by hundreds to listen to a musical-box which Captain Strover is waiting to present to a Burman officer. Phoongyees (priests) come and go in all friendliness. Plenty of workmen are to be had at need. "No Kakhyen raids have taken place; order, peace, and goodwill seem to have reigned everywhere." But there is a rumour that the offending Woon is about to return, and if that be true, which Captain Strover earnestly hopes not, all this promise may yet come to naught. This would indeed be a great misfortune, now that so many of the people around Bhamo have begun, says Captain Strover, to speak openly and with a tone of interest about the prospects and means of trade with China, and that the intervening tribes seem ready to trade with Burmah on their own account. He himself urges the policy of sending an English Political on a visit to the Governor of Momein in company with the first caravan that may start thitherwards. Such a step, he thinks, would encourage the Shans to keep the roads open and turn against the Chinese chiefs who have been playing the part of "mere freebooters."

The telegrams announcing a Loshai raid into Cachar harmonise with the accounts received by this mail of the failure of Mr. Edgar's attempt to come to a friendly understanding with the Loshai Chiefs. Perhaps the one movement, by exciting groundless suspicion, accounts for the other. Be that as it may Cachar was entered at three different points, the guard at each being too weak to hinder the attack. The tea-planters with their coolies however seem to have fought well and beaten back the raiders with heavy loss. Troops were promptly ordered up, and more were ready to start from Chittagong.

Sayad Toorkee, whom a Calcutta paper leaves at Soor abandoned by most of his followers, appears by the latest telegrams to have actually taken Muscat. If so, the fortunes of Azan bin Ghez must have fallen to a very low ebb.

The French settlement of Pondicherry has had a curiously chequered history since the day when brave Francis Martin, in 1674, founded the little town of Phoolcherry, as it was first called, on the land which he had bought from the Sultan of Bejapore in the name of the French East India Company. This plot of ground lay on the Coromandal coast, near the mouth of the Gingee, about eighty miles south of Madras. Under Martin's fostering care the little place with its garrison of sixty Frenchmen and three hundred Sepoys throve and grew larger year by year, until in 1693 it fell an easy prey to an overpowering Dutch force. In Dutch hands it remained until the Peace of Ryswick in 1697 restored it to its former owners. By the time of Martin's death in 1706 Pondicherry had grown into a large and flourishing town. To the virtues and genius of this high-souled Frenchman Colonel Malleson pays a warm tribute in his "History of the French in India." During the next sixteen years Pondicherry, neglected by its commercial masters, steadily declined. After 1722 however the tide turned in its favour. With Dupleix for Governor it became in 1743 an important stronghold of the rising French power in India. Five years afterwards it baffled the renewed attacks of a large English force under Admiral Boscawen, who after forty-two days of open trenches was compelled to retreat with heavy loss from before a stronghold defended by the commanding genius of Dupleix. In September, 1760, Pondicherry was again besieged by Colonel Coote, the victor of Wandiwash. Lally, the Governor, held out bravely, in spite of formidable odds; but by the middle of January, 1761, he and his starved soldiers were forced to surrender, and the fall of their stronghold sealed the doom not only of poor Lally but of French dominion in India. The fortifications of Pondicherry were razed to the ground. Again restored to France in 1763, the place again fell into British hands in October, 1778; its fortifications being again destroyed by Sir Hector Munro. From that time until the peace of 1814 Pondicherry remained in our keeping. It was then restored to the French, on condition that it should never again be fortified or held as a military post. The White town is well-built, and laid out with avenues of trees. At the beginning of this century Lord Valentia described it as the handsomest town he had seen in India next to Calcutta. It is now a cheerful-looking, healthy place, well supplied with water, has a good pier, a lighthouse, and a number of picturesque or important public buildings. Its present population is reckoned at 30,000, and that of the whole district at about 120,000. Its foreign trade consists chiefly of muslins and dyed calicoes; the Pondicherry blue being one of the fastest dyes known.

Our obituary for the past week contains the death of a well-known and much esteemed old Indian, Colonel W. Turner, who had for many years been manager of the Bengal Military Orphan Fund.

Promotion to the Rank of Major-General.—Lord Cairns, Sir William Milbourne James, Sir George William Wilshere Bramwell, Sir James Yorke Scarlett, and Donald Martin Stewart have been appointed Royal Commissioners to inquire into and examine whether the recommendation of the Select Committee of the House of Commons, that an amalgamated list of colonels be formed from the British list, the Staff Corps, and the Indian local list, from which amalgamated list promotions should be made to the rank of Major-General, by seniority, according to the dates of commissions as colonels, can be carried into effect consistently with Parliamentary enactments or assurance. The Commissioners, or any three or more of them, are authorised to obtain information upon the said question by the examination of all persons most competent, by reason of their knowledge, habits, or experience, to afford it; and also by calling for all documents, papers, and records which may appear to them or any three or more of them, calculated to assist their researches and to promote the formation of a sound judgment on the subject. Mr. John Milton, of the War-office, is appointed secretary to the Commission.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE CLAMOUR ABOUT PONDICHERRY.

One curious if not very pleasing sign of the times is the greediness with which public journalists fasten upon any bit of news that may come to hand. Everything is food that floats near their shark-like mouths. Down goes the glittering morsel, without a thought of its real character, or of the trouble that may be involved in trying to digest it. Anything in the shape of a telegram is specially liable to be thus swallowed down. Take for instance the telegram which lately announced from Berlin the alleged terms of Bismarck's demands on France. It bore its own contradiction upon its face; but what of that? There was little else at the moment to write about. Bismarck is the ogre of the day; German arrogance grows with what it feeds upon; we had heard from India—that sacred seat of all truth—that Pondicherry was about to change masters. True that the terms announced were directly calculated to prolong the struggle which all Germany is now impatient to finish, and that Pondicherry and four hundred millions sterling expressed the opposite poles of practical absurdity. But one tale would serve as well as another for the text of never so many leading articles protesting in phrases more or less severe against this or that item in the list of Bismarck's cruel claims. Only one or two of our weekly contemporaries ventured to disbelieve the telegraphic version of those claims, before an authoritative denial came direct from Versailles itself. We now know that they include neither Lorraine nor Pondicherry, nor even the cession of twenty war-ships. With regard to the French indemnity all that we yet know for certain is that nothing like four hundred millions has even been suggested on the German side.

It is not perhaps strange that the rumoured cession of Pondicherry should have been generally regarded as an insult to England. In the present state of feeling towards our Teutonic kinsmen in particular and all strong States in general, we may be forgiven for reading in such a step a new proof of the light esteem in which Europe has come to hold the British Lion. It is not a pleasant sign indeed, this readiness to suspect attacks upon our national honour, however naturally it may have flowed out of the prevalent panic about our national defences. But was it necessary to work ourselves into a fluster at the mere notion of Pondicherry falling into German hands? Would it really matter to us one pin which of the European Powers held that "melancholy little spot on the Coromandel Coast which no ship can approach, the only communication between the mainland and the ocean being by rafts that can live through the surf?" Is it likely that the Germans would plant themselves on a spot commercially so uninviting, for the mere purpose of annoying the masters of all India, or in the wild hope of some day undermining the British power? If they wanted a footing in India, they would want it only for commercial ends, and Pondicherry by all accounts would hardly suit them on that score. And how the transfer from French to German hands of an unfortified town and district containing about 120,000 souls could unsettle the minds of 200 million natives, is more than we can understand. Even as a military post it would count for nothing against British resources, even if the Germans cared to hold it at a cost absurdly in excess of its possible worth.

The truth is that all these alarms and suspicions rest on a purely visionary basis. It is tacitly assumed that other European Powers are always coveting the vast Indian possessions which circumstances have brought under our sway. But why should they covet a prize at once so hard to win and so fraught with danger and trouble in the keeping? No northern or western nation in Europe could ever hope to colonise India as we have colonised North America, nor is it possible that any nation in the world would now care to enter on the costly and unpromising task of wresting from its present masters a great semi-tropical country nearly as large as all Europe. It was a fine thing for us to have achieved so mighty a conquest in so short a time, but we may rest assured that no other Power—neither Germany nor even Russia—has the smallest desire to step, peacefully or by force, into our shoes. In few words, it would never pay them to do what we ourselves, if the choice were still before us, would never dream of undertaking, especially in the teeth of a Power which held firm possession not of a few districts, but of the whole Peninsula.

VACCINATION IN LOWER BENGAL.

Dr. Murray's Report on the progress of vaccination in Bengal during 1868-9 gives a more hopeful picture of results achieved in that province than General Fytche was able to give of similar proceedings in British Burmah. In Calcutta and its suburbs alone nearly as many people were vaccinated in the year as the 10,584 vaccinated altogether in our Burman possessions. The Chief Commissioner deplores the "lamentable failure" of vaccine operations in the Arakan Division, only thirty-four persons having undergone the process in a district containing 127,239 souls, and only 35¼ per cent. of these being successfully treated. In another district the successful cases were only 39½ per cent. The average of successful cases for the whole province barely came up to 78 per cent. In Calcutta on the other hand the average rose to 93, and in the suburbs to 98 per cent., a level not always reached in our own country. In the three Presidency Circles the percentage for the year was returned at 99, a figure which Dr. Murray deems overrated, in comparison with the 95 per cent. quoted for the Punjab, the 90 per cent. for Madras, and the 96 per cent. for Bombay. The lowest percentage in Bengal is 58.42 for the Ranchi Circle, and the highest is 99·64 for the second Metropolitan Circle. The third Metropolitan shows the high proportion of 99·60 on 70,563 vaccinations, the largest number reported from any one district. In the whole presidency there were 184,303 successful cases out of 194,285 vaccinations, showing a successful percentage of 90·65.

The actual number of vaccinations for the year seems small enough in comparison with the forty millions who inhabit Bengal. But each year the proportion rises. In the Darjeeling Circle for instance Dr. Matthew reports 44,533 cases, of which 88 per cent. were successful, against 25,438 for the previous year with a successful percentage of 89; and these numbers were more than double those for 1866-7. The people in this circle are taking kindly to the vaccinating process, as a better substitute for the native practice of inoculating. In some villages the first outbreak of small-pox led to an immediate request from the inhabitants for the presence of a regular vaccinator. There is still a prejudice against vaccinating babies, owing mainly, it seems, to the amount of fever which attends the process among native children. Dr. Matthew also objects strongly to vaccination during the hot and rainy seasons. In April and May the Bhooteahs and Nepalese suffer greatly from the fever and local swellings which then follow the vaccinations, and the constant rains of July and August preclude the chance of doing much medical work in those months. In the Sonthal districts a marked improvement had already begun. Only the year before no impression could be made by the single vaccinator who went to try his chance against the Sonthal belief in witchcraft as the cause and inoculation as the only cure for the small-pox. In 1868 however a stronger effort rewarded by quick successes reassured the frightened people, nearly 4,000 of whom were vaccinated during six months, with a successful percentage of 89·57. About a fourth of the whole number were genuine Sonthals. In the Ranchi Circle the number vaccinated—nearly 8,000—shows a gain of nearly 1,500 on the previous year. The low percentage of successful cases may in part be ascribed to the sudden departure of many hundreds from the district, before the results of the process could be ascertained, and partly also to the unusual heat of the season and the want of skilled vaccinators. This last drawback indeed has seriously affected the results in several other circles. With a scanty staff of ignorant and ill-paid operators it is hardly wonderful that so many failures should occur and the sphere of operations be so contracted as it often is. More assistants, with more experience and better pay, are generally demanded. No provision, according to Dr. Murray himself, has yet been made for a systematic treatment of several large tracts in Eastern Bengal; and after all that has been done "the mass of the population in Bengal Proper has at present less protection afforded to them than in any other part of India." It is satisfactory however to learn that the vaccine lymph employed "appears to have been good throughout all the operations."

Writing of Calcutta itself Dr. Charles complains loudly of the mischief done by the want of due precautions against the spread of small-pox, a want which the people of London and its suburbs have lately been experiencing to their heavy cost. In spite of frequent remonstrances and a special report on the subject no steps had been taken to repress the mischief, and Calcutta remains as much exposed to an epidemic of small-pox as it was in the old days of sanitary darkness. But for recent revelations of what happens in the more crowded parts of our own metropolis, we might wonder at the recklessness with which natives sick of the disease in Calcutta set themselves down in a crowded neighbourhood, and become the inevitable centres of fresh outbreaks. With the advantages of a hospital close at hand, numbers of them insist on hiring a hut in the midst of a poor and swarming population, still for the most part unprotected by Dr. Jenner's benign talisman. Dr. Murray on this point agrees with his subordinate. Until measures have been taken for isolating small-pox patients, and securing timely notice of each new case, Calcutta like London must expect the continual recurrence of small-pox epidemics.

Even when the vaccinators are capable and zealous men, the difficulties they encounter from the people are very great. Besides the popular distrust of any new process and the long established claims of inoculation, all kinds of absurd delusions run riot in the native mind. Under cover for instance of a safeguard against small-pox, the credulous people see in the marking of their arms with vaccine a new method of telling them off for purposes of taxation. Stories yet more childish find ready credence among the masses. Sometimes however a sudden impulse in the opposite direction leads to such strangely pleasing issues as the appearance of 500 villagers all seeking to be vaccinated in one morning. It is something also to have gained in some quarters the votes of the more intelligent classes. The Pundits of Nuddea, the chief seat of learning and theology in Lower Bengal, have borne telling witness to the cause of sanitary reform by allowing their children to be vaccinated, and encouraging others to do likewise. From the Zemindars, as a body, no sort of opposition has been offered to the vaccination of their families and their ryots. Superstition itself has now and then sided with the new movement. At Shampore, the wife of a priest of Sittolah—the goddess of small-pox—declared herself inspired by her goddess to encourage the advance of the new system. Another Pythoness, who had once denounced vaccination and foretold the death of those who tried it, suddenly found herself empowered by Sittolah to aid the vaccinators in their good work.

In a separate paper Dr. Charles pleads warmly in favour of regulating inoculation in most parts of Bengal. Not that the older process can be compared with the newer; but the present staff of vaccinators is far too small for so large a population, some four-fifths of which have been wont to undergo inoculation at their own expense. Inoculated small-pox does not, as a rule, spread the disease, and to forbid the practice under present circumstances would be tantamount to leaving the bulk of the people at the mercy of a scourge which can sweep away whole communities from the face of the earth. The chief objection to the Doctor's scheme for subsidising native inoculators consists in the impossibility of sanctioning two conflicting systems under one Government. Anything like an official recognition of the older system would tend seriously to hinder if not altogether to prevent the final ascendency of the process which alone has stamped out small-pox wherever it has been thoroughly carried out. All that the Indian Government can fairly do is to refrain from legally forbidding inoculation, wherever the means of establishing the rival system remain inadequate to the need.

Correspondence.

THE NATIVE STATES OF INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—I observe that last month Allen's Mail, which stands deservedly high in the estimation of all who are interested in our Indian Empire, has a letter from an "Ex-Political Agent," deprecating "our legislation being confined to our own possessions;" "the jurisdiction by native principalities within their respective territories," and urging "our taking a higher view than hitherto," &c. Certainly, in our own possessions, the legislation fever has been raging so fiercely that its ravages may extend into the territories of our neighbours. "Ex-Agent" would rejoice. But statesmen of the stamp distinguished for probity and foresight take a different view of so grasping a policy.

Measures of supposed expediency subversive of the heredi ditary rights and the self-respect of allies, are increasing our expenditure and creating throughout India a deep impression of our bad faith. Ever since that egregious failure beyond the frontier, in attempting to supplant the popular Dost Mohummud by the fainéant Shah Shooja in Caubool, full play has been given to the expediency of fashioning on our variable model the Governments of Hindoo rajahs and Mahommedan nawabs. Already some have been improved off the face of the land. Others, so unfortunate as to be the rulers of countries having the attractions of a Montpélier climate—for instance, Sirohee or Cashmere—may soon share the same fate. Of course, other reasons will be alleged. The Rev. Mr. Brinckman, after his late agreeable tour in Cashmere, has unscrupulously devised several. Some schemers here, and many in India, are mortified to find a mare's-nest in their notion that the Rajah of Cashmere murdered Mr. Hayward. When we covet Potsdam, it may be surmised by the Morning Post and its dupes that the King of Prussia has made away with Captain Hosier. The sagacious Runjeet fostered in the North-West a Rajpoot power, because it could have no affinity with his turbulent Sikhs on one side or with malignant Islam on the other. Had proof of this been wanting it has, in his time and ours, been signally manifested on four important occasions. Lord Hardinge gave still greater substance to that power. The measure was provident and wise, as were all his measures. There are those who now would disregard his policy; their views are sneaking and silly, or worse. Its ruler had some ground for the remark he lately made to an English ibex-hunter:—"My good friends the British Government having discovered their mistake in supposing that shawl-wool was produced in this my country, now turn round and want to shear me."

One hears much of misunderstandings between chiefs and their feudatories. So long as our counsel was unobtrusive, and our agents too circumspect to be played upon, cordiality between these classes was the rule. The reverse was rare. In such case they were soon led to cease their wrangle and be reconciled. Court intrigues, factions, and Feringee-traps, now making British agency look ludicrous, are evils of luxuriant growth when our fussy representatives ostentatiously dabble in foreign administration. Formerly a popular pretender may have claimed the throne of Marwar; some of its landlords may have espoused his cause. Others rallied round the aged monarch. His fortress of Jodhpore was well garrisoned. The contented peasant ploughed on in that insouciance he would exhibit everywhere in India, were the question whether Ratthores, British, or Donski-Cossacks were to be his masters on the morrow. Did the paramount State then pretend that its duty, or the welfare of Marwarrees, rendered it just or expedient to interpose its direct authority? Not at all. It prescribed merely a fair field and no favour; only, it insisted that no outside sympathisers should take part with prince, pretender, or people. High words but few blows were exchanged. British advice was felt, but not paraded. The chivalrous Dhokul Singh sought an asylum in our provinces. He there closed his romantic career, while Maun Singh continued his long reign undisturbed. His successor has now incurred the displeasure of Lord Mayo. Court etiquette is strictly observed by Rajpoots. In this case the offence was deliberate and stupid. Nevertheless, the punishment is perhaps excessive. Certain it is, that the secretary who indited the published sentence must be a prig; and that there was no "Beau Nash" superintending the Viceregal receptions at Ajmeer. This was the Ruler who, lying west of us towards the desert, enabled Lord Elphinstone in 1857 to convey to London tidings of our armies and our countrymen in Upper India, during that anxious interval at home, when rebellion had for a time cut off all communication with the coasts by every line in our own dominion; and when, in acknowledging his timely aid, our local authorities made it known that "he had arranged a line of communication for us with Ajmeer and Agra, and viâ Balmeer and Kurrachee, so that expresses reached Kurrachee from Balmeer, three hundred and fifty miles, in forty-eight hours, on village horses and camels." Left without any manly friends but the Horse Guards, it will be found that we have made a big financial blunder. To avoid so awkward a position, we must abandon the crafty course of preferring expediency to principle. We must give India a fair return for so largely paying to maintain overgrown European offices there and here. We must be so trusted as to attract the wealth of native capitalists for purposes of greater utility than their vapouring as "Stars of India," or blundering through a quadrille at "the alternative metropolis" of wigwams at Simla. We must disburse less on strike-a-light visionaries, on inflicted blessings, on insatiable contractors, on pretending to keep pace with "the generation which deals in shares and calls it progress," and on speculators in guaranteed 5 per cent. for executing public works of scandalously defective construction. Annexations during the last twenty-five years prove most unprofitable. This is shown by increased expenditure, civil, military, and police, if all told, at a rate and cost of management never before heard of by us, or by native rulers, or in any other country in the world. While ontside we are losing character as faithless allies, we are hatching sedition by our waste of public money, and by our domestic experiments in taxation and laws.

There is no mistaking the good intentions of "Ex-Agent." He proposes what he deems to be only mild usurpation, in the belief that it would promote "the welfare of thousands." But his means of attaining his benevolent object are questionable. Seeing much of the people there of all ranks, both in our own territory and beyond, I have noticed the feeling, in the latter, that there are compensations; the more so since it would be a gross error to suppose that our administrative freaks are viewed by any class of the people as indicating a consistent, trustworthy, Government. And it is to be noticed amongst our neighbours how perfect still is self-government, in village institutions protecting all the rights of every class of the community; also, that more ploughs go from us than come over the borders to us. Subordinates may conceal many significant facts. That is not difficult, since our district officers, like their betters, now see less and know less, than ever before of the people. They hated our predecessors but liked their measures. They like us, and always did, but they regard our measures during the last score of years with aversion and dismay. They bear patiently with a good deal of taxation of sorts, to support all bona fide working establishments and State purposes. But they observe with mixed feelings of chagrin and contempt, our vagaries, our crude legislation, our pipeclay police, our "how-to-get-to-the-Hills" effeminacy, the millions wasted on tumbledown scamp architecture, and their money lavished vainly on proselytising schools, while really popular education, excepting in the Western Presidency, is still as much wanting as in this country of sectarian squabbles, or in Timbuctoo. Hence it is you now have "Chittees"—not "Chapattees" this time—passing clandestinely through the villages; and the seditious anticipating a season, when again the authorities may be caught napping in summer, to the extent, as before, of seventy-six per cent. of them coolly mooning in the mountains.

In India "Ex-Agent's" views will be regarded as another display of arrogance and injustice; savouring of that school which imbued impulsive Lord Dalhousie with the spirit of annexation; engendered the rebellion of 1857; became again rampant under the dangerous delusion that it was for our sakes the Sikhs yelled to raze Delhi, and the Goorkhas marched down to the Terrace; and has ever since been intruding on all defenceless States, in reliance on the Connaught Rangers, the 93rd Highlanders, the Rifles, and the Royal Dragoons. He adds that "we did not feel ourselves sufficiently strong, but can now do that which at an earlier period might have been unwise or perilous, for our footing until the last few years has been often critical and insecure." But those earlier periods were signalised by proclaiming, in Gazettes, the permanency of our relations with friendly native Principalities, by means of treaties. It does seem as if he were one of those who in dealing with States skulk a big fellow when he means resistance, but dare the reproach of cowardice rather than abstain from punching the head of a little one. In no country are the people more prompt to detect vacillation, evasion, or perfidy in a Government. On the other hand, they are observant and awed when deserved success crowns its acts of daring. They truly pitied our mad vanity when invading Afghanistan. But they craved to share the renown, when, in the face of stupendous difficulties, the British Army gloriously retrieved there our military reputation. The heroism of a Colin Mackenzie, a Sale, a George Lawrence, a Dennie, a Macgregor, or a Conolly, in Caubool and Jellalabad, may have faded in a few years from the minds of their countrymen. The public remembrance of them here soon passed away, as if they had never been. But it is true, as it may seem strange, that their bravery and fortitude are fresh in the memory of intelligent and loyal native chiefs, and are among stirring anecdotes still recounted by them, after the lapse of more than a quarter of a century.

"Ex-Agent" states that, "till within a few years, we never felt sufficiently strong to direct much attention to the internal administration of native Powers; that they have assumed a position of independence to which they had never attained," that "feudatories in their position could never be of any value in aiding us," and that "we were well satisfied if, in seasons of war and disturbance, they maintained neutrality." But the records of his Government exhibit lucid reports, by highly competent officers, which prove the thorough knowledge acquired by the paramount State of the affairs of all classes in native States, and evince the skilful and benign influence exercised in its relations with them, whether Rajpoots, Goorkhas, Mahrattas, Burmese, Malwa Sikhs, as well as the Manjha Sikhs, the latter ruled by Runjeet Singh, whose "privileges," fenced round as they were by a tidily organised army. "Ex-Agent" would not then have curtailed, because of "the weakness of the paramount power of the day." As to their assumption of more independence, &c., in order to correct that mistake, let "Ex-Agent" consult Tod's "Rajasthan," and certain exact narratives of the centuries of decline of the Delhi Empire. Also, his assertion that they could never be of any use, &c., is surely a misconception. For it is not too much to say that the thousands of well-appointed Rajpoot cavalry, which so loyally aided the Mohummedan Kings and Viceroys in the field, might be of use to us some day when in trouble. And with respect to their behaviour in past times, which he sneeringly terms "neutrality," he ought to remember all that their active contingents of troops and scouts, their abundant commissariat, and their transport, did for Colonel Arthur Wellesley, of the 33rd Foot, in the Deccan; for General Lake, in his Mahratta campaign and pursuit; for Colonel Monson, in his retreat; for Sir David Ochterlony, in the Goorkha War; for Lord Hastings, in his Pindarrie War; for our hard-pressed English families around Delhi and in Oudh during the late disastrous rebellion; and in numberless other "occasions of war and disturbance." Ought such loyalty to be now spurned as "neutrality?" Can it be honestly said that, "with conduct of this negative description we were forced to be content?"

It is probable that the zeal and vigilance with which the Pateeala horsemen, under the spontaneous orders of their chief, successfully scoured the woods and other hiding places where our bewildered women and children sought refuge from massacre, on the outbreak of the revolt in 1857; and the openhandedness with which he disbursed his ample funds, and promptly executed the manifold requisitions of the British Commissioner with our army beseiging Delhi, may be ascribed to the undeviating observance, by a succession of experienced officers, of the following injunctions once issued by the Government of India for regulating its relations with that Raj. I would urge upon "Ex-Agent," likewise, to learn and to test the enduring advantages arising from principles that led his predecessors to mind their own business. For this extract I was indebted to one whose success in the discharge of arduous duties, and whose popularity with prince and peasant, though not in the quarter here referred to, was attained by strictly shaping his conduct towards Native States in accordance with its sound precepts:—

His Excellency in Council is anxious that you should abstain from any participation in the measures of reform, however necessary in the State of Pateeala; and that you should limit your interference to the mere expression of your advice and recommendation on points that may be submitted to your judgment. The distinction is obvious between the occasional exercise of the influence of a protecting Power, in securing to the several Chiefs the enjoyment of their respective rights, by preventing the usurpation of injustice and ambition, and that species of interference which affects the internal administration of their territories, and controls their liberty of action within the limits of their legitimate jurisdiction, in points of legislation, and civil and military economy. The former is the proper and necessary office of protection; the latter has a tendency to convert protection into control, and to abridge the rights which we profess to maintain.—Yours obediently, C. E.

INDIA BETWEEN TWO FIRES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—Should Prussia succeed in her intention of rending the French possessions in India from France, and establishing them as a portion of the great Teutonic unity, it is to be feared that we shall scarcely find the Germans the placid and comfortable neighbours that our Gallic friends have so long proved themselves to be to us in those parts.

I am not going here to dilate on the great and serious fact that, with the Prussians strongly established in Southern India, and the Russians steadily advancing on our Northern frontier, India will be between two fires. This however with the non-fighting John Bull of the present day may be considered a matter of no moment. But what about the several commercial treaties now existing between England and France in reference to these said possessions? Will the strictly conscientious German mind, for instance, lend itself to the iniquitous British monopolies of the vile opium-growing and cruel salt restrictive trades? Again, will the great German mind be satisfied and long remain content with these small circumscribed plots, hemmed in on all sides by British territory?

These few alone are serious questions, demanding the immediate attention of our diplomatists. It will be too late to do so when the Germans are in force en permanence in India's Southern extremity, carrying on intrigues through and throughout India, in conjunction with their great friends the Muscovites, determined rivals and enemies of the Briton in Asia.

The subject I have here broached is one, Mr. Editor, that undoubtedly is of great moment, calling for the prompt attention of our best statesmen. The press, likewise, should be up and doing; therefore do I trust that you, as an admitted authority on Indian affairs, will use your powerful influence, and that right speedily, ere it be too late.

Excuse the liberty I am taking in thus urging your notice to this momentous subject, and believe me to be, Sir, yours faithfully, Geo. J. Haly, Colonel.

Notices of Books.

A Student's Manual of the History of India. By Meadows Taylor, C.S.I., &c. Longmans and Co.: 1870.

In his preface to this compact and closely printed volume Colonel Taylor tells us how he has striven to supply a want much felt "among all classes of English people," the want, namely, of "a complete but easy history, acceptable and useful to all," of a country that was highly civilised and eminent for intellectual culture long before its present masters had emerged from barbarism. That such a want should still exist in face of the many popular histories that one can call to mind may seem surprising; but we readily admit that the accomplished author of the present volume has succeeded in producing the most complete and readable narrative, for its size, of any hitherto published. And it is no mere recooking of former histories, as any one may see by turning over the pages at random, or by a closer perusal of the opening chapters which describe the peoples of India, their religions, customs, modes of life, origin, and early history. Colonel Taylor to his own intimate knowledge of modern India has evidently added a close acquaintance with the fruits of Western inquiry into her ancient history. Under his guidance the student or the general reader may now boldly pierce the gloom that once shrouded the eight or nine centuries preceding the invasion of Darius. That the author can write pleasantly from a well-stored mind, his third chapter fully shows, while the fifth chapter on Caste and the sixth on the Hindu Religion illustrate alike the fulness of his knowledge and the breadth of his reasoning powers. His general accuracy is also remarkable in a work so comprehensive. There is a capital index to the volume, which by the way is brought down to the beginning of 1870.

Debrett's Illustrated Peerage and Baronetage for 1871. Two vols. Dean and Son.

The new issue of these useful and accurate books of reference continues to deserve the high character its predecessors have long since won. The volumes have been corrected down to the last day of 1870, so as to include the changes consequent on the death of Baron Walsingham, which took place on the 31st of December.

ARTILLERY ORGANISATION.

The Pioneer thinks that in the coming Artillery changes, and sooner or later great changes must come, we may reckon with as much certainty as satisfaction on the abolition of the brigade system. We will not weary our readers by showing up this system. Artillery officers well know how obnoxious and faulty it is, and there is no use in our explaining to others the faults of a moribund scheme. Suffice it to say that, ere the prorogation of the Parliament of 1871, we fully hope and expect to see the end of that monster of impracticability the "Royal Artillery Brigade System." With its exit we may hope to welcome the long-wished-for entry of the "Battery-the-unit" plan. Colonels of brigades will then become "colonels of districts," and brigade adjutants "district staff officers." Promotion in the non-commissioned ranks will go on by batteries instead of by brigades, and the "battery second captain" will be the "battery adjutant and quartermaster." It will, doubtless, astonish many second captains to hear that, probably in the course of the next twelve months, there may be something for them to do; but, once over their astonishment, they will be happy in the thought that the next edition of the Standing Orders of the regiment will contain their rank and detail their duties; the present edition, we believe, makes hardly any allusion to the second captain at all. Quash "the brigade system" and bring in the "battery-the-unit system," and all pettiness will right itself. It will then be found that the battery will be treated in time of peace with the same respect which all are extremely willing to give it in time of war.

THE BENGAL LAND CESS.

The Friend of India observes that the Cess Committee have recommended two forms of local taxation, a rate on land and a tax on houses. All persons, whether proprietors or ryots, who have any interest in the land are to contribute to the former; while persons occupying houses of Rs. 100 value and upwards are to be assessed for the latter. With regard to the land cess the zemindars and middlemen are to pay a rate of one pie in the rupee upon their profits, while the ryots are to be assessed at three pie in the rupee on their gross rental. The ryots will thus have to pay upon a much higher assessment than the proprietor class; and as they have further to pay three pie in the rupee instead of one pie they will have to contribute to the rate about five times as much as the zemindars and middlemen together. It is hardly necessary seriously to discuss so absurd a proposition. Neither Sir William Grey nor the Supreme Government are likely to sanction a proposal so iniquitously unfair. To say, as our correspondent "R. A." does, that tenants-at-will are "holders of a rateable property, namely the productive powers of the soil during their term of tenancy," is we venture to think a mistake. A tenant who hires a house from year to year has no property in the house; and when a tax is imposed upon house property it is levied not from the occupier but from the owner of the house. In the same way when a rate is imposed upon land it is the owner to whom the land belongs, and not the occupier, who has no property in the land, who should pay the rate. The great difficulty in Bengal is that there are so many owners, so many middlemen, with various rights of property, that it is no easy task fairly to apportion the rate between the various classes who are beneficially interested in the land. The Cess Committee propose that each zemindar and middleman shall be separately assessed by the collector upon the profits of his holding, or estate, and theoretically no plan could be fairer or less objectionable than this. But unfortunately the undertenures are so numerous and so small that it will be entirely beyond the collector's power separately to assess them all. Take for instance a single district. We learn from the Registrar General's last report that 15,000 permanent undertenures were created last year in Chittagong alone. There are we believe some 33,000 estates borne upon the public registry of that district; and if the creation of undertenures has been going on for any length of time at the rate of last year, there would be at the very lowest calculation some 200,000 undertenures. The amount which is annually spent in Chittagong upon roads is somewhat under Rs. 12,000; and is it reasonable to expect that the collector for this paltry sum should be called upon to make some 200,000 assessments? Clearly there must be some simpler method of reaching the land than the one proposed by the committee.

ANGLO-INDIANS AT HOME.

The Times of India observes that Lord Lawrence has never presided over a board so numerously constituted or of such a popular origin as the London Education Board, but he has presided over many councils, and had learnt how to deal with them. For our own part, we cannot help feeling some pride in this last instance of the use to which the Empire is glad to put our old Indian administrators; we are rejoiced to see that once again, when a capable man is wanted for a difficult post, England goes to the Indian Service to get him. It would be impossible for any shrewd observer not to take note of and to dwell upon the large amount of administrative capacity which lies waste in London and in other large towns, or even in some rural districts, in which retired Indian officers may chance to congregate, or, residentially, to "dwell apart." Men retire from Indian life in these days when they are just in the zenith of their efficiency. The age of juvenile prodigies is past; we have not in these times Cabinet Ministers, in their "Salad days," fresh from College. The best men of England at the present time are sexagenarians—or very close upon the respectable age of threescore,—whilst some are considerably beyond it. But many of our best Indian servants return to England at fifty, some before they have reached that age; and, unless they can get into Parliament or into the Council of India, how utterly they are thrown away! There is a quarter of a century's good work in them, but they do not know how to bestow it—how to utilise it. They have been thinking, perhaps, of the luxury of repose, but when the time comes, they think it very tedious. Idleness is not found to be as delightful in the present as in the prospect. So every one goes in for any kind of work that he can get, many endangering the savings of a life by becoming directors of public companies. They have an irresistible appetence for work of some kind or other. Men who feel that they have it in them do not like to stagnate. It is hard for a good workman to feel that he is thrown away. There are not many new careers open to our retired Indian administrators in England. We are always glad, therefore, when the wealth of ability which India sends home every year finds, in some instances, profitable employment. But we fear that as time advances, our Indian administrators will leave their Indian work at an earlier period than in the old time, and that we shall hear of more and more unoccupied men, "wasting their time in the strenuous idleness" of club gossip, or something not much more profitable. A "retired Indian" used to be an old man; he is often now little more than a young one.

VICEREGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

The Council met at Government House yesterday (January 6). A large number of members were present.

The Hon. Mr. Stephen moved for leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to pleaders, mukhtars, and revenue agents. He said that his object in introducing the present Bill was to get rid of the different Acts and regulations in which the substance of the present law was contained. Under existing law a pleader was able to make any contract he chose with his client, and the contract was enforced by a regular suit. This state of things was open to grave objection, and it was the clients who suffered most. The learned member was of opinion that a bargain between a lawyer and his client should not be made according to the ordinary principles of free trade, but should be under the supervision of a court officer. He then spoke of the law on this subject as prevalent in Great Britain, and also of the great hardships that clients are put to in this country from the extortions and oppressions of dishonourable and unscrupulous pleaders and others. After some further remarks, he alluded to a section in the new Bill, which imposes a heavy fine on a pleader who practises when he is suspended by a court. Some suspended pleaders were in the habit of going to the mofussil, and there renewing their business. The present Bill aimed, among other things, at the suppression of such fraudulent practices. The motion was put and carried.

Colonel the Hon. R. Strachey introduced the Bill to facilitate the construction of works of public utility from local and municipal funds, and moved that it be referred to a select committee with instructions to report in a month. He said that in March last, when he asked leave to introduce the Bill, he explained the object of the present measure; but as there was a long interval between that time and the present, he would shortly state the object of the present Bill. Its object was to facilitate to the utmost the prosecution of local works of improvement. For such a purpose the Government would make advances which should be repaid in a certain term of years. The local Governments would have at their disposal a certain maximum sum, which should be applied in making advances, the power of extending the advances to new objects being limited by the obligation not to exceed that sum, so that when the whole authorised sum was once advanced, the earlier loans must be paid off before fresh ones could be made. Then, as it was not desirable to give the local Governments independent powers of borrowing, the Supreme Government would lend the money. The funds at the disposal of the local bodies would be security for the repayment of the loan. The local bodies would also have power to authorise loans. The learned member was of opinion that many private persons would offer loans for such a purpose on better terms than the Government. After some further remarks, explanatory of the several parts of the new Bill, a slight discussion took place. One member suggested the advisability of referring the Bill for the consideration of the Financial Department. The learned mover said that when he asked leave to introduce the Bill, it was under the consideration of that department, and that no advantage would be gained if it were referred again, only there would be additional delay. The motion was then put and carried.

The Hon. Mr. Cockerell presented the report of the select committee on the Bill to consolidate the law relating to cattle-trespass; also the report of the select committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the district and subordinate courts in Bengal.

THE DEATH OF SIR H. DURAND.

At five in the afternoon (Dec. 31) he left camp to inspect the Tank fort and to visit the town and gardens of the Nawab outside the walls. After inspecting the fort, the Lieutenant-governor mounted his elephant, on which he invited the Nawab of Tank to seat himself. The Lieutenant-governor proceeded towards the town, and at the gate was asked by the Nawab whether he would not first see the gardens, to which he agreed, and having passed through them, returned to the town, which is a small poverty-stricken place, surrounded with a mud wall. The entrance consists of a double covered gateway, one door being at right angles to the other, and the enclosure having buildings above it. The first gateway was about 13 feet in height and was just able to admit the elephant without the persons in the howdah having to stoop. But within the enclosure the ground rose rapidly, and the height of the second doorway was not more than 10½ feet, or not sufficient to allow the elephant with an empty howdah to pass. The Nawab of Tank states that he told the Lieutenant-governor more than once on approaching the entrance that the gateway was too low to admit an elephant, but this Sir Henry Durand could not have heard. Half-way through the enclosure it became evident that there was not room to pass, and Sir Henry Durand called to the mahout to take care. The man seeing there was barely space to turn round tried to force the elephant to sit, but at this moment the top of the howdah touched the centre beam of the enclosure; the elephant feeling a pressure on his back stepped quickly forward. His driver being unable to stop him, the howdah caught the lintel of the doorway, and Sir Henry Durand was thrown violently out, falling on his face on a low mud wall just outside the gate. The Nawab of Tank was struck by the howdah and the beam, and fell back in the howdah, but was not thrown out. Sir Henry Durand was taken up insensible, with blood pouring from his mouth and nose, and was placed on a bed and carried into camp, distant about a mile and a half. Thither the Nawab was also brought. . . .

Some hope was at first entertained that the paralysis might pass away, being only the result of the shock of the fall, and that no dangerous or fatal injuries had been caused; but about 2 P.M. the Lieutenant-Governor became rapidly weaker; his breathing became more difficult, and it was evident that he was sinking fast. The medical men considered it right to tell him that there was no hope of his recovery, and that he probably would not live out the night. This announcement did not appear to disturb Sir Henry Durand, whose first thought was of his work and of sending information to the Government of India of his state. About eight in the evening he died without pain, having been conscious till within a short time of his death.

The cause of death appears to have been fracture of one or more of the vertebræ immediately below the neck, caused by the fall on to the low wall by the gate. It does not appear that Sir Henry struck the beam, and, with the exception of a slight wound on his head caused in the fall, there was no mark or bruise on his body. The Nawab of Tank was severely bruised and one of his ribs was broken, but he is reported to be progressing favourably

On the 2nd of January the camp halted at Tank, and on the three following days marched to Dera Ismail Khan, distant forty-two miles, by Hatala and Kuiga.

THE FUNERAL.

The funeral of Sir Henry Durand took place at Dera Ismail Khan at 4 P.M., on Thursday, the 5th January. All the troops in the station, two regiments of native infantry, one regiment of native cavalry, a battery of artillery, and a detachment of a British regiment were under arms.

The road from the camp to the Church door was lined by the troops of the station, viz., the 2nd Punjab Cavalry, the 1st Sikh Infantry, and 5th Punjab Infantry. The funeral procession left the camp precisely at four P.M. It included representatives of many native chiefs.

Under special authority of H.E. the Viceroy, fifty-nine minute guns were fired. The funeral service was read by the Rev. W. M. Lethbridge, Chaplain of Dera Ismail Khan, assisted by the Rev. D. Brodie, of the Church Missionary Society. The Misses Durand, daughters of the deceased, were present during the service at the grave. At Lahore, as a mark of respect to the deceased, all public offices were closed during the day, and at the time of the funeral minute guns were fired from the citadel.

The coffin was taken on a gun carriage, draped with black, from the camp to the church. The British detachment was formed up the centre street of the camp to salute the coffin on its appearing, and to precede it in file with reversed arms, preceded by the band of the 1st Sikhs playing the Dead March. The Chaplain met the procession at the gate, when the British detachment formed a street inside that of the native troops. On the termination of the service at the grave the brigade presented arms.

Minute guns, equal in number to the years of age of the Lieutenant-Governor, were fired during the ceremony; the sanction of His Excellency the Viceroy, which is necessary to such salute, having been received just as the funeral procession left camp.

The grave of Sir Henry Durand is at the east end of the Dera Ismail Khan church, and is the only grave in the church enclosure. —Pioneer.

STATION TALK.

DUGSHAIE, Dec. 29.—Since my last nothing of any importance has taken place. We have had one or two slight showers of rain during the past week, but no snow has as yet fallen. It is excessively cold just now. Our Protestant clergyman, the Rev. F. W. Homer, left the station for Saugor, after a residence here of about two years. Mrs. Homer has, for some time back, I regret to say, been an invalid, the hills apparently not agreeing with her; so it is hoped the change to milder regions will be attended with happy results. Mr. Homer's successor is the Rev. D. P. Williams, M.A., Chaplain of Delhi, and he will probably be here by the end of this month. I might as well add that the remaining portion of the 85th Regiment marched in on the evening of the 17th inst., under the command of Colonel Appleyard. The regiment having at last arrived and settled down to the ordinary routine of business, let us hope there will be no lack of public amusement, such as theatricals, &c.

CHINSURAH, Dec. 31.—The ci-devant member of the Department Public Works, Mr. John Richard Horniman, who occupied a certain space in my last letter, was apprehended at Chandernagore on Christmas-day by the French authorities, and lodged in the local prison. The subsequent afternoon he was removed to the Hooghly jail under the custody of a European inspector and constable, where he is doomed to witness the birth of the New Year in meditating how best to establish his innocence. He has to account for somewhere about Rs. 5,000, the misappropriation of which is charged against him. The authorities at Maunbhoom have been communicated with regarding his arrest, and as soon as matters are arranged he will leave for that place. He is a man of about thirty years of age, a European by birth, and of agreeable speech and manners. My authority further adds that the delicate position in which he is placed seemed not materially to affect his spirits, though it cast a shade over his countenance. I really do not know what degree of credit to attach to a rumour which has just reached my ears to the effect that the depôt is to leave this for the Ditch to-morrow morning, and that all the thousand-and-one preparations incident on a move have already been gone through. So many conflicting reports have of late been bruited abroad regarding this same depôt; some say that it is to be removed to Dum-Dum, others that it is to be knocked on the head altogether, some this, and some that, that it has become a difficult thing to determine where to draw the line. So that in the absence of any pucca kubber which may be relied on, I would recommend your readers, at least those of them who may be interested in the matter, to take the present information cum grano salis.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

CIVIL.—Since Mr. Whitley Stokes, the marvellously accurate and circumspect Secretary of the Legislative Council, is about to proceed to England for a year, it is well (remarks the Pioneer) that so able a substitute has been found for him as Mr. H. S. Cunningham.

NORMAL SCHOOLS.—The Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, finds it difficult to procure female teachers for the new Normal School established at Egmore. He intends employing two or more masters to do the work till competent female teachers can be obtained.

RAILWAYS.—The statement that the Government of India has sanctioned the commencement of the Furruknugger branch of the Rajpootana Railway is now said to be premature. The plans and estimates are not yet completed, and the recent decision regarding the gauge of the railway will possibly cause further delay.

RED TAPE.—"And the men of Gotham called their wisest together to decide how the apples were got inside the pudding." We are strongly reminded of the above by a military order which has been lately promulgated, directing three Colonels to inquire into, and report upon, the condition of a—magic lantern! A fact—and in Allahabad too.—Pioneer.

THE RAJAH OF PUTTIALAH.—His Highness the Maharajah of Puttialah, according to the Calcutta Examiner, is expected in Calcutta some time in the first week of February. The object of this visit to the metropolis of India is that his Highness' investment with the insignia of the Star of India may be made with due splendour. The ceremony will take place in the marble hall of Government house.

JUDICIAL.—Unless we are wrongly informed, another of the barrister judges of the High Court is shortly about to take leave of absence for some time, and in this case the leave has been well earned, for, since his arrival in India, Mr. Justice Phear has been indefatigable in his work, not only on the bench, but for the general improvement of the country and its inhabitants.—Englishman.

NATIVE PLEADERS.—The Pioneer learns that the Government of the North-Western Province has wisely recognised the inefficiency of the native pleaders in criminal prosecutions, and that all joint and assistant magistrates having the full powers of magistrate have been empowered to act as prosecutors on behalf of Government in trials before the Courts of Session.

ADMINISTRATIVE.—The Supreme Government has ruled that when an officer, though allowed by the Government or head of department which he serves to retain a lien upon an appointment, ceases to draw any portion of the salary or allowances of the appointment, another officer may be appointed substantively for a time only, and may draw the full pay of the office while so temporarily holding the substantive appointment.

HORSE DISEASE AT MEERUT.—We regret to hear that the fatal horse disease which made its appearance in the form of typhoid fever amongst the artillery and cavalry horses at Meerut last autumn has again shown itself at that station. The stables of the E F and C A batteries of artillery have suffered, and on the 2nd inst. the malady broke out amongst the horses of the 20th Hussars. Altogether about twenty horses have fallen victims.—Daily Examiner, Jan. 5.

EASTERN BENGAL.—Although much present suffering has been caused by the inundations of the past year in Eastern Bengal, there is good reason to believe, says a contemporary, that the country has on the whole benefited thereby. Tanks and hollows long unreached by the annual rises have been filled; many water-courses have been scoured out; everywhere a rich deposit has been left, and it is now reported that in some places the rice crop is exceptionally luxurious. Nature works her own compensations.

Utilising Manure.—Mr. Gilbert Hickey's scheme for the utilisation of manure is to receive the serious attention of the Supreme Government. A commission, consisting of the Officer Commanding at Dum Dum, the Senior Medical Officer, the Sanitary Commissioner of Bengal, the Chemical Examiner to Government, and a member yet to be named by Mr. Hickey, have been appointed to inquire into and report upon the experiments now in progress at Dum-Dum.

Mr. Shaw.—We regret to learn from the Lahore paper that Mr. Shaw, the traveller who accompanied Mr. Forsyth to Yarkund, has for some time been lying at Rawul Pindee seriously ill with rheumatic fever. On Mr. Forsyth's return south he left the party about the Changchenmo pass with the view of exploring the route over the frozen Shayok. He suffered much on his exploration of the Shayok, down which he pushed through the Nubra valley and pass to Leh.

Marine.—It is rumoured that considerable changes in the Marine Department are in contemplation by Government. If reports are to be believed, says the Indian Daily News, a separate Secretariat, under the Government of India, in the Marine Department, is to be created, and that an officer of the Royal Navy is to be appointed to the proposed office of Secretary. The same system of work which prevailed during the time of the late Marine Board is again to be introduced in the department.

Opium.—Though the prices realised at the last opium sale, says the Englishman, show a slight fall as compared with those of December, they still compare favourably with the result of the January sale of last year. The average price realised by Behar opium at the December sales has remained almost constant for the last three years, the extremes being Rs. 1,178 and Rs. 1,181. Last year, however, the price fell from Rs. 1,181 in December (1869) to Rs. 1,116 in January; whereas this year the fall has been only from Rs. 1,179 to Rs. 1,151. This shows that prices are not only higher but steadier now than in the same month last year.

Rajpootana.—The Bombay Guardian learns that the Lieut. Governor of the N. W. P. has recommended the Supreme Government to take over Ashapura talao, the work executed by the Rajpootana missionaries to keep alive thousands who would have starved otherwise, and to reimburse the missionaries for all the expenditure sustained by them. This is the least that Government can do under the circumstances. It is matter of thankfulness that in their self-denying labours among the fever-stricken, no one of the missionaries lost his life; but more than one lost health and strength; the expenditure of funds was the least of the sacrifices made by them.

Heat Apoplexy.—The Sanitary Commissioner of the Punjab traces the prevalence of heat apoplexy among European soldiers in India in a great measure to three causes. These are:—crowding in canteens, sleeping within doors in the dry hot weather, and crowding in church in the heat of the day. These objections he would remove by serving out the grog and beer to the men in the open air, giving them the option of sleeping in the open air, and changing the hour of morning service to sun-rise. The first two of these suggestions have been made and carried into effect before now, and, Dr. De Renzy says, with very successful results. As for the third, if thought desirable, there should be no difficulty in having it also carried out.

The Income-tax.—According to the Examiner the income-tax is to be retained, but at the rate of one per cent. "Such is the present determination—a determination there are no grounds for thinking will have been abandoned by budget day. A certain continental nation has got itself into dire difficulties because of its proclivity to go to war for an idea; and the retention of the income-tax will be an instance of the Indian Financial Administration deliberately electing to remain unpopular, and contemned, rather than surrender the idea that the permanent retention of an opressive tax, the impossibility of equitably working which has been made manifest—is necessary to the safety of the British power in India! This is the only ground on which a reduced income-tax can now be attempted to be defended. The money it will bring in is not essential to the conservation of an equilibrium, and if it even were, a larger amount might be raised in various other ways without being felt by the people."

The Finance Minister.—Sir Richard Temple, says the Examiner, was not offered the Lieutenant-Governorship of the Punjab, and had it been offered to him he would not have accepted it. "For some little time back it has been known in the quarters most immediately concerned that the Financial Minister has made up his mind not to accept any Lieutenant-Governorship, and it may have been that it was this knowledge which prevented Sir Richard from being asked to go to Lahore. The Minister holds his present post under warrant from the Crown, and professes, we believe, to have not the slightest desire to give it up. There are a good three years of Sir Richard's term of office unexpired, and before then Madras and Bombay must have become vacant, even allowing Lord Napier an extra year in the former presidency. To Madras Sir Richard Temple would willingly go, and we are half inclined to believe that there exists something like an understanding that his claim to Madras will be held to be a good one whenever Lord Napier quits the government of that presidency."

Another Job.—The Rangoon Gazette states that Colonel Fraser has discovered a scandalous job in connection with the barracks at Fort Blair. They were originally designed by an engineer, who thought that their foundations should be carried twenty feet below the surface of the ground. In due course that official was succeeded by another who imagined that six inches would be a sufficient depth of foundation. The result is that the end of the barracks which were built by the latter officer is in process of dissolution, and the entire building is pronounced unsafe.

West Berar Salt Springs.—Mr. Lyall, Commissioner of West Berar, has completed an interesting and useful Gazetteer of Berar, and some of his facts are curious. Of the salt wells of Akola he says that they are sunk into what is supposed to be "a kind of subterranean lake or reservoir of water, which extends more than fifty miles in length, and ten in breadth in the Akola district," and lies on both sides of the Purna river. The wells are dug about three or four feet in diameter, and to a depth of from ninety to a hundred and twenty feet, and are cased with wicker work. When the digger thinks that he is close to the water he gives warning to the men above to hold themselves in readiness to pull up the cradle. Then he strikes, and if the water is tapped it shoots up immediately to as high as fifteen or twenty feet, and of course any accident in the pulling would mean death to the digger. At this height the water—intensely salt water—remains and gives an inexhaustible supply of salt. Mr. Lyall believes also that Berar has a great future in coal mining. His Gazetteer is full of thought and careful observation.

Civil Service Leave Rules.—The Financial Member of the Governor-General's Council is said (according to the Indian Daily News) to have recorded a minute, in which he has expressed an opinion that at a time like the present, when the financial pressure of the State is so great, and when the heavy expenditure in every department of the service requires the serious attention of the Viceroy, it is necessary that the existing leave rules of the Covenanted Civil Servants, which have lately given them extended privileges, and which cause the Government a large expenditure, should be revised, and the privileges curtailed to a certain extent. It appears that under the new rules large numbers of officers proceed home and return more frequently than before. The hon. member is said to have requested the Secretary and the Under-Secretary to Government, in the Financial Department, to amend the leave rules. He is also said to be of opinion, if we are rightly informed, that a large number of military officers are now entertained in civil employ, and appear to be almost equal to the number of covenanted civil officers on the effective list. He does not object to the former being so entertained, but that, in some instances the amount of their salaries, including their military allowances, exceed the salaries of the covenanted civil officers holding similar appointments in the civil department.

Memorial of the late Sir H. Durand.—A meeting was held at Calcutta on Monday, 9th January, to consider the question of a memorial to the late Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab. The Bishop of Calcutta presided. There were present the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, the members of the Supreme and Legislative Councils, several Judges of the High Court, the secretaries to Government, Prince Gholam Mahomed, Raja Kali Krishna, Raja Rajendra Narain Deb Bahadoors, and many other influential members of the European and native community. The following resolutions were passed:—

1. Resolved.—That a general committee be formed, consisting of the gentlemen now present, with power to add to their number, for the purpose of taking the necessary steps, by collection of funds and otherwise, for the erection of a memorial to the memory of the late Sir Henry Durand, K.C.S.I. and C.B., and that the nature of the memorial be determined hereafter in communication with the subscribers, when the probable amount of subscriptions is ascertained.

2. Resolved.—That a working committee be formed, consisting of the gentlemen named below, with power to add to their number; and that, under general direction of the general committee, the working committee be empowered to take such measures as they may think best calculated to secure the object of this meeting:—

The Hon. General Norman, C.B., Raja Kali Krishna Bahadoor, the Hon. J. P. Norman, the Hon. J. R. Bullen Smith, the Hon. Colonel Strachey, C.S.I., the Hon. David Cowie, R. B. Chapman, Esq., C. U. Aitchison, Esq., C.S.I., Moonshi Ameer Ali Khan Bahadoor, Baboo Romanath Tagore, Dr. Fayrer, C.S.I., Major the Hon. E. R. Bourke, W. Pirie Duff, Esq., Baboo Digumber Mitter, Manockjee Rustomjee, Esq., Major Williams, Baboo Khetter Mohun Chatterjee, Elias S. Gubhoy, Esq.; W. Pirie Duff, Esq., and Baboo Khetter Mohun Chatterjee, secretaries.

The first meeting of the sub-committee was held at the Foreign-office the next afternoon.

Imports.—Calcutta, Jan. 11.—After last mail the market opened with a fair demand for grey goods and yarns, and for some days a considerable business was done at slightly better rates. Towards the end of the week the tone of the market became quieter; dealers seemed inclined to content themselves with the extent of their late purchases, and unwilling to further enter the market unless on more favourable terms. The feeling at closing is quiet, but there is no anticipation of lower prices. Grey Shirtings: The demand has been principally for the lighter makes, owing to Thibet, though prices of all weights have equally advanced. The wide widths are neglected, and prices have a weakening tendency. Grey Jaconettes: Low to medium qualities of 39-inch are still freely saleable at last mail's quotations. Mushapollams and T-Cloths are very quiet. Mulls: 44-inch grey are quieter, but white are in fair request. Grey Twist: A large business was done in 40's at low rates, during the past few days the demand has subsided, and the market closes quiet. Coloured Twist: Turkey Red has slightly improved, but fancy colours continue very quiet at low prices.

Exports.—Calcutta, Jan. 11.—Saltpetre: About 300 tons of Calcutta-washed Saltpetre have changed hands during the week at prices ranging from two or three annas higher than our last quotations. The stock is about 3,000 bags of 10 to 16 per cent. refraction. Rice: There is some inquiry for Table kinds, and some transactions have been made at Rs. 3 to 3-4. A moderate business has transpired in Ballum kinds at prices ranging from Rs. 2-4 to 2-6. In Moonghy we have heard of no transaction to report, owing to the paucity of stock. Linseed: As the arrivals from the interior have been stopped, owing to the crop of the last year having been exhausted, we have heard of very few transactions done during the week for shipment to America, but there is an active demand for this article for shipment both to Great Britain and America. Rapeseed is in good demand, both for shipment and local consumption, but business has been stopped, owing to the paucity of stock both on the spot as well as in the interior. Quotations are Rs. 3-12 to 4-6. Poppyseed: Since the date of our last we have heard of some transactions having been done at Rs. 3-13 per maund. Teelseed: During the week we have heard of no transaction to report, owing to the scarcity of supplies. Jute: During the week a moderate business has transpired at prices ranging from Rs. 3-12 to 3-8. There is some inquiry for loose Jute. Raw Silk: During the week about 100 maunds of common Radnagore have been sold at prices ranging from 13-8 to 14-6 per factory seer, and ten maunds of Nimtollah have changed hands at 18-0 to 18-8, and about eight maunds of Cossimbazar at 13-8 to 14. There is very little business in Jungypore; only ten or twelve maunds have found buyers at Rs. 13-12 to 14. Silk Piece Goods: Same as before; stock about 12,000 pieces.

Madras.

Medical.—Dr. M. C. Furnell, Officiating Ophthalmic Surgeon of the General Hospital, will, we understand, relieve Dr. C. M. Duff, surgeon to his Excellency the Governor, with medical charge of the body guard, during the absence on leave of Dr. J. Miller, or until further orders. Dr. Duff will act for Dr. Tribe, who is going home, as Deputy Inspector-General of the Nagpore Force.—Madras Mail.

Girls' School.—A school for the education of high caste Hindu girls is to be opened under the patronage of Lady Napier at Tanjore Fort. A young lady is expected to come shortly to undertake the superintendence of the above.

Controller of Military Accounts.—Colonel Gillilan, who is acting as Controller of Military Accounts, has been recommended for the post to the Government of India, who alone have the disposal of the appointment. It is however rumoured that Colonel Hill, an officer of the Finance Department of Bengal, will succeed the late Colonel Drury. —Madras Times.

The Madras Railway.—The traffic receipts for the week ending 31st December amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs §59,489-1-0, and for goods, &c., to Rs. 75,110-8-11, making together Rs. 134,599-9-11, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 171-14-5. During the corresponding week in 1869 the receipts were Rs. 105,777-8-11, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 149-9-10.

Mysterious Disappearance.—The mystery which attends the disappearance of Mr. R. Sutherland, an engineer in Burmah, and the son of Colonel Sutherland, for a long time Political Agent for Rajpootana, has not after all been cleared up. About a month ago the Rangoon papers reported his return and explained his temporary absence. We thought the matter, therefore, at an end. It appears, however, that our contemporaries were premature, for (according to the latest Rangoon Times) Mr. Sutherland, who had had some contract work to execute in the interior, and left Rangoon for that purpose, has never been heard of since. He was last seen at the village of Gyobyo, and was said to have been heard of at Thongzai; but all that is certain is that he has never written to his family or returned to his home. The Rangoon Times urges the local authorities to institute a search for the missing gentleman.

Very Curious.—The settlement of the debts of Prince Azeem Jah have brought to light a very curious circumstance. It seems that when the claims against the late Nawab of the Carnatic were filed, the Advocate-General, Mr. S. Smyth, and the Government Solicitor, Mr. Boyson, opposed certain items, and by this opposition saved a very large sum to the Government. Mr. Smyth was accordingly rewarded with Rs. 50,000, and Mr. Boyson with Rs. 30,000. Now, however, Mr. Roberts, the Commissioner for the Settlement of the Claims against his Highness the Prince of Arcot, has admitted these formerly rejected claims, and they will be finally paid in full. Now as the denial of certain claims was considered twelve years ago sufficient reason for rewarding Messrs. Smyth and Boyson, it seems to follow that the admission of them should suffice as reason for punishing Mr. Roberts.—Pioneer.

SURAT, Jan. 7.—Last scene of all in this eventful history. The Governor, determined to "do" Surat to its uttermost depths, rose early, and drove to the English and Dutch cemeteries, just outside the Kattergaum gate of the city. It is generally supposed, as I believe with justice, that the wish on the part of the early English chiefs to shine in the eyes of their Mussulman compeers, both in their lives and after their death, was the principal reason for the practice of erecting the magnificent and ostentatious mausoleums which are crowded into the very small space about which I am now writing. And not only did they wish to overawe their rivals in magnificence by the exhibition of all the novelties of Western civilisation, but also, to judge from the architecture of the majority of the tombs, it was their design to beat them out of the field in their own arts, for no one, without reading the inscriptions and epitaphs, could imagine that there was any connection between the race which lies beneath these ponderous edifices, and the "rude forefathers" that modestly slumber in an English churchyard. The chief lion of the cemetery is the elaborate monument to the brothers George and Christopher Oxinden, or Oxenden. I used the epithet "ponderous" just now with reference to the tombs in this cemetery, but I must, on reflection, withdraw that expression when speaking of two of these monuments, amongst which the Oxenden tomb stands pre-eminent. The lower story contains the memorial slab of Christopher Oxenden, placed there by his brother, and consists of a domed chamber, at at each corner of which a lofty pinnacle has been erected. Above this is a second dome, cut open, so to speak, in the shape of a cross, something like an orange-peel basket; two turret staircases lead up to the summit, from which a good view is obtained of the other tombs of the cemetery, over which it towers by several feet. I believe the height of the entire monument is forty feet. Adjacent to the Oxendens' tomb there is another one similar in design, but bearing no inscription; it is, however, supposed by the learned to be the resting-place of Gerald Angier. The Bernard Wyche and Annesley tombs are well worth visiting. It may be remarked that in both these cases English pride in "family" predominated over the feeling of congruity in architecture on the part of the friends who interred these two chiefs; for a palpable and respectable coat of arms gleams amongst the ornamented frontages of the Mahometan structures. I was sorry to observe so many signs of negligence in repairing, or, indeed, in preserving these tombs, many of which are in a woful state of dilapidation, and a considerable number also have been bereft of any marble tablet or ornamental stone they may once have possessed, which now, I suppose, does duty as grindstone or washing table in some distant quarter of the town, over which the person it commemorates used to lord it in Oriental pomp, far from imagining that his memory should ever be preserved in flour or soap-suds. In another part of the cemetery there is an interesting collection of more modern tombs, some of which are as attractive from their simplicity as their neighbours are from the opposite cause. These are situated in a retired nook which several huge trees "high over-arched embower." One of the trees is overgrown by one of the largest creepers it has ever been my luck to see, the stem of which looks, from a short distance, more like a thirty-foot cable than a plant in its natural condition. Underneath the larger trees grow numbers of flowering shrubs, and somewhat apart from the rest the "slender cocoa's drooping crown of plumes" rears itself in solitary grace. Not far from the English cemetery is another enclosure consecrated by being the resting-place of the Dutch leaders in Surat. The tombs are in the same style, and nearly in the same state of disrepair as those I have just mentioned. His Excellency was conducted through the ground, and all the principal objects worth noticing were pointed out to him by his competent cicerone, Mr. Hope. The rival of Oxendens' tomb in the Dutch cemetery is that of Baron von Reede. This magnificent relic (for it is now little more than a ruin of its former self) has a double cupola, and is adorned with frescoes and wood-carving, similar to that to be seen in the loftier houses in the Borah and Parsee quarters of Surat. I must here mention that in the inscription to the memory of von Reede the name "Bombay" is written with only a capital letter, whilst Cochin and Surat are honoured with the respect due to proper names. The Governor, not yet satiated with his "meditations amongst the mighty dead," expressed his desire to visit the resting-place of the "Borahs" or moollas of the Dandi sect of Shia Mussulmans. Their tombs are in the quarter named Jhampa, and close to them are a mosque and the moollas' residence. One of the two mausoleums is larger than the other. It is, I believe, the more modern. The smaller one, however, contains the greater number of sarcophagi. Only the relations and dependants of moollas are allowed to be buried here, and even amongst them the privilege is bestowed with circumspection. The domes of these two buildings are gilt, and rise about thirty-four feet from the ground. The tombs inside are of different materials, some being of marble, others only of chunam. I hear the former are those of the moollas themselves, and are also distinguished from the others by a covering of white muslin over the usual silk wrapper. There are five of these tombs. The huge chandeliers suspended from the two domes are only lighted on the occasion of a moolla's decease.—Times of India Correspondent.

BARODA, Jan. 11.—The original programme, which fixed the departure of H. E. the Governor for Wednesday, the 11th, was not altered, and, as recounted below, H. E. left about 5 P.M. by special train for Ahmedabad. Had it been at all feasible, we believe he would gladly have postponed his departure for one day, with the view of enjoying some more shooting; but important State duties, and other arrangements which were dependent on his movements, necessitated his departure on the actual day. Previous to his leaving, however, H. E. had an opportunity of witnessing some elephant and rhinoceros fighting—a sight well worth seeing, and only to be met with at some of the large Courts in India. Twelve o'clock was the hour fixed for the "tumasha," and punctual to time the carriages containing his Excellency and the principal residents and visitors in camp drew up at the door of the building leading to the arena. Here he was as usual met by H.H. the Gaekwar and conducted through a quaint old court-yard, up some steps on to a balcony which overlooked the battle-field. To those who had not seen a tumasha of this kind before, the sight must have been most imposing. Thousands and thousands of natives lined the walls and high ground all around the place; the spear and javelin men, together with the wrestlers and "matadores," stood immediately below the Gaekwar's balcony awaiting with anxious eyes the signal from H.H. to commence; and lastly, the huge combatants themselves picketed at opposite ends of the arena, eyeing each other with fierce and bloodshot eyes and seemingly anxious for the fray. Two splendid elephants had been selected for the encounter—one, a fine old tusker, was left to take care of himself, the other, a somewhat smaller one with scarcely any tusks, was ridden by a mahout. So quiet and full of anxious expectation was the enormous crowd, that a pin might have been heard to drop as the elephants, upon a given signal from the Gaekwar, were let loose and gradually approached each other. The first charge was so well arranged that it took place exactly in front of the stand. It was a grand sight to see the mighty beasts when within a few yards of each other make the first rush, bringing their heads together with a crash that seemed as if it must smash in their forcheads. For a few moments it was hard to say which would gain the first advantage, but after a sharp tussle, in which some very severe prods and bites were given and received, the smaller elephant, urged on by his mahout, and doubtless gaining confidence therefrom, pushed away his antagonist and drove him forcibly into a corner of the arena close to the stand. Here he proceeded to make an example of him, and it was some time before the spearmen and matadores could draw off the conqueror's attention; eventually, however, they succeeded in doing so, and as he turned away to pursue his tormentors his vanquished foe took the opportunity of paying off a few old scores and gave him some very nasty prods in an undignified part of his body. After one or two more charges, the elephants were then separated, hobbled, and led out of the arena. The next fight was a very good one. A single elephant "must" and very viciously disposed was next let loose, and amused himself for some minutes by pursuing his tormentors, who were goading him on all sides, but who managed very cleverly to keep out of harm's way. As soon as he had been badgered up to the proper pitch a sowar, mounted on a particularly pretty horse, evidently a thorough-bred "Katty," came on the scene. The elephant no sooner saw him than, forsaking his minor foes, he pursued the horse and his rider in real earnest. It was a beautiful sight to watch the proceeding. The sowar, who evidently was an old hand at it, and seemed to enjoy the fun, allowed the elephant almost to catch him, at one time letting him come so close as actually to touch him with his trunk. The gallant little horse entered well into the dangerous excitement of the game, and the splendid way in which he was turned and twisted about elicited shouts of admiration from the crowd. Next after this came the rhinoceros fight, which, unfortunately, as far as fighting was concerned, proved rather a failure, but excited roars of laughter from the ludicrous positions and antics the brutes put themselves into during the engagement. On being led into the arena they both were coaxed up in front of the stand, and no sooner saw each other than they both came to a dead halt, and after staring at each other for a few seconds commenced to approach cautiously, very much in the same way as a dog stalks a squirrel. One of the would-be combatants, however, apparently thinking discretion the best part of valour, turned tail and cantered off to the other end of the arena. The other one simply remained where he was. The fugitive was again brought back and confronted with his enemy, and after a few gentle reminders on the "raw" from a spear they then closed with each other, but after a short but sharp tussle the same beast again ran away. This was repeated some half-a-dozen times with similar results, and then the tumasha was ended. The only thing was that we were afforded an opportunity of seeing how these formidable brutes use their horns and tusks in warfare, and what a fearful thing a fight à outrance must be between two in their savage state.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Imports.—Bombay, Jan. 14.—The market has been marked by an absence of inquiry in all descriptions of imports, except metals, in which there has been unusual activity at advanced rates. Grey Goods: During the entire week the market has continued dull, with no change in prices. For Shirtings there is a moderate demand; about 1,800 pieces 39-inch 4¼ lbs. have been sold at Rs. 3-4; for 6¼ lbs. 1,000 pieces were taken off at Rs. 3-6; in 6 lbs., about 9,300 pieces brought Rs. 4-0½ to 4-3½; of 7 lbs., about 12,000 pieces realised Rs. 4-10½ to 4-13½; about 22,000 pieces 8½ lbs. changed hands at Rs. 5-10½ to 6; about 500 pieces 9 lbs. fetched Rs. 6-4. Bleached Goods also continue dull; the sales which have taken place during the week are as follows, viz.:—About 740 pieces Shirtings, at Rs. 7-4 to 8-0; about 1,000 pieces Jaconets, at Rs. 2-9 to 3-12; and about 1,000 pieces Mulls, at Rs. 2-10 to 3-2. Dyed and Printed Goods have also been dull; the only sale we have to report has been as follows, viz.:—About 5,000 pieces Blue, Orange, and White Prints, at Rs. 4-1 to 4-7. Turkey Red Goods ditto, sales as follows, viz.:—About 450 pieces Dandoras, at Rs. 5 to 4-1; and about 500 pieces Prints, at Rs. 8-8 to 9. Grey Yarns: The market has again been dull throughout the week, with a decline of ¾ to ½ anna per lb. The following are the sales which have taken place, viz.:—About 15 bales Mule No. 30, at 9½ annas; about 75 bales 40's, at 9⅝ to 10 annas; and 5 bales 60's, at 11 5-16 annas; 15 bales Water No. 20, at 9⅜ annas; 100 bales Water 30, at 10 annas; and 60 bales Turkey Red, at 20⅜ to 29 annas. Metals: The better feeling noticed in our report of the 7th inst. has continued during the week, and a further advance of Rs. 1 to 1½ per cwt. has taken place. Undermentioned are the sales which have transpired, viz.:—About 3,000 cwts. Copper Braziers, at Rs. 44 to 44-2; about 200 cwts. Copper Sheet, at Rs. 44; about 700 cwts. Yellow Metal Braziers, at Rs. 36-3 to 36-12; and about 327 candies Iron Swedish Bar, at Rs. 41-12.

Exports.—Bombay, Jan. 14.—Cotton: By the telegrams received during the week the Liverpool market has shown symptoms of weakness, and the price of Fair Dhollerah there has gradually declined to 63d., at which it stood on 11th January, the date of our latest message. Following the course of Liverpool the market here has also been weaker, and quotations may be taken at about Rs. 5 per candy lower all round. The total purchases made in Bombay for export amount to about 3,500 candies, among which there were—of Old Cotton, 660 candies of Dhollerah and Bhownuggur, at prices ranging between Rs. 175 and 190; 1,560 candies of Dharwar sawginned at Rs. 205, and 125 candies of Veraval at Rs. 170 to 175; and of New Cotton, 575 candies of Oomrawuttee, deliverable in February, at Rs. 192 to 194; 175 candies of Akote, at Rs. 204 to 206; and 100 candies of Hingunghaut, at Rs. 215½ to 220. The market closes quiet.

Carnatic Railway Company.—The annual general meeting of this company was held yesterday, at the offices, Moorgate-street; Sir Macdonald Stephenson in the chair. The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said that they would see that of the capital of £800,000 upwards of £650,000 had been paid up, that the company's agent and chief engineer had reached India and commenced their duties, that the surveys of the line were in a very advanced state, and that the works and stock of the open section were maintained in good order. It was, however, rather to the future than to the past that they had to direct especial attention, and to endeavour by judicious economy in the construction of the railway to so limit the first cost that the prospects of earning more than the guaranteed 5 per cent. might be improved. Mr. G. Norton, deputy chairman, seconded the motion for the adoption of the report, and it was agreed to unanimously, OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE DEATH OF SIR HENRY DURAND.

The following is the official report of the circumstances attending the death of the lamented officer:—

From T. H. Thornton, Esq., D.C.L., Secretary to Government, Punjab, to C. H. Aitchison, Esq., C.S.I., Secretary to the Government of India.

Foreign Department, Camp Tank, Jan. 1, 1871.

Sir,—My telegram of this day's date to the address of the Private Secretary to the Viceroy will have informed the Government of India of the serious accident which happened to Sir Henry Durand yesterday evening, the 31st ult. I have now the honour to report the particulars of this most lamentable occurrence.

2. At about five in the afternoon his Honour left camp for the purpose of visiting the outpost, garden, and town of Tank. Having inspected the outpost on foot, he proceeded, on one of the camp elephants, in a howdah, with the Nawab of Tank, a chuprassie being on the back seat. The son of the Nawab was in advance, on horseback, to show the way. On another elephant, on a seated pad, were Brigadier general Keyes, commanding the frontier force; Lieut. col. Graham, commissioner of the Derajat division; Col. Maclagan, R.E., secretary to Government, D.P.W.; Major Black, military secretary; and Lieut. col. Kennedy, commanding 2nd Punjab cav.

3. The Lieutenant governor having inspected the garden, proceeded to the entrance of the town. This consists of an outer gateway leading into a covered square enclosure, out of which a second gateway, at right angles to the first, leads into the main street. Both gateways are flat-topped, with wooden lintels. The outer gateway is of sufficient height to allow an elephant and howdah to pass; but the second gateway is considerably lower, and from the outer to the inner gateway the ground rises.

4. The Lieutenant governor's elephant passed without difficulty the outer gateway into the square enclosure, followed, at a distance of about thirty feet, by the second elephant. The officers on the second elephant saw that the second gateway appeared too low, and did not suppose that his Honour had any intention of passing through it. After a short pause, however, his Honour's elephant proceeded, and then, before any warning could be given, a crash of breaking howdah was heard as the elephant passed through the inner gate. The officers of the second elephant got down quickly, and found Sir Henry Durand on the ground, just beyond the inner gateway, lying on his face, with blood profusely streaming from his nose. The Nawab was still on the broken howdah, with his head thrown back on the back of the seat.

5. Sir Henry Durand was immediately conveyed on a charpoy to the camp. On the way he groaned heavily, and appeared quite insensible, but occasionally raised both arms a little, with a short rapid movement, towards his face. Dr. Skeen, the medical officer in charge of the camp, and Dr. Holmes, of the 1st Sikh infantry, were promptly in attendance, and it was discovered that Sir Henry Durand's lower extremities were paralysed, his arms partially so, and that there was a contusion on his head. After a short interval he was able to speak, but not connectedly. During the night his Honour dozed, and, towards morning, fully recovered his consciousness, and was able to take liquid nourishment.

6. At about nine o'clock this morning Dr. Courtney, civil surgeon of Dera Ismail Khan, who had been summoned over night, arrived, and the three medical officers held a consultation, and recorded a bulletin, copy of which is annexed.

7. The Nawab of Tank received a contusion on the back of the head and neck, and has had one of his ribs broken, but is not believed to be very severely injured.

8. The chaprassie on the back seat of the howdah can give no connected account of the occurrence, being himself struck on the head, and having no recollection of seeing what had happened to Sir Henry Durand and the Nawab. The mahout states that he was proceeding cautiously, being doubtful whether the height of the gate was sufficient to admit the passage of the elephant. Finding the ground rise, he tried hard to stop the elephant; but at that moment the howdah came in contact with the top of the gateway, or with a beam which supports the roof of the enclosure, between the two gateways, whereupon the elephant, being frightened, made a rapid movement forward, which it was impossible to control.

9. Two natives who were in the gateway at the time state that Sir Henry Durand, in trying to avoid being crushed by the lintel of the gateway, rolled off the howdah on to the side of the elephant, and thence fell forward, striking a low mud wall on the right of the gateway as he fell.

10. Sir Henry Durand himself is not in a state to be questioned minutely on the subject; but he has stated that, on seeing that the gateway was too low, he and the Nawab tried to crouch down in the howdah; but the howdah crushed in upon him, and he was thrown out upon his back.

11. Such are the details of the occurrence which it has been my painful duty to report. Long ere you receive this communication the telegraph will probably have made you acquainted with greater certainty of the probable result.—I have, &c.,

T. H. Thornton, Secretary to Government, Punjab.

To T. H. Thornton, Esq., Secretary to the Government, Punjab.

Dated Camp Tank, Jan. 1, 1871.

Sir,—We have the honour to report the fatal result of the accident met with yesterday by Sir Henry Durand, who died this evening, shortly before eight P.M.

We are of opinion that death was due to a severe injury of the lower cervical portion of the spinal cord, which resulted in almost complete palsy of all parts of the body, except the head and diaphragm.

The immediate cause of death was coma from failure of breathing, induced by paralysis of the respiratory muscles.

Sir Henry retained his faculties till within half an hour of his death.

A post-mortem examination was not made, it being thought unnecessary by the surgeons, and not desired by the family of the deceased.—We have the honour, &c., Sydney C. Courtney, Surgeon, 2nd Punjab Cav.

A. Skeen, M.B., Asst. surg., in med. charge of camp.

The New Light Field Gun for England.—The trial which has been made of the new experimental 16-pounder field-gun for range and accuracy has been so satisfactory—notwithstanding that it was carried on in half a gale of wind, and with powder which appears to have been wanting in uniformity—that we understand the manufacture of these guns will commence forthwith, and in the course of the spring or summer the re-armament of our field batteries with these weapons will commence. Even with a 3 lb. charge, the 16-pounder is a more powerful field-gun than any in Europe; but it is proposed to try it this week with a yet greater charge—3¼ lb., which will probably bring up the initial velocity to about 1,400 feet per second. On the occasion of the late trial of this gun some 25 lb. common shell were fired from it with 1½ lb. charges, with very fair results. It is likely, however, that a 20 lb. common shell will be preferred to the 25 lb. shell for occasions on which shell power is specially necessary. These are points of detail which will have to be worked out by the committee. The normal projectiles for this gun will weigh 16 lb., the normal charge will be 3 lb. or 3½ lb., and the gun will with either of these charges be a far more formidable field-piece than is at present possessed by any continental Power. The 16-pounder gun consists of a steel barrel, reinforced over the breech with coiled wrought iron on the Armstrong system—the wrought iron exterior being the practical expression of the want of confidence of the Royal Gun Factories in steel alone as a material for ordnance; the steel barrel, on the other hand, being adopted, as in the other Woolwich guns, to give a good hard interior surface to the bore. The bore is a little over sixty-eight inches long, the total length of the gun being seventy-eight inches. The calibre is 3 min. 6 deg., which some artillerists think a little large for a gun to throw a 16 lb. projectile, and for which they would prefer to substitute 3 min. 3 deg. The twist is one turn in 108 inches, the rifling consisting of three shallow grooves of the "Maxwell" form—a modification of the French groove. The weight of these guns will be 12 cwt., with a preponderance of about 10 lb.

Home.

SCINDE, PUNJAB, AND DELHI RAILWAY.—Up to the present date £1,182,430 has been paid to the Secretary of State for India on account of the recent issue of £2,000,000 additional capital of the Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Railway.

TROOPS FROM INDIA.—The 103rd (Royal Bengal Fusiliers) Infantry disembarked from the Indian troop relief steamship Crocodile yesterday alongside Portsmouth dockyard, and proceeded to West Cowes, Isles of Wight, in the Sprightly and another Government steamer, for Parkhurst.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £400,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 1st inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta £299,500, to Bombay £100,000, and to Madras £500. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 10½d. will receive about 9 per cent., and on Bombay at that rate about 32 per cent. Above in full.

MILITARY.—A report is afloat that every line regiment is in future to comprise three battalions—one (850 strong) for foreign service, one for home service (510), and one as a recruiting depot, which is to consist of the militia regiment of the county. The last will be officered by the present half-pay officers, all of whom have been written to and asked if they desire to serve. For the first year every militia regiment would be embodied, but after that only at certain intervals. Apropos of the augmentation of the Royal Engineers, we (Army and Navy Gazette) are informed that the promotions of the first captains to the rank of lieutenant-colonel will not be gazetted for the present. Fifteen lieutenants were advanced to the grade of second captain a fortnight ago as a first step towards the augmentation, but, as regards the further carrying out of the decision of the War-office, difficulties stand in the way.

INDIAN EXCHANGE RATES.—If we may believe the statement of a contemporary, the India Government will, on and after the 1st of April next, fix the rate of exchange of family remittances and money transmitted by the Administrators-General at the rate of 1s. 11d. per rupee, instead of 2s. We cordially endorse his criticism "that this new tax of tenpence on every pound remitted by officers to their families at home through the Government is a mean piece of economy that will fail, from the irritation it will produce, in effecting any real saving." But what are the authorities to do do when they must pay a heavy price to the banks for bills remitted to this country? It is almost a pity our contemporary has not followed up his remarks by castigating the banks and agency houses for keeping up the rate of exchange at an exorbitant height. These establishments virtually make deductions from officers' remittances to Europe to the extent of from eight to ten per cent. on each transaction for bills payable on demand. Allowing a month for the money to be paid in India and received in England, these operations would appear to yield, at the latter rate quoted, a gross profit of 120 per cent. per annum. It would be well if the Duke of Cambridge and his advisers, in the interest of the Service, would turn their attention to this subject, and endeavour to induce Mr. Cardwell and the Duke of Argyll to make arrangements whereby officers in India might have the option of having a portion of their pay and allowances issued in this country, to meet disbursements for which provision must be made here.—Broad Arrow.

THE CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA V. DICKSON AND TATHAM.—This was an appeal from the Supreme Court of Ceylon by the bank against the respondent, Thomas Dickson, who had been a merchant at Colombo, in partnership with Christopher Tatham. An action was brought on a promissory note for £5,000 by the bank having a chief office in London, and the Supreme Court discharged Mr. Dickson from liability, and against that decision the bank appealed to her Majesty in Council. The case engaged the attention of the Committee the whole day. The rate of interest in the island of Ceylon claimed on the note was 9 per cent. The principal point raised was whether Mr. Dickson had proper notice of dishonour. There had been considerable litigation in the case, and witnesses had been examined in England under a commission. Lord Cairns, after consulting their Lordships, at the close of a long argument gave judgment, and, after divesting the case from its legal trammels, said the important question was whether presentation of the note was made within a reasonable time for payment. He dissected the proceedings in the District Court and in the Supreme Court, and said their Lordships were most anxious, when they could, to uphold the decisions of the other Courts, where the Judges saw the demeanour of the witnesses, and could better judge of the value of the evidence. In conclusion, he said that their Lordships, in applying the law to the facts, could not concur in the decision of the Supreme Court, and would recommend to her Majesty that the appeal be allowed, with costs, and the judgment of the Lower Court be reversed, with interest on the note and costs to the appellants.

THE LATE MR. CROFTON MORRISON.—There has lately passed away one of the many hard-worked public servants who spend their lives in China, doing good service for more than a quarter of a century, first as a student and successively as interpreter and consul, with little chance and less hope of ever being singled out for notice or special remark. Martin Crofton Morrison was a younger brother of the John Morrison whose loss, soon after the conclusion of our first treaty, as secretary and interpreter, Sir Henry Pottinger feelingly recorded as a public calamity. Both were sons of the Morrison to whom we are indebted for the first English and Chinese dictionary, a monument of perseverance and ability under the most adverse circumstances. The younger brother arrived in China only a short time before the premature death of John Morrison, and was placed on the Chinese establishment at the end of 1842. From that date, as assistant and Chinese secretary, interpreter, and consul, until his retirement with broken health in 1866, he laboured indefatigably in the desire to effect something beyond the mere line of his duties—at one time supplying the place of a medical man among cholera patients at his post when none could be obtained, at another camped out for three months during a severe winter on the wreck of H.M.S. Racehorse taking place, in order to carry on communications with the Chinese for the benefit of the survivors, and, if possible, to save the ship. Before coming home, although with impaired health, he made a journey of 2,000 miles on horseback through parts of China where no European had before penetrated, to collect information as to trade routes between India and China, especially that which passes through Yarkand and across the Gobi to the north-western part of China proper. This was made at his own cost, without any extraneous aid or encouragement either from the Government or the mercantile communities. All these years of hard and cheerless work, added to the most self-denying and abstemious habits, probably injured his constitution, and brought him to a comparatively early grave last November; but this is the history of many whose lives are spent in the public service at such distant points, unhonoured and unknown beyond a narrow circle of personal acquaintances. The trade routes through Asia by which even in the days of the Roman Empire caravans found their way from China to the borders of Persia and India must remain for other labourers to trace. The late Mr. Morrison had, indeed, collected at great cost of time and money a vast mass of information, with maps and other data; but it is to be feared the whole work has been left in too fragmentary a state to be turned to any account by other hands. He was busily engaged on a map until within a few days of his death, and it is much to be regretted on public grounds that he did not live to give something of completeness to his labours. —Pall Mall Gazette.

SHELLS AND FUZES.—Captain C. Orde-Browne, R.A., Captain Instructor, Royal Laboratory, gave an interesting lecture on Tuesday afternoon in the Theatre of the Royal Artillery Institution, on the projectiles and fuzes of the service. The lecture was in continuation of one on the same subject which Captain Orde-Browne read last year. The lecturer enumerated the principal changes which had been effected during the last twelve months. He discussed the merits of flat-headed and pointed shot, and showed by diagrams that the popular notion of the pointed shot glancing off on striking an armour-plate at an angle was incorrect, the fact being, as General Mayefski pointed out some time ago, that if the point of the shot touched at all, the shot would immediatly assume a position almost at right angles to the plate. Our heavy guns and projectiles, Captain Browne considers, are in a very satisfactory condition. Our siege artillery—40-pounder and 64-pounder guns—he remarked was in "rather a peculiar state"—in other words, not satisfactory. The field artillery equipment, which is undergoing extensive reorganisation, will shortly leave little to be desired. Even the vexed controversy of shrapnel versus segment seems to be approaching settlement. Captain Orde-Browne pointed out that the question between the two shells is now pretty well narrowed down to this: Is the segment so much better when burst on graze than the shrapnel as to justify its retention as an extra projectile in the limbers? That the shrapnel is far superior as a time shell—and that time shells will have to be used—is not disputed; but is there any considerable difference between the shrapnel and segment as percussion shell? The difference consists in this, that the segment spreads more, and the shrapnel shoots closer. The effect of this is that the shrapnel is apt to kill a man too much, so to speak, the segment wounds more men. But the difference in this respect is not really very considerable. Captain Orde-Browne pointed out that the shrapnel might be made to spread more when used as a percussion shell by the introduction of an easily removable bursting charge in the socket. Captain Orde-Browne condemned the exclusive use by the Prussians of common shell. He considered that to reduce a human being to a pulp—as some of the unfortunates who were killed at Sedan were stated to have been—is unnecessary, and to a certain extent unscientific. Each victim represents a waste, because an excess of destructive power. Would it not be more practical to kill or badly wound half a dozen men than to blow two or three men to atoms? The former is the system of the English artillery with its shrapnel and segment, the latter the system of the Prussians and Belgians with their common shell. The lecture was followed by a discussion, and Colonel Smythe, R.A., the chairman, proposed a vote of thanks to the lecturer.

SIR PROBY T. CAUTLEY, K.C.B.—Our last week's number contained a brief obituary reference to this gentleman, who died of bronchitis on the morning of Wednesday, the 25th of January, at his residence in Sydenham Park. He was born in 1802, and entered the Bengal Artillery in 1819, and was appointed by Lord Amherst, in 1825, assistant to Captain R. Smith, of the Bengal Engineers, then employed in cleaning out the Doab Canal, but was called away from his duty in the following year to join Lord Combermere's army in the siege of Bhurtpore. On the fall of this fortress he rejoined the work on the canal, which was opened in 1830, and to the superintendence of which he was appointed by Lord William Bentinck in 1831. Deputed shortly afterwards to examine the Deyra Valley, Lieutenant Cautley projected and executed the Beejapore and Deyra watercourses, and projected also a line from the Jumna, which was carried out later. In 1839-40 he first laid before Government his project for the Ganges Canal, and that grand undertaking was commenced by him a year or two afterwards, while Superintendent-General of Canals. Ill health drove him home in 1845, and during his two years' stay in England he sought to improve his qualifications for the duty which he had left by visiting the hydraulic works at Bude and Greenock and on the Caledonian Canal. As he returned to India he examined the irrigation works in Lombardy and Piedmont, and the barrage works then in progress on the Nile. His operations at Roorkhee were resumed in 1848, and advanced rapidly under the active encouragement given to them by Lord Dalhousie. He introduced brickmaking machinery, and it was on his canal tramway that the first locomotive, the "James Thomason," was run in India. The canal was opened on the 8th of April, 1854, by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces, Mr. John Colvin, who on that day exchanged his first telegraphic message with the Governor-General at Calcutta, nine hundred miles distant. The high value attached to the successful completion of this canal was attested by the late Lord Dalhousie's general order, dated May 11, 1854, which directed a public salute to be fired on his embarkation for England. The city of Calcutta presented him with a memorial, and commissioned Mr. Steele to execute his bust for their town-hall. His engineer friends on the canal also gave him a memorial with a piece of plate. On reaching England he was made a K.C.B., and in 1858 he was selected to fill one of the new seats in the Indian Council, which he held till 1868, when he retired into private life after a service of fifty years. Of the valuable services rendered to geological and palæontological science during his long residence under and on the Sewalik hills this is not the place to speak. Colonel Cautley's contributions to the proceedings of the Asiatic Society of Bengal and to the Geological Society of London, including some which were the joint productions of himself and his intimate friend and fellow-labourer, the late Hugh Falconer, extend from 1826 over a period of more than twenty years. The Geological Society in 1837 awarded their Woollaston gold medal in duplicate to these brothers in Sewalik discoveries.

The London and Mediterranean Bank, ex-parte the Agra and Masterman's Bank.—This was an appeal in the Court of Chancery from a decision of Vice-Chancellor Stuart. In the winding-up of the London and Mediterranean Bank a claim was carried in by the Agra and Masterman's Bank upon three bills of exchange for the sums of £1,200, £1,100, and £800. Vice-Chancellor Stuart refused to admit the claim, and the Agra and Masterman's Bank appealed. Mr. Fry, Q.C., and Mr. Westlake, on behalf of the appellants, contended that it was not necessary that two liquidators should actually sign the bills if the proper number had exercised their discretion as to the acceptance. This, they contended, had been done in the present case by the resolution of all four liquidators to renew Mr. Coqui's bills, and all that then remained to be done was ministerial. Mr. Hardy, Q.C., and Mr. Higgins, for the London and Mediterranean Bank, urged that even if the signature of one liquidator would be enough, provided all four had exercised their discretion, yet in the present case there had been no sufficient exercise of discretion as to the particular bills to be accepted. Lord Justice James said that the letter of the manager to Mr. Coqui on the 23rd of February, 1866, amounted only to an agreement to renew the particular credit for £7,500, and it was left open for Mr. Coqui to draw any number of bills for acceptance, provided the total amount did not exceed £7,500. His lordship could not distinguish the present case from that of "Ex-parte the Birmingham Banking Company" (" Law Reports, 3 Chan., 651), and that case did not amount to an actual decision that the acceptance of a bill could be delegated in a case where an Act of Parliament said that it should be accepted by two liquidators. The claim was rightly rejected by the Vice-Chancellor. Lord Justice Mellish said that the question was whether the bills could be accepted in accordance with the Act. He had considerable doubt whether the bills could be accepted at all under the Act unless the two liquidators actually themselves signed them. But assuming, not that they could delegate their discretion, but that when they had exercised their discretion as to the specific bills they could delegate the actual signature of the bills, was that what they did in the present case? His lordship thought not. The substance of the bargain was that on Coqui's handing over certain securities his credit should be renewed, and that he should have power to draw on the bank any number of bills not exceeding in the whole £7,500. This left a great deal to the discretion of the person who was to accept the bills. He would first have to see that Coqui had performed his part of the bargain, and again, the bills would have to be drawn within a reasonable time. There had not been a sufficient compliance with the provisions of the statute. The decision of the Vice-Chancellor was right, and the appeal must be dismissed with costs.

In the case of Newspapers, Books, &c., the prepayment of the postage is compulsory. Parcels must not in any case exceed 5 lbs. in weight, or be of greater dimensions than twenty-four inches in length, and twelve inches in width or depth.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

HILL-HOUSE COLLEGE, HAVERFORDWEST, SOUTH WALES.

The Misses PHILPOTT (successors to the late Miss Davies) beg to call the attention of Parents, Guardians, and others interested in Education, to the above Establishment for Young Ladies, which has been patronised by Indian Parents for more than half a century. The College is situated in a most salubrious part of the country, near the sea-side, considered peculiarly adapted to the constitution of children born in India.

The Misses Philpott have resided for many years both in France and Germany, and have obtained Diplomas from Foreign Examiners. They are deeply impressed with the responsibility incurred in the training of the young, and endeavour to instil into the minds of their Pupils the highest principles, whilst imparting to them a brilliant and well-grounded Education.

THE

AND THE

COSTUMES OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA

Prepared under the Authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

By J. FORBES WATSON, Reporter on the Products of India.

Imperial quarto, morocco back, cloth, with numerous coloured Photographs. £3. 5s.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

The Times.—"On no point, perhaps, in regard to India, has greater ignorance prevailed in England than in respect to the clothing of her vast population. Let us it is, and for the first time within the last hundred years of our Indian domination, the work just completed by Dr. Forbes Watson supplies this great and almost unaccountable want of information, and supplies it, too, in a most complete and intelligible manner. It would be impossible to follow Dr. Watson's work in detail; but, whether to the manufacturer or to the general reader, the interest throughout will continue unbroken. His book is written in a clear and thoroughly intelligible style throughout; it is handsomely got up, and embellished by numerous coloured photographs, from which the various styles of costumes and portions of clothing, male and female, will be more readily understood than from mere descriptions."

The Morning Post.—"The conception of this splendid work reflects the highest credit upon the wisdom of the department to which we are indebted for its publication; and the manner in which it has been executed by its author. No one can fully appreciate the value of this work without seeing it, neither analysis nor extracts can give any idea of the immense mass of minute facts which it contains, and the admirable manner in which they are grouped and made subservient to the practical requirements of the manufacturer and the merchant, and the requirements of the student of ornamental art. The illustrations are as magnificent as they are appropriate. In fact, as mere productions of beauty and taste, they give the work the air of a book of art luxury, and we have no doubt that from this feature it will find many admiring purchasers beyond the ranks of trade and commerce."

The Athenæum.—"We may safely say that a more important work on the manufactures of India has never been given to the public, than the Industrial Museum, and this Commentary by Dr. Forbes Watson. Advantages are sometimes slow to follow, even when the channel for them has been skilfully made and clearly marked out, but we certainly do anticipate very great results from this work, and that before long its author will be acknowledged to deserve a place amongst the real benefactors of India."

The Edinburgh Review.—"It is a matter of national importance to ascertain what the traditions of India in respect to dress really are. This task has been most ably performed by Dr. Forbes Watson in the volume before us. We call attention to the work and to the subject, not as a matter of mere curiosity, but as an inquiry of direct interest to the manufacturing industry of Europe. Dr. Watson has evidently brought his personal Indian experience to bear upon a mass of materials which, in less skilled hands, would most likely have proved wearisome and unintelligible. As he has arranged his details, they are as entertaining to the general reader as they are full of information and instruction to the manufacturer."

The Art Journal.—"The work, indeed, is as well fitted, as far as embellishment is concerned, for the drawing-room table as it is for the study; and its contents will be found far more interesting to the general reader than its mere designation would lead to a supposition that it might be. The motive and purpose of its publication is highly creditable to the present Home Government of India."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS

Are a certain cure for scurvy, and all diseases of the skin, irrespective of age of patient or duration of disease. The languor and dejection of spirits usually attendant on the worst class of diseases of the skin are speedily removed by the use of Holloway's Ointment and Pills. Their efficacy in correcting the bad humours of the body, and in curing complaints of the kind above mentioned is quite unrivalled. The Ointment should be well rubbed into the parts affected, and the Pills should also be taken as a powerful auxiliary to it, as they purify the blood, give tone to the stomach, clean the tongue, clear the complexion, and thoroughly invigorate the whole system.

CHALLENGE to the WORLD.—The Bristol Daily Times and Mirror, August 5th, has the following:—"Messrs. J. C. Swan and Co., of 16, Queen-square, in this city, have invented a pocket microscope, which is a marvel in all that such an instrument should be. It has great power, remarkable definition, and does not require focussing. The cheapness of the article will make it exceedingly popular when its merits are more widely known. It is called the 'Bristol Microscope,' and is a great credit to the inventor, as much for its extreme simplicity as its power."—The Western Daily Press says:—"The Bristol Microscope has a magnifying power of 20,000 times," &c., &c.—The Western Daily Telegraph says:—"The Bristol Microscope is the most compact and useful scientific instrument we have ever seen; it possesses extraordinary power, and is very easily managed," &c. The price of the Bristol Microscope is only 2s., or, free by post, with printed directions, for twenty-eight stamps.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, January 21; Agra and Madras, January 19; Calcutta, January 18.

THE Bombay papers contain sad news with regard to the foundering of the screw steamer General Outram, in a cyclone on her way back to Bombay from Cochin. She left Cochin on the 11th January with a crew of thirty-four men, mostly natives, and more than fifty passengers. There was a good deal of rough wet weather about that time, which caused some damage to the cotton crops in Western India, and much loss among the native shipping. On the 15th and 16th the gale came to its height, and on the morning of the latter day the General Outram went down off Rutnagherry. Of the crew some thirty, including the captain and the engineer, have been saved; but next to nothing has been heard of the passengers, who were probably drowned in their berths. Among the lost appear the names of Major Carr, of the Madras Staff Corps; Mrs. Teasdale, the captain's wife; Mr. Clay, from the Bombay firm of Lawrence and Co.; Mr. Milne, chief officer of the ship; Mr. D. Stewart, an engineer; and Mr. and Mrs. Moundey, besides a few children. Only three of the native passengers were saved among those who were picked up by the boats of the Phlox. According to the captain's report they had hardly twenty minutes' warning before the ship "plunged."

ON Friday, the 13th January, Sir R. Temple brought up the report of the Select Committee on his Bill for amending the Currency Act. The Bill has now been altered for the better by the insertion of a clause empowering the Government to issue five-rupee notes. Such a provision has long been needed to meet the wants of the multitude, hitherto limited to ten-rupee paper. The clause is only permissive, but with Sir R. Temple himself in favour of it, there can be little doubt that the notes will soon be issued. Another of Sir Richard's amendments does away with the absurd restrictions hitherto placed on the circulating power of the present currency. A note issued in one province could not be cashed in another. Henceforth however the notes will run all over India. These two improvements taken together ought to bring about a marked expansion in the currency, which of late years has increased but slightly in comparison with the rates of increase in its earlier days.

THE poor old Mohammedan gentleman Ameer Khan seems fated to end his days a prisoner, if not a convict. Hardly had the scandal caused by his prolonged detention without warrant or form of trial in a public prison been brought to an end by his discharge from Alipore Jail, on January 17, when an Inspector armed with a warrant from Patna arrested him at the prison gate on a charge of waging or attempting to wage or conspiring with others to wage war against the Queen. This we presume is the first-fruits of Mr. Stephen's late amendments to the Penal Code. Ameer Khan was carried off to Patna, where his trial was to begin on the 20th January. According to the Englishman, whose statement we trust may prove incorrect, Ameer Khan was congratulated by his English jailer, Mr. Dobson, on the order for his release, and conducted to the jaildoor, with every appearance of being a free man.

WE hear from India that the process of forming a new department of Agriculture and Trade has nearly reached its last stage. A detailed scheme, prepared by a committee of Government Secretaries, was to be sent home for final sanction in a few weeks. It is proposed to start the new department on principles of the strictest economy, no fresh cost being incurred in the process. Each of the existing departments will hand over part of its work and staff to the new one, which will deal with all questions of land revenue, irrigation, agriculture, forests, fisheries, cotton and other fibres, commercial taxation, customs, trade-statistics, and the like; a pretty comprehensive programme, as drawn out by one of the Calcutta papers.

No new particulars have been elicited by the official inquiry into the cause of Sir H. Durand's death. What happened was the inevitable result of a howdah perched on a tall elephant coming in contact with the top of a low gateway. In deploring Sir Henry's death, Lord Mayo speaks of him as having in the few months of his rule shown the possession of "those rare powers which enable men to rule successfully," and of having left a name which will "long be remembered and revered in the Punjab."

FRESH cases of gross insubordination are continually reported from India. By this last mail for instance we learn that a private of the 11th Foot at Morar was convicted of striking a captain of artillery with his clenched fist, while another private in the 62nd Foot at Lucknow has been condemned to twenty years' penal servitude for throwing his boots and a brush at a captain in his own regiment, besides upsetting over him a vessel of water. The former offender was recommended to mercy apparently because he was drunk; but Lord Napier very properly declined to remit the ten years awarded for "insubordination with violence to a superior officer." We wish that his Lordship or some other competent person could throw some real light on the origin of all these violent outbreaks, which tell so unpleasantly against the discipline of the British Army in India. For more than two years this epidemic has now been raging in spite of the heavy punishments lately awarded. How much longer will it rage? Who or what is chiefly to blame for the prevalence of so mischievous a military plague? Why do Courts-Martial still flinch from enforcing against offenders the full severity of the law? It would surely be more merciful to stop the evil by shooting one or two men, than to go on sentencing one soldier after another to a punishment which apparently has lost all deterrent power. There are many objections to the re-introduction of flogging, and we cannot afford to wait for the results of any slower remedy that a careful diagnosis of the disease might recommend. Twenty years ago it became the fashion for privates to throw caps at their officers, but after one or two offenders had been shot, there was no need to repeat the process.

The fate of Ensign Gilbert of the 60th Rifles remains no longer in suspense. He has been cashiered for an act of open insubordination on parade, and we cannot say that he has suffered unjustly for an undoubted offence against military discipline. He lost his temper and must pay the penalty due by law. Insubordinate officers cannot make obedient privates. But how about the Colonel whose intemperate nagging caused the poor Ensign to lose his temper and his commission? Nothing is more fatal to discipline than a commanding officer who worries his subordinates into a state of chronic irritation which may at any moment blaze out in insubordinate deeds or words. The whole evidence in this case shows a state of feeling among the officers of Ensign Gilbert's regiment, for which nothing but their colonel's irritating conduct could account. Not one officer only but all the regiment shared that dangerous spirit which in the Ensign's case proved uncontrollable. It was Colonel Crawley and the Mhow ferment reproduced at Bangalore. There is but one inference from such a state of things. Given a good sensible commandant, and the officers of his regiment will work together under him with a cheerfulness more or less unquestioning. But a weak or worrying colonel destroys the harmony and undermines the discipline of his regiment. Is such a man worthy to retain his command? In fairness to those under him, on behalf of the very discipline he is destroying, ought he not to be removed?

A Calcutta telegram of earlier date than the one we quoted last week throws some light on the final success of Sayad Turki in capturing Muscat. It now appears that his opponent, Azan Bin Ghez, lost his life in battle, probably in defence of his chief city, which consequently fell without further struggle into Sayad Turki's hands. The late Sultan, who ousted his kinsman Salim some two years ago, had failed a few years before in a like attempt against Salim's predecessor, Thowaini. His short reign has been a very stormy one, and his fall is partly owing to the countenance which the Indian Government has lent his successful assailant, the uncle of the ruler whom Azin bin Ghez deposed.

Captain W. H. Walker, who was knighted about a week ago, was for many years in the old Indian Merchant Service before he began rising up to his present post as Senior Professional Member of the Harbour and Marine Department of the Board of Trade. In 1829 he was chief officer of the old Company's ship Bridgewater, which got dismasted in a hurricane on March 5 of the following year. In 1832 and 1833 he served as chief officer of the Charles Grant in the last voyages she ever made. After the dissolution of the Company's Merchant Navy, Captain Walker went into Messrs. Green's employment, and soon became commander of one of their fine East India merchantmen.

All old Haileybury men must have heard with regret of the death last week of their old Principal, Canon Melvill, better known to the bulk of his countrymen in England as a preacher of remarkable eloquence and refined scholarship. His fame in this respect had already been established when he left his Chapel in Camberwell for the headship of Haileybury College—which he obtained in 1843, in succession to Mr. Le Bas. His flowing eloquence, if somewhat lacking in strength, was buoyed up by sound reasoning clearly conveyed; while his sweet voice, handsome person, and gentlemanly bearing left his hearers nothing to desire in respect of outward graces. As Principal of Haileybury, a post which he retained to the day of its dissolution, Mr. Melvill won the kindly regard of all who came in contact with him by his unassuming courtesy and genial grace of manner. The late Canon was a brother of Sir James Melvill, for many years Secretary to the East India Company.

There is hope yet for Mr. W. P. Andrew and his fellow-believers in the Euphrates Valley Railway. We are informed that the Hon. Frederic Walpole has lately gone to Constantinople, to treat on Mr. Andrew's behalf with the Turkish Government for a "concession," authorising the construction of a railway from some port in the Mediterranean to Bussorah, at the head of the Persian Gulf. Mr. Walpole is said to be very sanguine of success in his present essay. We had always indeed understood that the Turkish Government were quite ready to contribute handsomely towards any practicable scheme for linking the Persian Gulf with the Mediterranean by a railway passing through Bagdad and Aleppo. It is certainly for [illegible] interest to gain a firmer hold on the distant Pashaliks of Asia Minor and Mesopotamia. If Mr. Walpole's hopes are well grounded, we may look to Turkey to furnish the needful guarantees for the capital which English enterprise would then be ready enough to contribute.

We are sorry to see that the Postmaster General holds out no hope of a reduction in the newspaper postage to India and the Eastern Seas. The gentlemen who memorialised Lord Hartington to that effect on the 27th December are informed by Mr. Monsell that it is impossible "to lower the charge on newspapers, books, and patterns, owing to the combined transit rates which this office has to pay to Belgium, Germany, and Italy." Since the change of route from Marseilles to Brindisi, the cost of transit, he pleads, has been "more than doubled," by the greater length of the land journey, added to the demands of three foreign States instead of one. The consequence is that even at the present rates the British Post-office receives "an average of less than a penny for each newspaper." All this may be true enough; but the public would have been better pleased had Mr. Monsell given them some little hope for the future, or offered to try the experiment of intermediate rat[illegible] Why for instance should a paper weighing four-and-a-half ounces be charged twice the rate of one weighing half an ounce less, and the same rate as one that weighed eight ounces? Could not six ounces be carried for sixpence as easily as eight for eightpence? Besides, if we must put up with the present rates for a little while longer, there is no reason why the mails should always travel by the Ostend and Cologne route to Brindisi. The war will be over some day, and the Mont Cenis Tunnel has already been bored through. We shall ultimately have to deal with two States only instead of three, and Mr. Monsell might have soothed his petitioners with the prospect, however remote, of some small concession to their demands.

Mr. Grant Duff has promised us the new and startling sensation of a budget statement in the very first weeks of the Session. On Friday, February 24, he purposes to introduce the Indian Budget for the coming year into a fresh and full House of Commons, instead of leaving it to be yawned over by a score of listless members in the last days of July. It remains to see what kind of audience he will then secure for a subject in which Englishmen would take some interest if they could only be brought to comprehend its real claims on their attention. From the tone of some discussions at the end of last session it seems not unlikely that questions of Indian finance may this year be debated with greater warmth, if not with larger knowledge than usual. Much however will depend on the character of Mr. Grant Duff's financial announcements, and these, we imagine, will have on most of his hearers a reassuring effect. There will at any rate be no deficit to mourn over in the past, and the odious income-tax will be very greatly reduced for the future. The new scheme of localised finance will also find a clear and able exponent in the present Under-Secretary for India.

CASUALTIES BY DEATH IN THE INDIAN SERVICES, &c., REPORTED SINCE LAST PUBLICATION.

H.M.'s Forces.—Ensign R. H. Gillmor, 92nd (Gordon) Highlanders.

Bengal.—Christopher W. Smith, Esq., formerly joint Postmaster-General in Calcutta, B.C.S., at Florence, Jan. 18; Mr. Pierce Creagh, Barrister-at-Law, at Calcutta; Lieut. col. A. Y. Sinclair, at Jaipoor, Feb. 3.

Madras.—Rev. C. Hubbard, of Tranquebar. S.P.G.

Home Civil Service.—Rev. Henry Melvill, D.D., Feb. 9; he was Principal of Haileybury College, and one of the Commissioners appointed in 1854 to examine into and report upon the best mode of admission by examination to writerships in the Indian Civil Service.

Naval.—H. R. G. Salmon, Esq., late H.E.I.Co.'s Navy, at sea, Jan. 13, aged 33.

PASSENGERS ARRIVED AT BRINDISI.

Per str. Nubia, Feb. 7.—From Bombay.—Mr. and Mrs. Cuthbertson and two children, Major Naylor, Mr. Murray, Col. and Mrs. Younghusband and child, Mr. Schilizzi, Mr. Drew, Mr. Hall, Mrs. D. Hall and sister, Mr. Hobson, Mr. Woodhouse, Mr. Lester, Mr. Gregoire.

PASSENGERS EXPECTED AT SOUTHAMPTON.

Per str. Candia, Feb. 18.—From Bombay.—Mr. Goodall, Mrs. Shewell and three children, Mrs. Brandson and two infants, Mr. and Mrs. Freeman and infant, Capt. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Strick and two infants, Mr. C. N. Wood, Dr. Miller.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All Letters for insertion in Allen's Indian Mail should be legibly written on one side of the paper only, and accompanied with the real name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith. Anonymous letters will not be inserted. The columns of the Indian Mail are open for free, but temperate discussion on all Indian topics of public interest, and especially all matters regarding the Services, Civil, Military, or Uncovenanted. The Proprietors and Editor wish it to be distinctly understood that they do not hold themselves in any way responsible for the opinions that may be expressed in the Correspondence Columns.

INDIAN EXCHANGES.

With regard to Indian exchange rates, it appears that the Government of India are now getting only 1s. 10d. per rupee for all moneys drawn in England from their Indian treasuries, consequently they lose upwards of 8 per cent. on all sums disbursed here to officers and others at 2s. If Government had unconditionally engaged to make certain payments at a fixed rate of 2s., the recipients would have just cause to complain of any attempt to pay at a less favourable rate; but not otherwise. It is very probable, however, that Government have reserved the power to make such change in the rate of remittances as they may consider necessary, in order to guard against the heavy loss consequent upon a long-continued course of exchange such as we have had for the last five years. It is altogether a mistake to suppose that either the Government, the banks, or agency-houses can rule the rate of exchange, and that larger profits are made by the dealers in exchange when the rate is under than when it is above 2s., because, whatever the rate may be at the time of drawing, the banks and agency-houses must also purchase bills at very nearly the same rates in order to cover what they draw. Consequently, it is very doubtful whether they could at all times secure even one half per cent. of difference between their purchases and sales.

The real cause of low rates of exchange between India and England is the large balance of trade against the former, owing to the imports from England being very largely in excess of the exports from India, hence a demand for remittance to England and low rates, which will continue until there is a change in the course of trade.

MR. FORSYTH'S REPORT.

A condensed account of Mr. Forsyth's mission to Yarkand will not be without interest even to those of our readers who have already gleaned some knowledge of its main features from various sources. In compliance with a request from the Atalik Ghazi himself, delivered through his Envoy, Mirza Mohammed Shadi, Mr. Forsyth was deputed by Lord Mayo to accompany the Envoy on his return to Yarkand, with the view of paying its ruler "a friendly visit," whose sole aim was the "opening up and giving impulse to the trade with that country." It was in no sense a political mission, but Mr. Forsyth was to learn all he could about Yarkand and the neighbouring countries, their history, resources, and commercial wants; returning before the passes should be closed by the winter snows. Of the three roads to Yarkand Mr. Forsyth's party took the one through Ladakh and the Karakorum, while one of his native followers accompanied Mr. Hayward on the route through Cashmere, Gilghit, Yassin, and the Pamir Steppe. This man however shared Mr. Hayward's sad fate. Another native emissary had already gone by the Afghan and Badakshan road. Without waiting longer for "the loitering Envoy," Mr. Forsyth and Dr. Henderson left Srinagar for Leh on the 14th June. Their journey was enlivened by the company of Kazi Sayad Mohammed Yakub, a nephew of the Atalik Ghazi, who had done the pilgrimage to Mecca, and spent four years at Constantinople. His influence with the Mohammedans everywhere was very great, and his subsequent presence with the mission doubtless smoothed the way for its final departure homewards from Yarkand.

Arriving at Leh on the 2nd July—Mirza Shadi had joined him on the road—Mr. Forsyth did all he could to make sure of finding the Atalik Ghazi at home, before starting on the next stage of his journey. Rumours of disturbances in Kashgar had reached his ears, and a recent messenger from Yarkand was closely questioned. This man's denial however was strengthened by the Mirza's own assurances that perfect peace prevailed throughout his master's dominions. Dr. Cayley and others avowed their own belief in the truth of these assurances. Thus encouraged, Mr. Forsyth's party, increased by the welcome arrival of Mr. Shaw, set out on the 7th July from Leh, along a road which for twenty-seven marches passed through "completely uninhabited country." For seven of these marches "not a stick of fuel nor a blade of grass" was to be found. Unluckily the "loitering envoy" had burdened himself with a good deal of troublesome baggage, and the ponies supplied by the Cashmere Rajah's chief officer at Ladakh proved wretchedly unequal to the work before them. One of Major Montgomerie's Pundits also, who would have been useful in taking observations, had to be sent back on account of the alarm caused by an indiscreet disclosure of the part he had meant to play in the Mission.

In crossing the Karakorum range Mr. Forsyth found no difficulty in breathing below a level of 16,000 feet above the sea. At any height above that level a good breath "was a luxury seldom enjoyed." During the ten or twelve days spent in the higher levels, the feeling of nausea and exhaustion never left him. Not a trace of snow relieved the brown barrenness of the mountain side, and the patches of coarse yellow grass were few and far between. Descending the northern side by gradual slopes, his party issued out of a stony ravine into the wide Changchenmoo Valley, itself 16,000 feet above the sea. This valley, "bare and gravelly, with plateaux ranging tier above tier," is hemmed in with rocky mountains 19,000 feet high, and threaded by the Karakash, which flows turbidly through many deep and rapid channels. A few tamarisk-bushes by the river-side were all the signs of vegetable life to be seen. Beyond Gogra at the head of the valley the Maharajah's authority came to an end, and the last tokens of Buddhist worship disappeared.

Still deluded by false reports about the peaceful state of Eastern Turkistan, Mr. Forsyth marched forward, with frequent loss of baggage-cattle and much suffering from the hot sun by day and the piercing cold at night. On the wild Thaldat plain were quantities of topaz, which glittered like diamonds in the sun. Another plain was "one vast bed of Glauber's Salt," which formed everywhere a crust from six to twelve inches thick. The glare from this sheet of soda was as bad as that from snow, and the fine dust from it filled the eyes, mouth, and nostrils. When the wind rises the duststorms on this plain are fatal to animal life. Another march brought the party on July 28 to the main stream of the Karakash, which flows along the foot of the snowclad Kuen Luen Range. Here the party were joined by Dr. Cayley, who left them at Shadulla, within the Yarkand frontier. There for the first time they heard that the Atalik Ghazi had been seven months absent from Yarkand on a warlike expedition, but was hastening back victorious to welcome his English guests. It was not till some days later that, on reaching Kichi Yilak, they learned the whole truth from some Indian traders homeward bound from Yarkand. Not only was the Atalik Ghazi still absent, but the time of his return was quite uncertain. To go forward however, as Mirza Shadi pointed out to Mr. Forsyth, was now the only way of compassing a safe return. A halt therefore took place, pending the receipt of letters from the Dadkhwah, or head official at Yarkand. The party here struck up a friendly intercourse with a Kirghiz tribe, who greeted their old friend Mr. Shaw with every token of delight, and made a most favourable impression on his fellow-travellers by their good humour and readiness to promote the comfort of their master's guests.

There was no lack indeed of hospitality throughout the rest of Mr. Forsyth's journey. An officer of rank escorted his party on from Saugor to Yarkand. As they advanced the country grew more populous and cultivated. A succession of hamlets, groves, and gardens, varied by fields of wheat, oats, hemp, and Indian corn, brought them to Sanji, where the envoy who had gone on ahead regaled them with a dinner which, according to Mr. Forsyth, would have satisfied the most fastidious palate. Reversing the Western order of eating, it began with the dessert and ended with the soup; the drink consisting of weak green tea. Like the Mohammedans of India, these Mongols of Turkestan are excellent cooks, choice about their butter, and specially skilled in made dishes.

After passing the Great Desert of Gobi, which after all contains many fertile oases, they came within the pleasant jurisdiction of the Dadkhwah. At Karghalik they sat down to a splendid repast, on chairs, the first ever made in Kashgar. From thence to Yarkand they passed through a fertile, prosperous, and well-governed land, rejoicing in good roads and bridges, streams and canals, neat-looking houses, and well-kept mosques and serais. The lanes were shady with poplars and willows lined the canals. In his subsequent rides round Yarkand, Mr. Forsyth discovered everywhere the signs of peaceful active industry, and "the peasants would look up from their work with pleased inquisitive eyes" at the European strangers, the first, save poor Mr. Hayward, they had ever seen. The women of Yarkand, not less curious than women elsewhere—or men everywhere for that matter—peered out from all sides at the new comers, displaying their "ruddy faces" and blackened eyebrows with a freedom rare enough in Mahommedan countries. It appears that ladies of the higher class are wont to spend some hours of the day in gardens outside the city walls.

Mr. Forsyth entered Yarkand itself on the 23rd August, and took up his abode in the citadel which lies about seven hundred yards away from the city itself. The circumference of the latter measures about 9,100 paces, equal to an area of little more than a square mile. Its population Mr. Forsyth reckons at barely sixty thousand. The houses are built of sun-dried bricks; the city walls of mud, with crenellated battlements. In each of its one hundred and twenty wards there is "a school where the Koran is taught and little else." Mr. Forsyth disbelieves in the sixty colleges, and was assured that in only three or four was anything like good education given. The bazaars reminded him of Cairo without the second stories. With regard to the population of the whole country, Russian estimates vary from three to thirty millions, but Mr. Forsyth would rate it at less than one million. Every effort was tried by the Dadkhwah to prevent the departure of his guests without special leave from the Atalik Ghazi. But with the help of Kazi Mohammed Yakub this difficulty was overcome, and a Punjabi trader supplied the ponies which the Dadkhwah refused to procure. On the 5th September the travellers set their faces homeward, after a most friendly parting with the Yarkandi officials. Mr. Forsyth winds up his Report with a marked tribute to the services of Mr. Shaw, whose former journey paved the way for the safe completion of his own. For a proof of the value of Dr. Henderson's services he refers to that officer's separate reports and to his rare collection of plants and birds. Flattering mention is also made of Mir Akbar Ali Khan, C.S.I., of Tara Singh, the Punjab trader aforesaid, and of two or three other natives who proved useful to the Mission. On the whole there is more of interest than encouragement to be gleaned from this story of an expedition which made twenty-seven out of its forty marches over a bare and uninhabited country. Learning and science may reap some benefit, but how about Indian trade?

Correspondence.

A DESERTED WIFE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—I read with much pleasure and interest a most able leader in your Mail of the 24th ult., under the head of "Miscegenation," to which you have done ample justice; but allow me, as an impartial observer, to offer a few observations on the subject. The unfortunate woman alluded to is not an English lady, but an uneducated Welsh woman. Her story is this. In the end of 1863, at the age of seventeen, she went to Calcutta to join her father, a civil engineer, who died shortly before her arrival. Being an orphan, and totally destitute, while a stranger amongst a black population she was fortunate in obtaining a situation in a draper's shop in Calcutta. The soi-disant Nawab Syed Ahmed Ali, who is a member of the Middle Temple, in receipt of a most liberal Government pension, enticed her to live with him, it is stated in her affidavit, under a promise of marriage. In 1865, on the birth of a son, after converting her to the faith of Mahomed, he publicly entered into a matrimonial alliance with her, and gave her the name of Ashraffoon Nissa, or "most noble lady." In 1866 he brought her to England, bringing with him some letters of introduction, and adding the word "Nawab" to his name, became thereby possessed of a passport to the curiosity-mongers of London, who are vividly under the impression that Indian nawabs are as rich as Crœsus, and carry about with them large bales of Cashmere shawls, pearl necklaces, and diamond rings as presents for their acquaintances. The titular nawab and his better half, therefore, became notable "lions" in the fashionable society of this metropolis; and were certainly picturesque and imposing-looking objects, in their flowing Indian costumes. But, alas! the too susceptible "prince," finding himself surrounded by white-faced "houris" more enchanting even in appearance than the beauties he had fondly pictured to himself as awaiting his arrival in his promised celestial abode (and, in addition, educated and accomplished), became, poor man, quite bewildered. His religion authorised the possession of four wives, but the unaccountable stupidity of the rules of Feringhee society tied him down to one! What was he to do? How was he to effect his object, of carrying back to his zenana in the City of Palaces a real live "Mem Sahib?" Why, of course, the first necessity was to discard the linendraper's apprentice; and this he attempted to effect, according to received Bengali usage.

The argumentum baculinum being considered the principal panacea in similar cases, he proceeded according to the following statement of one of his own servants, Alfoo by name, to administer it thus:—"I saw the Nawab Ahmed Ali beat his wife with a ruler as long as my arm; she was falling from a chair when I came in. He then struck her again while she was on the floor." Finding, however, that Englishwomen possess more tenacity of purpose than his countrywomen, and that it is not so easy to get rid of a "better half" in this country, he himself separated and left his obstinately attached helpmate and his three children. He forgot to make any provision for their sustenance, however, and had it not been for some neighbours they might have starved. Subsequently he took away two of the children. These statements are taken from the various affidavits now submitted for the consideration of his Grace the Duke of Argyll and the members of Council. In conclusion, I deplore, as an Asiatic myself, such practices as those now under consideration. To return the generous hospitality of our English hosts by introducing into their houses a person whom the introducer himself stigmatises as unfit for such an introduction, is very unpardonable conduct. No amount of crimes this unhappy young woman may have been guilty of, according to the Nawab's statement (and his statement has yet to be borne out by evidence), can palliate it. I feel confident that the Duke of Argyll, whose justness and perspicacity are well known to all my countrymen, will do ample justice in this deplorable case; and will see, at all events, that the deserted wife and her remaining child are not left to become refugees in an English workhouse.—Your most obedient servant,

London, Feb. 1. A Brahamani Bull.

The Church and the Churches in Southern India. By J. A. Lobley, M.A.; Vicar of Hamer, Rochdale. Bell and Daldy. 1870.

The author of this volume won the Maitland Prize last year at Cambridge for the essay which he has here reproduced. In reviewing the progress of the Portuguese Missions to Southern India, which forms the main theme of his work, he has contrived to present us with a succinct and readable retrospect of Christianity in India from its first known appearance there in the second century, A.D., down to the latest reports of the great Missionary Societies in our own day. Whether the Christian Church in Southern India was really founded by Saint Thomas or no, Christianity in one shape or another appears to have existed on the Malabar Coast for nearly eighteen hundred years. In the fourth century the Indian Church was flourishing under the Persian Metropolitan, whose sway is still to some extent acknowledged in Malabar, Cochin, and Travancore. In the tenth century the Christians of Southern India were powerful enough to have a king of their own, and when they again fell under heathen rule, they retained many of their former privileges, and ranked socially second to the Brahmins alone. Their Christianity seems to have been Nestorian, with a strong infusion of Hindu and Mohammedan tenets. Of Transubstantiation however and image-worship they knew nothing, before Portuguese influences added a new corruption to their old faith. Xavier himself, of whom Mr. Lobley writes with fairness and discernment, was too busy converting his heathen fishermen to think of reclaiming Christian heretics. But Portuguese bigotry could not brook two Christian Churches in one province, and from 1545 no stone was left unturned to win the heretics of Malabar to the standard of Rome and Jesuitism. A struggle of half a century ended in the complete triumph of Rome and bigotry, as represented by Menezes, Archbishop of Goa. But the triumph was shortlived. The end of the seventeenth century found half the Christians of Malabar permanently detached from their forced allegiance, and their descendants to this hour know no other supreme head than the Patriarch of Antioch, ruling them through their own Metran or Bishop.

The remainder of the essay briefly sketches the progress of modern missionary labours in Southern India. Forty years ago the Romanists once more bestirred themselves in the work of conversion, and of late years they claim to have added many thousands to the Papal fold. The three Protestant Missions whose labours in the same field date back to the end of last century, appear between them to have numbered in 1868 about seventy-five thousand converts in Tinnevelly and South Travancore, tended by a staff of more than eleven hundred native clergy and catechists. Nor has Protestant enthusiasm confined itself to the conversion of pure heathens. A mission established among the old Christians of Cochin and North Travancore already counts 12,732 converts, most of whom had belonged to the Syrian Church, which has lately been distracted by the claims of rival bishops. It need hardly be said that a large proportion of the Christians of all sects in Southern India fall greatly short of the standard set up by their spiritual pastors, whose own culture again is seldom equal to their enthusiasm. But even in so-called Christian countries it is not the many who live up to a high Christian standard, and the culture which Mr. Lobley would bring to bear on the higher classes in India would be thrown away on the masses in whose conversion rests the likeliest chance of Christianising India.

A Ride Through the Disturbed Districts of New Zealand; together with Some Account of the South Sea Islands. London: Murray. 1870.

This volume of selections from the journals and letters of the late Hon. Herbert Meade has been edited by his brother, who "at the request of friends" now publishes for the world at large what he had first printed for private circulation. Its real author—for his MS. has been carefully followed—was a lieutenant in the Royal Navy in 1864, when, at Sir George Grey's request, he undertook the journey to Lake Taupo, his narrative of which fills the first half of this very interesting and well-written volume. Sir G. Grey himself bears witness to the "great accuracy of his descriptions," than which he "never read anything more spirited and at the same time more faithful." Taking the accuracy readily for granted, we feel bound thoroughly to endorse Sir George's praise of the writer's descriptive style. The proofs of literary power, enhanced and chastened by a sound literary taste and much artistic feeling, are present in every page. And the merit of the writing, so free from slang, flippancy, and all affectation, seems all the greater when we find that part of Mr. Meade's journal was written at the age of twenty-three, four years only before his untimely death. Nor is it possible to read many pages without seeing for ourselves the wisdom of Sir G. Grey's selection of so young an officer for an enterprise whose perilous nature reveals itself in more than one of the "moving accidents" here recorded. The first white man who fell into the hands of the Pai Marire fanatics, Mr. Meade had a very narrow escape from the death which soon afterwards overtook the less fortunate Mr. Volkener. His account of the strange new superstition—an odd hash of Jewish, Christian, and other creeds—is brief but interesting; and his remarks on the character and habits of the more civilised Maories are not more shrewd than fair. He is equally at home in describing native manners and local scenery. The second part of the volume, which takes us into many of the South Sea Islands, is only less readable than the first.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE CIVIL ENGINEERING COLLEGE.

The Friend of India agrees with the Indu Prakash that the natives of India should have the first claim to all offices for which they are qualified. But what are the necessary qualifications? Suppose, for instance, that a Bengalee, of mild and inoffensive character, proved himself to have mastered the whole art of war, should we on that account make him Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab? Knowledge is one thing, grit, force, energy, strength, are other things, and to our view far before knowledge. Now, we do hold—and that, we hope, with a very earnest wish to see the natives of India fully employed in their own country—that England, responsible for the safety of the Empire, cannot madly throw away her chances on a mere sentiment. It is the duty of the English Government to bring into the Government of India as many natives as possible; but first and foremost the Government must be strong and able to hold its own. To do that it must have men on whom it can rely. Let England send her best of all classes and let India learn from the men sent. If India is to have good engineers, they must be taught in Europe; they cannot be taught in India. What India must do is to follow the example and learn. We should welcome a native engineering manufactory. They may come, ought to come, as one of the first sstep to India holding her own. So much for the advantages of the new College.

Then as to the disadvantages. They are not small, nor far to seek. What are we to do with all these engineers when we have taught them? Work must be found somehow; but how? They will open up the country, we have no doubt; but the money!—where is it to be had? Are we to begin a new course of expenditure on a gigantic scale? These are serious questions, and may have an important bearing on the future of all concerned. Then, what relation are the new men to hold to the old ones, some of them exceedingly able? Eventually, of course, they are to supersede the old men; but till that time comes, what is to be their position? These are stumbling-blocks, look at the subject as we may. The balance, however, we take it, is on the side of the College. There is work, and useful work, in India for a large number of men for many years to come, and the College is not necessarily to endure for generations. The work—of the best that England can supply—is needed, and each work will open up some other. The engineering of India is already, in its high branches, of the first order, but a continued supply is needed to replace the waste, and to open up new fields of work. We should like very much to see a native engineering college grow up side by side with this, and as its competitor. Only, it should be self-supporting, as this will be. On this point there is some error. We cannot see that India is to pay to any large extent for the experiment, unless it is in the increased public works that the project may call into being. That is all we dread. Looking at it from any other point of view, native or English, we see nothing to fear. The introduction of skilled labour into India is India's gain. All that England can give of engineering skill will be here as the model, and much of that skill is here now. We cannot work without India learning; and then remember that an engineer coming here to work is bringing lessons which the native is restricted by his faith from going out to seek.

The Delhi Gazette thinks it is a curious comment upon the change of Government in India that Addiscombe and Haileybury were swept away with the old regime to be replaced by a similar institution adapted only for civil engineering. Will not the example be followed in other departments? What has become of the projected Civil Service College? If some special education was necessary under the old system for civil servants, is it any the less necessary now? We are of opinion that the interval between the passing of the first, the entrance, competitive examination for the Civil Service, and the final examination, might be most usefully spent at a college somewhat like what Haileybury was, where the young men who are destined to fill such important offices as fall to the lot of the Indian Civil Servants might study law, political economy, and possibly the Eastern languages with advantage. A special civil engineering education for India is a step in the right direction. And we hope the caducary propensities of buildings erected under the supervision of the D P.W. as at present constituted may disappear under the influence of the instructions communicated under Colonel Chesney's auspices.

THE GILBERT COURT-MARTIAL.

The Bombay Gazette thinks it is very hard on Mr. Gilbert, who appears to have borne an excellent character, both as an officer and a gentleman, that for one false step he should be expelled from the army. But there is no help for that. The sympathies of the public are entirely on his side, so far as we can judge, and rightly so, but good nature and just sentiments must not blind us to the certain consequences of paltering with a delinquency so grave as that he committed. Before a whole regiment on parade he flung away his sword and said he would be damned ere he would obey his commanding officer, and for so doing he is justly cashiered. But having made this full admission, we must now ask—What is to be done with Colonel Kennedy? Here was a strange and perhaps unprecedented spectacle. At the court-martial, where Gilbert was tried for an offence against the law, where the commanding officer was prosecutor, not one word was said by any witness—and they were all officers and soldiers—in defence of that commanding officer's conduct. No fewer than ten officers were examined, and they all testified to the irritating, aggravating, harsh, overbearing, loud, and bullying manner of Colonel Kennedy; not one qualified his descriptive epithets. A Major, several Captains, more Lieutenants, one and all gave evidence on that head almost identical. It was shown that the provocative conduct of the Colonel was the subject of conversation; that an explosion, a row, was looked for from day to day; and that none knew whose turn it would be. Now either the officers were an excepti nal lot, and unfit to occupy the posts they filled, or the Colonel was the exceptional lot, who from defects of manner and temper and want of consideration for others, even when subject to his orders under arms, marred his own conception of duty in the execution thereof. We do not suppose that Colonel Kennedy intended to be harsh and irritating, but plainly he did not intend to be the reverse. Which is the more likely, that an able commanding officer had under him a number of inefficient officers, or that the officers were up to the average, and that the Colonel was deficient in temper and tact and propriety of demeanour? The evidence on the court-martial leads to the conclusion that Colonel Kennedy was not maliciously tyrannical and provoking, but that he had got into a habit of "nagging"—a habit which used to be common among sergeants, whatever it may be now—and that he had come to think nagging the best mode of improving his officers, and preserving discipline—a most unfortunate and disqualifying frame of mind, and one very likely to be subversive of discipline and an obstacle to improvement. That he lost his temper on parade when Mr. Gilbert threw down his sword is manifest from the fact that he, contrary to the Articles of War, put the young man in charge of an escort; and that he did not command the willing respect of his officers is shown abundantly by the evidence. We trust it may be true that the whole proceedings will be submitted to the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief; and that his Royal Highness, in the interests of the army, will consider them carefully with a view to deciding what should be done to Colonel Kennedy.

COURTS-MARTIAL.

The Madras Times observes that a general court-martial of any interest or note can seldom occur in England or India without exciting the ridicule, if not the indignation, of the public and the press; and yet, although the British Government and the military authorities are perfectly aware of this fact, we never hear of any practical steps being taken to place the administration of military justice on a sounder and more dignified footing. This apathy appears strange. We should suppose that an appreciation of shame, if not of justice, might provide some better system of military law, if, unhappily, we were not cognisant of the fact, that to alter or improve upon our existent military judicature is simply synonymous with the abolition of much valuable patronage not lightly to be resigned by those who have its dispensation in their hands. For very many years—from the date, we may say, of the famous court-martial upon Lieutenant Perry, of the 46th Regiment, the public and the press have tried hard to induce Government to annul the verbosity and absurdities of courts-martial, but without any practical success; for, although, as the consequences of the Crawley, and one or two other equally notorious cases, we were promised reforms in courts-martial procedure having a tendency to abolish its scandals, nothing has really been effected to make a general court-martial to-day one whit less ridiculous than a general court-martial of twenty years ago. The same waste of time, the same religious observance of technicalities, the same terror of responsibility, the same blunders, so puzzling to a civilian, are as characteristic of courts-martial now as ever; nor do we entertain any hopes of improvement in their procedure so long as it is the interest of one especial military department to make them as verbose and complicated as possible. It is a well-known fact that there are certain departments of the Government service, both in England and in India, which maintain a precarious existence only by their talent of finding work for themselves. The State has no actual need for their services, and it would probably be compelled to say so, if the departments alluded to were not ready to convince unbelievers of their utility by the exposition of enormous quantities of pen, ink, and paper work at any moment. Such work may be worse than valueless, it may possibly prove terribly costly to Government; still it is work, as its huge correspondence undoubtedly testifies, and as work, obtains a consideration not its due. We fear that the Judge Advocate's department of the British and Indian Armies comes within the category alluded to, and that the verbiage, the mistakes, and the haphazard justice meted out by courts-martial are principally to be attributed to the department which is especially organised to check such scandals. Judging from the annual number of general courts-martial which occur in the British and Indian Armies, wherever they are quartered, we should say that this department is by no means overworked; indeed, we are inclined to think that it would utterly collapse for want of employment if it was wanting in the sagacity to make work for itself. Luckily for the department, the work in which it deals is very easily made. The authorised proceedings of courts-martial are of so formal and pedantic a character, and so studiously directed to trivialities, that it is by no means surprising if a court composed of regimental officers failing to have all the procedure technicalities at their fingers ends should make clerical errors upon which the department is ever ready to pounce with alacrity. In civil law a slight error is not commonly of much moment. It may be rectified, and justice satisfied; but in military law the case is different, and a slight mistake will quash the whole proceedings, and afford the Judge Advocate's department active employment for a considerable time, even though the prisoner tried, guilty or not guilty, escapes scot free as the equivalent.

Native Ways.—Do natives prefer squatting on the ground or perching on seats? This is a question which the East Indian Railway have found it difficult to answer, but on the whole they are inclined to think that natives prefer seats. When the fourth-class carriages—without seats—were first introduced, natives of even the well-to-do classes crowded into them in preference to the third class, which were provided with seats. The company naturally thought the seats were an objection, and, to prevent the third class being utterly deserted, they reduced the fares. Upon this everybody returned to the third class. A better test would, we think, have been to mat and pad the floors of some of the fourth class carriages, at the same time raising the fares to those of the third class. The natives would then have been compelled at once to discover whether comfortable squatting was more to their taste than uncomfortable perching. As it was, their choice lay between discomfort in either case, while the difference between the fourth class fares and the (lowered) third class was so slight as not to make the saving worth the loss of dignity.—Pioneer.

The Madar Plant.—The medicinal properties of the madar plant have been tested by certain of the civil surgeons in Oudh, with the result that the differences of opinion still leave the matter in doubt. The majority appear to think it beneficial in cases of dysentery, though inferior in virtue to ipecacuanha; but the civil surgeon of Hurdui deems it quite equal to the latter in its effects on natives. The civil surgeon of Roy Bareilly agrees with the majority in their general views, but adds that the fresh juice of the plant had been usefully employed in cases of rheumatism. The surgeon at Baraitch speaks of it as useful in skin diseases, and in enlargement of the spleen and other glandular organs. The civil surgeon of Lucknow tested its qualities in the several institutions under his supervision, and pronounces it unsatisfactory; whereas, on the other hand, Dr. Galloway, of Kheree, "found it a most excellent remedy" among natives, after using it "very extensively." Quite sufficient has been elicited by the inquiry to justify further experiments. We would recommend a special committee of doctors to test the virtues of all the principal druggs commonly used by native practitioners at present unknown to us.—Delhi Gazette.

VICEREGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

The Council met at Government House on Friday, Jan. 13, his Excellency the Viceroy presiding.

The Hon. Mr. Cockerell moved that the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate the law relating to cattle-trespass be taken into consideration. The report of the Select Committee, he said, referred to the details of the measure and the working of the law. He then explained at some length the duties of cattle-pounders and the obligation of the police to arrest trespassing cattle. After some slight verbal amendments the motion was put, and agreed to.

The Hon. Mr. Chapman moved that the Bill to extend the Prisons' Act, 1870, to Coorg, be taken into consideration. The motion was put, and agreed to. The hon. member also moved that, in the last line, for "January," the word "February" be substituted, and also that the Bill, as amended, be passed. The motion was put, and carried.

The Hon. Sir Richard Temple introduced the Bill to amend the law relating to customs duties, and moved that it be referred to a select committee, with instructions to report in two months. The motion was put, and agreed to. The hon. member also presented the report of the select committee on the Bill to consolidate the law relating to the Government paper currency.

The Hon. Mr. Stephen introduced the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to pleaders, mukhtars, and revenue agents, and moved that it be referred to a select committee, with instructions to report in six weeks. The motion was put, and carried.

The Hon. Mr. Inglis introduced the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Abkari revenue in Northern India, and moved that it be referred to a select committee, with instructions to report in six weeks. The motion was put, and carried.

Miscellaneous.

TITLE OF HONOUR.—The Viceroy in Council has conferred, as a personal distinction, the title of "Rajah" upon Shumbhoo Narain Sing of Benares, in recognition of the high character and eminent services of his father, the late Rajah Sir Deonarain Sing Bahadoor, K.C.S.I.

SIR R. TEMPLE.—The Englishman asserts on "good authority" that there is not the least foundation for the statement that Sir R. Temple purposed amending the Civil Leave Rules. "There is no intention whatever of proposing any change in the rules in question."

LEGISLATIVE.—The Indian Mirror has reasons to believe that his Excellency the Viceroy is desirous of securing the services of an efficient native gentleman in the Supreme Council. It is said that his Excellency's choice has already fallen on the Hon. Mr. Justice Dwarka Nath Mitter.

THE NAGA CLANS.—The Government of India, says the Indian Daily News, has approved of the foreign policy of the Bengal Government, and has confirmed the sanction, accorded by the Lieutenant-Governor, to the continuance of the plan of receiving residentiary delegates from the different Naga clans to represent their respective committees at Samoogoodting.

TELEGRAPHS.—The Secretary of State is said to have sanctioned the appointment of a Superintendent of Traffic in the Telegraph Department, on a salary of Rs. 1,050 a month, rising to a maximum of Rs. 1,500, experimentally, but to have objected to the source from which the cost was proposed to be met, should the appointment be made permanent.

A MOHAMMEDAN CONVERT.—A Lucknow paper gives the following:—"By way of a novelty, we have to announce that Miss Donnelly, a young lady of hitherto irreproachable character, and considerable personal attractions, born of European parents, the daughter of Mr. Conductor Donnelly, of this station, has, at her own free will and pleasure, embraced Islamism, under the auspices of a Mohammedan Rajah of Oude, residing not five hundred miles from Nanparah."

THE LOSS OF THE "JOHN BANKS."— The Court of Enquiry which was recently held before the Civil and Session Judge of Chittagong into the circumstances attending the loss of the ship John Banks has resulted in the acquittal of the master of all blame. It is said that the Officiating Master Attendant of Calcutta, before whom the matter was first laid, came to a conclusion, from the same evidence, the reverse of that of the civilian judge. Captain McDougal is certainly to be congratulated on the good fortune which placed his vessel nearer Chittagong than Calcutta. As the Government took so long to decide whether or not to prosecute the master, two of the principal witnesses for the prosecution became impatient, and when the trial came off, were found absent not only without leave but also without a summons!—Indian Daily News, Jan. 17.

A SHARP REBUKE.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal comments sharply on the neglect of Commissioners, Judges, and Magistrates to inspect gaols in their divisions or districts. "The manner in which his orders of Feb. 4, 1869 have been generally disregarded compels him to remind all officers concerned that if they will not voluntarily show more respect to the orders of Government the Government will be driven to enforce obedience by such an exercise of authority as will make it plain that disobedience entails disagreeable consequences."

LOAFERS.—We every now and then receive grave complaints, especially from up-country, against the too facile kindness of managers of local relief funds and others, who will give loafers railway tickets to pass on their foraging expeditions to the north-west. These Pindarrees certainly seem to be getting more numerous just now, and as a rule their noses are very red. It looks as if Calcutta were disheartened by the bother of deporting them across sea, and so sent them forth to prey upon the provinces inland.—Pioneer, Jan. 16.

PROSELYTISM.—The Indian Mirror reports "another painful conversion case" at Agra:—The renegade in this instance is a married lady, and the zealous missionary engaged in the cause, as before in a similar occurrence, a governess entrusted by the husband to look over the interests, spiritual and temporal, of his spouse. The case is said to have created a great amount of sensation in the locality, and a part of it, we believe, was aggravated by the sudden disappearance of the husband, who, we are told, was unable to sustain the shock of the disaster. We have not heard the missionary version of the affair.

THE NAWAB NAZIM'S PALACE AT MOORSHEDABAD.—The Public Works Department, we learn from the Englishman, has made another conspicuous failure in the new palace being erected under the superintendence of the department of Moorshedabad. Cracks have appeared all over the building, and the Lieutenant-Governor has called upon the Executive Engineer, Mr. G. W. Vivian, and the Supervisor, Mr. G. F. Bartlett, to give an explanation of the causes of the failure of the buildings. This will give a fine opportunity to the Nawab Nazim in England to bring forward a further grievance against the Indian Government.

A DESERVING PRISON-MATRON.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has presented a gold watch and chain to Mrs. Philbert, the matron of the Russa female prison, in acknowledgment of the valuable service done by her in converting that den of idle and evil women into a perfect hive of industry. Lord Napier, Governor of Madras, who had seen the jail in 1866, was so struck with the change as witnessed by him on his last visit to Calcutta, that he brought the matron's exertions to special notice. Another year's experience has proved the soundness and permanence of the reform, and Mrs. Philbert has received the handsome testimonial above mentioned.—Pioneer.

THE LATE MR. HAYWARD.—The following further particulars are published by the Pioneer regarding the fate of poor Mr. Hayward. It would appear that on the evening previous to the fatal morning, from some interpreted glance or unfaithful word overheard, a suspicion of treachery crossed his mind, which induced him to remain on the watch all night. This he did, and sat up in his tent hour after hour, momentarily, no doubt, anticipating the last struggle, which, however, did not take place till daybreak, when the assassins rushed in, bound him and carried him and four of his servants to a wood, where they deliberately murdered them. The Munshi, it seems, did not meet his fate till some time later. It is believed to be the opinion of those in whose hand the investigation of the matter has lain, that the sole motive for the murder was the desire to possess the presents which Mr. Hayward was known to be bringing with him.

CIVIL.—The Financial Commissionership of Oude has become vacant by the appointment of Major-General Barrow to succeed Mr. Davies. The Mofussilite says that "speculations are rife as to who is likely to be appointed to that high post. Major Grouseley, Commissioner, we believe, has the strongest chance, but his claims, we fear, will be disputed by Messrs. C. Currie and Capper, Commissioners of Lucknow and Roy Bareilly, respectively." The Lucknow Times has been "given to understand that Mr. Capper will be appointed to succeed General Barrow, C.B., as Financial Commissioner." It is stated on good authority (we quote the Mofussilite) that Mr. E. F. Harrison, Bengal Civil Service, Comptroller-General of Accounts, Calcutta, will soon take leave to England. The following changes will thus in all probability take place:—Mr. Sandeman, Bengal Civil Service, will officiate for him, and Mr. Mangles, or Mr. Gay, or Mr. Kellner,—the choice will lie among these gentlemen—will probably manage the Bengal Exchequer. This will throw the Deputy-Accountant-Generalship of Bengal open to the most eligible candidates in the Financial Department, and it is very likely that either Mr. Clarke, or Dr. Cline, or, failing these, Mr. Mackey, will have to take up the duties at Calcutta. Colonel Babbage, Deputy Commissioner of Gujranwalla, will leave on furlough to England in the course of this month, and will be succeeded by Mr. Wood, from Oude. Why is it that an outsider is brought in to aggravate the grumbling of the Punjab junior civilians, already irritated by the slow promotion in this province?—Indian Public Opinion.

Lord Mayo.—The Viceroy was going out on another pig-sticking excursion on Sunday morning (Jan. 21). He left Scaldah on Friday night by the ten P.M. train, and was to go to a place called Pongsha. At the conclusion of the day's sport he was to return to Barrackpore. Lady Mayo would drive down to Barrackpore on Sunday afternoon, and the whole party return to Calcutta early on Monday morning.

Relief Funds.—A meeting of the Calcutta Committee of the "Captain Relief" and the "Sick and Wounded Relief" Funds was held on Monday, when the Hon. J. R. Bullen Smith, chairman, announced the receipt of Rs. 9,919 and Rs. 18,971-1-7 in aid of the two funds respectively. On Colonel Thuilier's recommendation, it was resolved that a special appeal be made to the Indian community in behalf of the sick and wounded in war, as the funds subscribed fall far short of the necessities of the case. The Captain Fund will be closed on the last day of February.

Cholera.—Dr. Bryden's huge report on cholera has, says the Pioneer, been favourably received by the British Army Sanitary Commission at the Horse Guards. The conclusion that they draw from their study of the volume is that the one thing needed for the expulsion of cholera from India is the drainage of the deltas of the Mahanuddy, Ganges, and Brahmapootra! Our contemporary trusts "that when (when!) the authorities have done their draining they will not be disappointed if cholera should continue. Drainage, we admit, works wonders, but it cannot quite work a miracle. If Lower Bengal were made more healthy, there would, we acknowledge, be less sickness; but even admitting the theory that 'cholera travels,' we dare not join the Horse Guards in looking forward to the absolute abolition of epidemics."

Road Steamers for India.—These engines had scarcely been tried and found successful when the Indian Government, with praiseworthy alacrity, purchased a small one of about 8-horse power, with a view to testing its adaptability to passenger and goods traffic in that country. The machine was placed under the superintendence of Lieutenant R. E. Crompton at Umballa, and the result of his experiment was so satisfactory to the Director-General of Post Offices in India, that, at his recommendation, the Governor-General in Council gave orders to purchase in England four engines, with indiarubber tires of great power, and capable of attaining an average speed of ten miles per hour. Mr. Thomson, with the assistance of Lieutenant Crompton, has completed the designs of these engines, and their manufacture has been entrusted by the Indian Government to Messrs. Ransomes, Sims and Head, of Ipswich, with instructions to make them as complete as possible in every detail, and perfect them with all the latest and most scientific improvements. It is intended to run them between two stations in the Punjab—viz., Rawul Pindee and Jhelum, sixty-eight and a-half miles apart. The trains to be worked by these engines will, on ordinary occasions, consist of one and on extraordinary occasions of two omnibuses, and will run the distance in seven hours, inclusive of all stoppages. One omnibus will carry twenty first, twenty second, and twenty third-class passengers, with 50 cwt. of mails and luggage, which will be sufficient for every-day traffic. From experiments already made there is no doubt that the four engines with their omnibuses could transport 200 men, with baggage, ammunition, and food for a week, a distance of 100 miles a day, or two batteries of 40-pounder Armstrongs of position, consisting of twelve guns with their ammunition, to the same distance.

Imports.—Calcutta, Jan. 18.—The quiet feeling with which the market closed last mail has continued, and the week's transactions sum up considerably under those of the preceding one. The dealers do not appear to get freely rid of their late purchases, and having still a considerable portion of these on hand, they have no requirements to enter the market, and at present there is an absence of speculation. Grey Shirtings: Transactions in 39-inch are now greatly curtailed, and prices are slightly under those current last mail. The wide widths are neglected, even at the low quotations given below. Grey Jaconets: Low marks of 39-inch continue saleable at rather firmer rates. Madapollams continue very quiet. T-Cloths very dull. Grey Mulls: 39-inch have been moderately saleable at rather better prices; 44-inch are much quieter, with easier prices. For Bleached Goods the market generally closes quiet. Grey Twist: 20's and 30's have slightly improved; 40's close very quiet, and prices have a weakening tendency.

Exports.—Calcutta, Jan. 18.—Saltpetre: Since the date of our last about 800 or 900 tons of Calcutta-washed saltpetre have changed hands at prices quoted in our last; the stock is about 10,000 to 12,000 bags. Rice: During the week a fair amount of transactions have been done in Table kinds at prices ranging from two to three annas higher than our last quotations. In Ballam and Mooghy kinds we have heard of very few transactions to report. Linseed: There is an active demand for shipment to America, but, owing to the scarcity of supplies from the interior, we have heard of no transaction to report. The prices have gone up one to two annas higher than we last quoted. Rapeseed is in active demand, but no transactions have been done during the week to report, owing to the paucity of stock. Poppyseed: No further transactions have been reported in the market since the date of our last. Teelseed: Nothing has been done during the week, owing to the scarcity of supplies. Jute: A fair amount of business has transpired during the week at prices ranging from one to two annas higher than our last quotations. Raw Silk: About 10 maunds Jungypore silk have been sold since the date of our last at Rs. 19-8 per factory seer. Silk Piece Goods: Same as before.

Madras.

The late Colonel Drury.—A committee of officers have opened a subscription list for the purpose of erecting a tablet at St. George's Cathedral, Madras, in memory of the late Colonel C. H. Drury.

Post-office.—It is said that Mr. C. A. Roberts, whose duties as Commissioner for the Settlement of the debts of Prince Azim Jah have been brought to a close, is to be nominated Postmaster General for the Madras Presidency.

Captain Aikman.—A Madras paper informs us that Captain Aikman, a well known retired officer who has been for some years doing a good work among people of the city, principally among the Mussulman population of Triplicane, is about to return to his native land; he will deliver his last lecture next Sunday, Jan. 22.

The Flora of Burmah.—The Government of India has sanctioned the deputation to Burmah of Mr. Kurz, the Curator of the Herbarium at the Botanical Gardens, Calcutta, preparatory to the preparation by him of a hand-book on the forest Flora of Burmah. Mr. Kurz is to be relieved of all other duty, and expects to complete his work in fourteen months.

A First-class Civilian.—For the first time since the retirement of Mr. H. D. Phillips there now appears at the head of the Civil Service List, corrected up to the end of last year, the name of one civilian (Mr. C. W. Reade) "of the class of thirty-five years' standing." The number of covenanted civilians on the strength of the Madras establishment on the 31st ult. was 171, of whom 91 are "competition-wallahs."—Madras Mail.

Military.—Colonel Rutherford is likely to be appointed to the charge of the Army Clothing Department, Madras, on Colonel Silver being transferred to the Military Secretariat as General Wilde's locum tenens.—The Poona Observer learns that cholera prevails to some extent amongst the families of the 14th N.I. just arrived at Vellore, and that energetic measures are being taken to arrest its progress.

THE MADRAS RAILWAY.—The Madras Railway was to be opened to Veerapore, a station on the Bellary Branch Line within fourteen miles only of the town of Bellary, on the 16th Jan. The Toongabudra Bridge has been tested with very satisfactory results, and Captain Prendergast, R.E., the Consulting Engineer for Madras Railways, intimated that it might be used for traffic from the 16th ult. Mails and passengers from Madras will now be carried to the north side of the Toongabudra, and communication between Madras and Bombay will thus be very much facilitated.

INTER-REGIMENTAL QUARRELS.—Saugor would appear sorely to need the attention of superior military authority. Regiment seems to entertain deadly hate to regiment, and street fights are not unknown in consequence. About the commencement of the new year a number of sepoys of the 40th Madras N.I. set upon a private of H.M.'s 19th Foot in the bazaar, and gave him a severe beating. This roused the 19th, and it was with difficulty their officers could restrain them from proceeding at once to have revenge in their own way. Eight sepoys, including two native officers of the higher non-commissioned grades, await trial by court-martial. These non-commissioned officers have also to answer for giving insolent replies to their superior officers when questioned concerning the outrage. The ill-feeling between the 40th N.I. and European soldiers is said to be of long standing, but the origin of it is not stated. A sepoy of the 40th N.I. has also been committed for trial, on a charge of murdering his mother by hurling a mill-stone at her head.—Madras Times.

TIGERS AT OOTY.—The shikaree world has been in a terrible state of excitement for the last week or two. Tigers, and rumours of tigers, have created immense sensation in the stations. Colonel Christie and his men are earning reputation at the tigers' mouth. We are informed that a party went out on Sunday last to a spot adjoining the Governor's shola, tracked a tiger, and after a little search came across him. The party formed line and got as near the beast as they safely could. Colonel Christie fired and hit the animal on some part of the body, but not fatally, for after receiving the wound the beast retired to the jungle and was discovered shortly after by two of the shikarees, who went after him, lying among some dense brushwood bleeding and panting from the effects of Colonel Christie's shot. One of the shikarees, we are told, took aim, but before he could fire, the infuriated beast sprang at him, grasped the gun, which he shattered to pieces, and then flew at the other shikaree, caught him on the shoulder and inflicted severe injuries. The poor man was found by his companions all but dead from fright and pain; that he escaped with life must have been owing to the enfeebled state of the animal. The unfortunate shikaree was carried to the hospital with wounds so deep and deadly that if they do not prove fatal he is likely to carry the scars to his grave. Colonel Hadfield and his sons, we believe, were asked to join the party, but Colonel Hadfield belongs to the old school, honours and obeys not only the spirit, but the very letter of the fourth commandment. Colonel Hadfield decidedly refused, and strictly forbade his sons to join the party.—Neilgherry Excelsior, Jan. 10.

LOSS OF A BOMBAY STEAMER AND FIFTY LIVES.

Information was received in Bombay on Tuesday, January 17, of the loss of the steamship General Outram, a small coasting steamer, commanded by Captain Teasdale, on the previous Sunday, while on her voyage from Cochin to Bombay.

She had some cargo, thirty of a crew, and passengers on board, numbering about fifty. She is reported to have experienced stormy weather from Cochin to Goa; and to have gone down near to Jeytapore on Sunday morning, after only twenty minutes' warning. Fortunately the crew had been seen by the steamship Phlox, which left Bombay on the 14th, and the captain, the European engineers, thirty of the crew, and three native passengers, have been taken by that steamer to Goa. They are reported to be in a pitiable condition. There is no mention of the officers of the steamer either as saved or missing. The first gentleman in the list of the missing is supposed to be Major M. W. Carr, of the Madras Staff Corps; next is Mr. G. S. Clay, of Messrs. Lawrance and Co., Bombay; the third is Mr. David Turnbull Stewart, engineer, also well-known in Bombay; and there is also Mrs. Teasdale, the wife of the captain of the lost vessel, who with her child had gone for the voyage with her husband. Major Carr, who had obtained privilege leave, and doubtless was on a holiday trip, is, if the supposition that this is the officer referred to, be correct, Assistant Inspector of Madras Police; and we find the following entered as his war services:—"Served during the war in Burmah 1852-53, and was present during the operations before, and attack on, Rangoon on the 11th, 12th and 14th April, 1852. Medal for Pegu. Was employed with field detachments on the Hyderabad frontier from 16th November, 1858, to 12th March, 1859." Mr. Clay, well-known and much respected in Bombay, had taken a run down the coast as a holiday trip. He left Bombay only on Thursday last, and was expected to return by the General Outram. That was known here on Wednesday, but it was hoped he had not taken that steamer. A telegram was sent to ascertain the facts, and all doubt was removed by an answer, received on Thursday, which stated that he unfortunately had departed for Bombay on board the vessel now lost. Mr. Stewart, who was living in Bombay with Mrs. Stewart and his family, had shortly since proceeded to Travancore to fit up an engine, and was now on his return to town. Much sympathy is felt for the relatives and friends of the missing gentlemen in their present distressing situation. There seems little hope, but of course it is premature to say all hope is given up. The Phlox picked up the survivors, we learn; but it is possible they were taken from the ship or from spars, and that some of those who are now missing were in a boat, and had been lost sight of in the course of the eight hours that elapsed ere the Phlox got to the rescue. One cannot say what may have been done in the emergency; but this may be the case, and the missing may yet be found. There is no mention, however, of any boat in the telegram; unsatisfactory as telegrams always are, it simply tells that these are "missing," and speculation as to their fate is useless.

The B. I. S. N. Company's steamer Burmah, which arrived at Bombay from Calcutta on Friday, reports hearing only by telegraph at Carwar of the wreck, and had seen nothing of the General Outram, but passed numerous bales of cotton floating about. Several native craft are reported to have been lost. The s. s. Phlox, by which the survivors intended to come, has, it seems, met with some damages on the passage; her paddle-boxes and bulwarks have been injured, and so she has to undergo repairs at Goa, and will not reach Bombay until Saturday or Sunday. We have not learned how the Phlox was injured. It may have been by the wreck whilst picking up the crew of the General Outram, or otherwise from the effects of the heavy seas. She, it is feared, is not the only craft that has been damaged, and a great deal of anxiety is felt by friends of those supposed to have been at sea off the coast on Sunday. Amongst other natives, the Memon community of Mahomedans seems to be apprehensive lest the joy of a wedding be marred by the storm, for a number of friends who were coming to the marriage ceremony of some "respectable" member of the sect in Bombay are supposed to have been in the General Outram.

The General Outram was a steamer that has been for some time engaged in the coasting trade, and measured about 200 tons. She belongs to Mr. Chunder Ramjee, Bazaar Gate-street. The vessel is covered by insurance.—Bombay Gazette, Jan. 21.

NOTES ON KATTYWAR.—II.

I have said Kattywar was divided into ten separate prants or counties, and that these again were sub-divided into innumerable principalities or States, great and small; but I did not say they were so sub-divided, cut up, and intermixed, as to render it an impossibility, with any degree of accuracy, to fix their number; suffice it, therefore, to say their name is legion and their nature heterogeneous; and that to attempt even a hurried description of them would require a perfect volume of letters. Of properly-defined States there are no fewer than one hundred and eighty-eight, four of which rank as first-class—viz., Drangadra, Joonaghur, Nowanuggur, and Bhownuggur, to the other States grades have been assigned in accordance with their territorial extent and position of the country. Altogether seven classes have been formed, with varying civil and criminal powers. Of second-class States there are ten, third class seven, fourth class five, fifth class fifteen, sixth class twenty-six, seventh class one hundred and twenty-one, ninety-seven of which latter have no jurisdiction whatever. The first class States have full power of life and death, save where British subjects are concerned; in which case permission to try must first be received from the Political Agent; in civil matters, however, they have full power. Second class can try their own subjects only for capital offences without permission from the Political Agent. Civil jurisdiction to any extent. Third class, seven years' rigorous imprisonment and fine to the extent of Rs. 10,000; civil jurisdiction to the extent of Rs. 20,000. Fourth class, three years' rigorous imprisonment and fine to the extent of Rs. 5,000; civil jurisdiction to the extent of Rs. 10,000. Fifth class, two years' rigorous imprisonment and fine to the extent of Rs. 2,000; civil jurisdiction to the extent of Rs. 5,000. Sixth class, three months' rigorous imprisonment and fine to the extent of Rs. 200; civil jurisdiction to the extent of Rs. 500. Seventh class, fifteen days' rigorous imprisonment and fine to the extent of Rs. 25; no civil jurisdiction.

Our present connection with Kattywar commenced in 1807; from which date up to 1820 its general administration was in the hands of the Resident of Baroda, but as this sort of supervision was found to be altogether inadequate and unsatisfactory, Government in that year deemed it advisable to make it a distinct and separate agency; the first agent being Captain Barnewall, who held the appointment from 1820 to 1826. Though this appointment is considered as belonging of right to the military service, there have been, since Barnewall's time, five civilians in charge; the last being the late Mr. Kinlock Forbes, who held the appointment jointly with Captain, now Colonel, Shortt from August 1859 to December 1860. When Colonel Lang retired in 1859, after a long and unostentatious reign of over fifteen years, it was found, from the enormous legacy of arrears he left behind him, that the then cumbrous system of administration must undergo a radical change; and accordingly, in 1863, the province was divided into four districts, each being assigned an assistant and extra assistant political and establishment, and each assistant having his head quarters as near as possible to the centre of his district.

This division of Kattywar into four districts has greatly facilitated the administration of the province. The Political Agent hears appeals from the decisions of his district assistants, the Superintendents of Rajcote and Gondal, Limree and Morvee States, and the special assistant at Bantoon; decides cases beyond their jurisdiction committed to his Court, and exercises a general control over all public affairs. The present assistants are first, Colonel S. C. Law, with head-quarters at Wudhwan in Jhalawar; second Captain P. H. LeGeyt, with head-quarters at Manekwara, on the borders of Soruth and Kattywar; third, Captain J. W. Watson, with head quarters at Soupoorie in Gohelwar; fourth, Captain Atkinson, Acting Political Agent, Muscat, his appointment being for the present held by Lieutenant H. L. Nutt, with head-quarters at Rajcote. In addition to these, the Political Agent is allowed a personal assistant, which office is held by Captain L. Russell, late Acting Third Assistant, and now on leave to England.

Notwithstanding the great improvement effected in the general administration of affairs by this change in 1862, the enormous amount of work entailed upon the whole staff of officers by the innumerable cases of appeal against the decisions of the various Durbar Courts led in 1863-4 to another vital but, judging from results, unhappy change. Formerly, all appeals from the judgment of the Durbar Courts were supposed to be heard and fairly adjudicated upon by the Political Agent and his assistants; but, by this last change petitioners are simply referred back to their respective superior Durbars for redress, the Political Agent holding said Durbars responsible for the due and honest discharge of the great trust confided to them. Theoretically, and gauged by the English standard, this system may be sound; practically, so far as my knowledge goes, it is a huge mistake, and one which has been the immediate cause of more oppression and injustice than I dare venture to estimate, or than it comes within the scope of this letter to depict. Suffice to say, so much discontent and oppression have been engendered through the introduction of this system not only amongst the poor ryots, but also amongst the Bhayads and Grassias, that another change must sooner or later be made if Government would avoid finally driving a host of wronged, and consequently reckless, men into open and savage outlawry. If it were possible to get all these superior Durbar Courts to fairly and fearlessly administer justice, unquestionably the system would be a good one for the province. As it is, I feel constrained to repeat, it is a huge mistake, and one which ought to be remedied with the least possible delay. Without expressing an opinion upon all the great Durbar Courts, I can point to one at least, where judgments have been a mockery, and trials a farce; where plaintiffs and appellants have either been treated with contempt, or received as their only reward, the watchful attention of their revengeful masters!

As the Political Agent is held mainly or solely responsible for the peace and quiet, and good management of the whole of this great province, with its hetherogeneous and conflicting interests and Governments, your readers from the short description I have given, will be in a position to form some idea of the extent of that responsibility; but I have not given, nor can I give, any idea of the tremendous difficulties with which he has daily to contend in the discharge of his multifarious and important duties. If any agent, anywhere, ever earned the title of "a zealous and energetic officer," the present Political Agent of Kattywar, Colonel W. W. Anderson, has done so. To him this province owes much, and, if information I have received be correct, is likely soon to owe him more; but I must not anticipate.

Such then is a brief outline of the province His Excellency the Governor will enter at Nowanuggur on the 10th December.

No previous Governor, so far as I am aware, has ever made such an extended tour through Kattywar as H.E. the Right Hon. the present Governor has chalked out for himself; and as he is credited equally with great foresight, wise discrimination, and resolute firmness, great hopes are entertained by every well-wisher of the province that his visit will lead to the immediate carrying out of many notoriously much-needed and important public works—notably railways; and, entering into the general enthusiasm, I trust these bright hopes may be fully realised.—Times of India Correspondent.

CONVOCATION OF THE UNIVERSITY OF BOMBAY.

The tenth annual Convocation of the University of Bombay for conferring degrees was held in the Town-hall on Tuesday afternoon (Jan. 10), and was attended by a large assemblage. His Excellency the Governor of Bombay, Chancellor of the University, being absent from Bombay, the Convocation was presided over by the Hon. Mr. Justice Gibbs, Vice-Chancellor.

The annual report having been read by the Registrar, the Vice-Chancellor rose and said: Gentlemen of the Senate,—It is, I am sure, a subject of sincere regret that the pressure of important business in the northern part of this presidency has detained his Excellency the Chancellor, and prevented him from presiding over the present Convocation. It is an absence we the more regret, as the interest he takes in the education of the people over whom he rules has been manifested on so many occasions, while his thoughtful care for this University is shown in the foundation of that which it is hoped will be its highest prize, the Chancellor's Medal—(applause)—a distinction which was offered for the first time at the examinations just over, but which I regret the examiners did not feel themselves justified in awarding. The present is the tenth Convocation for conferring degrees, and I think I may be allowed, therefore, in a brief manner, to review the past, and consider some of its results as guides to us for the future. In 1862 the first degrees were conferred; they consisted of four B.A.'s and four L.M.'s. These were the first eight names on the roll of graduates. Since then the numbers have increased yearly. Our first M.A.'s were conferred in 1865, our first LL.B.'s in 1866, and L.C.E.'s in 1869. Our rolls show, after the degrees conferred to-day: M.A., 28; B.A., 116; LL.B., 29; L.M., 25; L.C.E., 6; while 1,227 students in all have matriculated. In reviewing the returns for the past twelve years, it appears that 4,567 students have presented themselves for the matriculation examination, of whom 1,227 only have been successful. This small proportion of passed candidates has often been the subject of comment, and blame has been sought to be attached to the examiners for want of system or for over-strictness. Last year, out of 839 candidates, 142 passed, and in the present year, out of 877, 142 only were successful. Now, the main cause of the failure of the 735 in the last examination was their being unable to qualify in English. The almost constant proportion of passed to unpassed which each year's returns from 1859 show, to my mind, point but to one cause—not the over-strictness of the examiners or a too high standard, but the simple fact that the students come up before they are properly prepared. They have not profited by the advice of Sir Bartle Frere, when Chancellor, not to attempt to grasp their academical honours by hurrying through their studies for the examination. (Hear, hear.) This subject has led me to inquire into the results of the matriculation at the other Indian universities, and I find from the last "statistical abstract relating to British India" laid before Parliament and made up to March, 1869, that in Calcutta the percentage of passed men, calculated for the first ten years, is one-half or 50 per cent. In Madras it is greater than in Calcutta, being about 60 per cent., while in Bombay for the same period it is only rather over one-third, or say 34 per cent. These statistics have also enabled me to draw your attention to another very interesting circumstance; that is a comparison of the numbers who in the first ten years presented themselves for matriculation, compared with the male population included in the territorial ranges of the universities. The figures from the same return show the following results:—

	Males.	Candidates for Matriculation.
Calcutta, including Bengal, N.W.P., Oude, Punjab, Cent. Provs. and British Burmah ...	60,000,000 ...	13,185 ... 1 in 4,550
Madras	15,000,000 ...	2,993 ... 1 in 5,000
Bombay, including Sind	7,000,000 ...	2,679 ... 1 in 2,600

(Applause.) Now, bearing in mind that under the sister universities the matriculation examination is conducted at thirty-three places by Calcutta and at eighteen by Madras, while we conduct it solely in Bombay, to which place candidates come from Sinde and Guzerat in the North, the Berars on the N.E., and the confines of Madras on the South, we may, I think, congratulate ourselves on the greater desire for a university education which the natives under our own Presidency evince to those residing in either of the others. (Applause.) The following is a comparative statement of the degrees conferred by the three Universities, including the Convocations of 1870:—

	Calcutta.	Madras.	Bombay.
M.A.	23 ...	0 ...	23
B.A.	580 ...	164 ...	78
LL.B.	294 ...	62 ...	16
B.C.E.	5 ...	6 ...	0
L.C.E.	35 ...	0 ...	4
M.D.	4 ...	1 ...	0
B.M.	15 ...	2 ...	0
L.M.	126 ...	1 ...	22
	1,072	236	143

Here Bombay shows as to numbers at a disadvantage, but it must be borne in mind that we have, from the first, fixed and demanded a higher standard for most of our degrees than did Calcutta or Madras—in fact, they have within the last few years been raising their standards and are still considering the subject, so that any comparison drawn from the proportion of graduates to under-graduates would only be liable to mislead. The results of these few comparisons I have drawn between the three Universities will, I think, satisfy you, gentlemen of the Senate, that Bombay has not failed in her duty, that although the number of her graduates is small, yet that, having from the first fixed high standards for her examinations, she has ensured that those who hold her degrees have merited their honours by the soundness and extent of their learning. (Hear, hear.) On the report just read by the Registrar I have but few observations to make. The most notable fact is that to-day the first European British-born subject has been enrolled among the graduates of the University, the son of one who long laboured in the cause of education in Bombay, who was a fellow of this University and a frequent examiner of its students, and whose sudden removal from the scene of his labours was a matter of deep regret. I next notice the submission for competition of two new prizes beside the Chancellor's medal, viz., the James Berkley gold medal, unfortunately not awarded, and the Ellis scholarship for the best proficient in English in the B.A. examination, which has been won by a Mahomedan gentleman of the Kojah sect; one of two brothers who, having broken through the strong sectarian prejudicies of their race, have competed in the ranks of the educated youth of the Presidency, and have both succeeded in their object. Since I have come to this convocation a letter has been placed in my hands with a request that I should notice it to you at this assembly. I will, with your permission, state the purport of this letter, which is, that a sum of Rs. 6,000 in 5 per cent. notes has been tendered to the University for acceptance,—the interest, Rs. 300 a-year, to be devoted to a scholarship of Rs. 25 a month to be called the "Arnould Scholarship" in memory of Sir Joseph Arnould, who so long and ably presided as one of the judges of the late Supreme and present High Court—(applause)—the said scholarship to be held by the graduate who successfully passes the L.M. examination with the highest number of marks for a paper on Hindoo and Mahomedan Law. This is another instance of the yearly increase of the endowments of this University. (Applause.) And now, gentlemen, let us in conclusion see what answer the experience of the past ten years enables us to make to the questions suggested by your late Chancellor in his first address. Has the University answered the great end for which it was founded, viz., "the encouragement of her Majesty's subjects of all classes and denominations within this presidency in the pursuit of a regular and liberal course of education?" have those who have won its laurels proved themselves true children of their Alma Mater?—has the University established its reputation by providing men fit to be teachers of its students?—has it proved, as Sir Bartle Frere hoped it would prove, that oriental intellect is not worn out, that while it possesses great capacity to receive and retain knowledge it also has the power to analyse and combine, that it can now produce the same results of a high order of intellect as those of which the ancient literature of the country gives such abundant evidence?—above all, has it produced men who, while rising high in the ranks of scholastic ability and scientific learning, have shown themselves valuable citizens of the world? I trust the results of our past experience enable us to answer much of this in the affirmative. Already have three of the professorial chairs been filled from its graduates, besides many of those important posts, the headships of the high schools—papers on abstruse questions have been produced—the ranks of the bar and the medical service of the State have been recruited from its alumni. (Applause.) These are indeed subjects for sincere congratulations. But doubts have been breathed as to whether the University will turn out as valuable citizens of the world as did Professors Bell and Henderson, Harkness and Green, in the days of the old Elphinstone Institution;—it has been hinted that our best men will prove to be but pedants—that, however full of classical and mathematical learning they may be, they are not so well fitted for mixing with the world, for taking their part in the government of the country or in forming for their country a healthy and just public opinion, as were those who preceded them in their educational career. I mention these doubts as existing, and therefore as being worthy of a careful investigation by teachers, by graduates, and by students. At home most of our best men in all the professions in Parliament and in the State are drawn from our Universities; and while we have had our pedants, men from whose vast yet silent labours those training in the great schools at home have derived most important help, yet the leading men in England, as a rule, have been trained for their future distinguished careers by the Universities. Let it be so with us—let it not be said that the University here is unable to produce public men as well as its sisters in Great Britain and Ireland. (Applause.) It has succeeded in raising the moral tone of our youth, as all who have been engaged in carrying on the Government of this Presidency will heartily acknowledge. Let us add to this—let us endeavour more prominently to induce in our students habits of active thought and independence of opinion, which, if combined with personal modesty, will lead to success in the world—success, not only for the individual, but success for the country at large. (Much applause.)

The convocation was then dissolved.

Miscellaneous.

Portuguese Claims.—A correspondence, it is said, has been lately passing between the Government of India and that of Bombay, relative to a claim advanced on behalf of the Portuguese Government to import and export all goods at Surat at the uniform rate of duty of 2 per cent.

Dacoity.—A cause célebre, in the shape of a trial for dacoity of twenty men, is now before the Session Judge of Tanna, at Nassick. The prisoners were promptly arrested by Captain Wilson's police, and are now under trial on the evidence of an approver and other witnesses.

Dr. Livingstone.—There is another letter from the Zanzibar Political Agent, dated the 18th of November, which reports that by the latest account from the interior Dr. Livingstone, after visiting a place called Manme, had returned to Ujiji. "Vague rumours" had reached Zanzibar in regard to Sir S. Baker's expedition. If they are to be credited, the Pasha's force had had a deal of fighting and serious losses.

Indus Steam Flotilla.—Mr. J. Campbell, Accountant Indus Steam Flotilla, who proceeded to England on leave some months ago, is expected to return to Sind by the next mail steamer. It is said that under the new arrangements consequent on the amalgamation of the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi Railways, Mr. Smith, the present accountant of the Sind line, will be removed to headquarters at Lahore as assistant accountant, and that Mr. Campbell will succeed him, taking charge of the account branch of the Sind Railway, in addition to that of the Indus Steam Flotilla. It is said, however, that previously to Mr. Smith proceeding to take up his new appointment he will make a short trip to England.—Sindian, Jan. 14.

Military Pensioners.—The formation of the colony of military pensioners at Chalisgaum, in the Bombay Presidency, having proved a failure, the Government of India (says the Indian Daily News) has directed that all expenditure on account of it should be stopped, and the Bombay Government has been requested to report how the measure might be carried out. Since the formation of the above colony in 1861 it has cost Government Rs. 18,000 as salary for the superintendent, and since 1866 the superintendent, though drawing pay at the rate of Rs. 10 a-day, has also been employed as a railway magistrate at Khandeish. In addition to the above expenditure, the sum of Rs. 1,860 of irrecoverable advances has been written off. The Government of Bombay has also been requested to reconsider generally the question of expenditure for railway magistracies.

Tiger Traps.—Incredible as it may seem, Captain Rogers's string-and-gun trap for tigers has been tried with success. According to the Jubbulpore Chronicle, a man-eating tiger, "long the terror of the district," and "which has been known to attack a party and kill four or five persons at a time," was a short time ago despatched by having incautiously put his foot in a string which pulled a trigger which discharged a bullet which killed him. The bait employed was, as we read it, a dead woman. The extraordinary point of the narative is, however, that the tiger was in the habit of changing his residence every two days in consequence of the hot warfare waged against him by the local shikarees, who, we are told, were constantly in close pursuit. Captain Rogers must, therefore, be congratulated on his narrow escape from homicide.—Pioneer, Jan. 16.

Mazagon Land Company.—An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of the Mazagon Land Company (Limited) was held yesterday—Mr. Manisty in the chair—when the resolutions passed at the meeting on the 4th inst. were confirmed. These were to the effect of altering clause 100 of the articles of association, so that an agent can be appointed in place of Messrs. Ritchie, Steuart, and Co., who have resigned their office of secretaries and treasurers, and of cancelling the clauses for the appointment of Messrs. Ritchie, Steuart, and Co., or a European firm. The directors proposed that a vote of thanks should be accorded to Mr. Dickson for his services as manager of the company for four years, during two years and seven months of which he had received no remuneration, and that he should be asked to accept Rs. 5,000. An amendment reducing the amount to Rs. 2,000 was proposed and passed.—Bombay Gazette, Jan. 21.

The Elphinstone College.—At the instance of the Director of Public Instruction at Bombay, the local Government of that presidency is said to have recommended to the Supreme Government the appointment of some additional professors in the Elphinstone College. It appears that in the above mentioned institution one professor is required to give lectures to the students in three or four different branches of study. For instance a Professor of Physiology is required to deliver lectures in chemistry, botany, &c. The local authorities appear to be of opinion that a teacher, however talented he may be, can hardly be expected to do equal justice to the different subjects he is appointed to teach; and that the result is that the pupils are not well taught. The local Government is also said to have observed that the additional expenditure, on account of the proposed arrangements, will not be borne by the State, as money may be available from the local funds of the college. Besides, the institution is in a prosperous condition, the number of students on the rolls being large. The Government of India, considering the necessity of the measure, has sanctioned the appointment of three additional professors, on a salary of Rs. 700 each per mensem.—Indian Daily News, Jan. 18.

The Rain and the Cotton Crop.—We are indebted to Mr. Melville, General Manager of the Mofussil Press and Ginning Company, for the following information regarding the effect of the rainfall of Sunday last on the new cotton crop in the Khangaum, Oomrawuttee, and Akote districts:—"The agent at Khangaum gives two inches as the rainfall during the day, while a telegram despatched from Oomrawuttee at two o'clock this (Monday) afternoon informs me that it was then raining, and that business consequently was at a stand-still. The injury done to the cotton crop throughout the Berar districts is likely to be very serious. The ryots wanted the usual inducement of high prices this year to induce them to gather the crop at once, and most of the fields were therefore at that stage when a downfall of rain such as this could possibly do the most damage." Later, Mr. Melville forwarded us the following telegram, from which it would appear that the Broach districts have fortunately escaped the rain:—"Broach, 16th, A.M.—A few drops of rain fell last night — not even the hundreth part of a cent. Weather cloudy the whole of yesterday and to-day." It is satisfactory to learn that the damage done to the cotton piled on the "Green" at Colaba is very slight indeed. Much of the cotton now comes to Bombay in well pressed bales, and this renders it in a measure proof against a shower. Even the loose docras have escaped with little damage—probably because the owners were promptly on the spot with a plentiful supply of tarpaulins.—Times of India, Jan. 21.

Imports.—Bombay, Jan. 21.—We have to report a dull market for all descriptions of imports. The inquiry for the interior is most limited, and the activity in metals, noticed in our last report, has subsided. Grey Goods: The dulness noticed in our report of the 14th inst. still continues, but there has been little or no change in prices during the week. Dyed and Printed Goods: The following are the sales which have taken place during the week, viz.:—About 300 pieces Cambrics, at Rs. 2-15; about 1,000 pieces 45-inch Accoonets, at Rs. 3-4; and about 1,000 pieces Prints at Rs. 3-10 to 3-11. Grey Yarns: The market has continued dull throughout the week, with little or no change in prices. The sales which have transpired are as follows, viz.:—About 5 bales Mules No. 50, at 9⅜ annas; about 4 bales 80's at 15½ annas. Metals: The better feeling which existed during the previous week has subsided, and a decline of 4 to 6 annas per cwt. has taken places. We have to report the following sales, viz.:—About 1,600 cwts. Copper Braziers, at Rs. 44; about 360 cwts. Yellow Metal Braziers, at Rs. 36-12 to 37-13; about 250 cwts. Corrugated Iron at Rs. 9½; and about 200 cwts. Steel, in kegs, at Rs. 6-10.

Exports.—Bombay, Jan. 21.—Cotton: By the telegrams received during the week the Liverpool market has been firmer, and the price of Fair Dhollerah has gradually risen to 6¼d. to 6¾d., at which it stood on 17th January, the date of our latest message. But the market here has been dull and inanimate, and prices scarcely show any quotable alteration except New Khandeish, which, on account of its inferior condition may be quoted Rs. 7 to 10 per candy lower. The total purchases for export made in Bombay in the week amount to about 2,500 candies, among which there were—of Old Cotton, 1,170 candies of Dhollerah and Bhownuggur, at prices ranging from Rs. 173 to 190, according to quality; and 275 candies of Veraval at Rs. 165 to 178; and of New Cotton, 275 candies of Akote, at Rs. 204 to 205; 175 candies of Bersey, at Rs. 193 to 195; 125 candies of Khandeish, at Rs. 182 to 184; and 75 candies of Oomrawuttee, at Rs. 192 to 196. The market closes quiet. On Jan. 15 there was in Bombay a heavy fall of rain, which did a good deal of damage to the cotton on the Green. The rain began to fall before sunrise, and continued steadily all day and night; the rainfall amounted to 2 inches 20 cents. We also learn that heavy rains fell on the same day in the districts of Oomrawuttee, Khangaum, and Akote; and that the injury done to the crop (which had not been gathered) throughout the Berar districts is likely to be very serious.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

Pay and Allowances — Staff Officers.

The following letter from the Government of India in the military department to the Controller Military Accounts, No. 544, dated Dec. 13, is published for general information, in continuation of the order marginally cited [paras. 18 to 20 of G.G.O. No. 614 of 1865, p. 131, S.O.]:—

I am directed to acknowledge your letter No. 1,411G, dated Dec. 2, regarding the pay to be passed to Capt. J. Whybrow, unattached, late barrackmaster at Kussowlie, and in reply to acquaint you that the Right Hon. the Governor-General in Council is pleased to concur in your view, and to decide that, pending the orders of H.M.'s Government, when an officer of the British service employed in a staff appointment is removed from the Indian establishment by transfer to a regiment out of India, or is removed or promoted to the half-pay or unattached list, he will be allowed to draw, until he can be relieved of his office, the same aggregate rate of pay as he has been receiving prior to such promotion or removal. Such aggregate pay will include any British pay of the higher rank to which the officer may be promoted.

Conditions of Joining Staff Corps.

Extract from a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 276, dated Dec. 15, paras. 3 and 4.

Para. 3. Brevet major ——, of the Madras cavalry, in reply to an inquiry, has been informed that should he join the staff corps under the recent despatch of Aug. 8 he will not be required to give up any portion of his present furlough, unless his services are urgently required in India, and that he will be allowed to draw pay for the full period of such furlough. Should he take the full period of three years' furlough granted him, he will of course be only entitled to a further furlough hereafter, with pay of one year.

4. On joining the staff corps, and becoming subject to the new furlough rules, he carries with him into the corps so much service for pension as he is entitled to count under the old rules, i.e., all the time he has actually passed in India, or within Indian limits. This period, added to the time he may serve in the staff corps, will be his "aggregate service," and he will be entitled to count as service for pension a portion of such of this time as may have passed on leave subsequent to joining the corps, agreeably to the scale laid down in the new furlough rules.

Allowances to Officers Attached to Native Regiments.

Jan. 6.—No. 16.—Paragraph 2 of G.G.O. No. 723 of Sept. 4, 1864, laying down rules for the admission of allowances to officers attached to native regiments when performing the duties of other officers temporarily absent, is expunged, and the following substituted:—

Para. 2.—An officer directed to officiate in an appointment the pay of which is less than that of his substantive appointment in his regiment is not entitled to any portion of the staff salary of the less paid appointment, but he will draw the charge, contract, or office allowance attached to it. In such cases the arrangement for carrying on the duties of the appointment is a matter of regimental detail, which should be directed in regimental orders, and does not require the confirmation of Government or of the Commander-in-Chief. Thus, a second in command and squadron officer being directed to take charge of another squadron in addition to his own, or an adjutant being ordered to assume charge of a squadron, or a squadron officer or adjutant acting for a doing duty officer, would only be entitled to the allowance for the payment of the squadron or to the office allowance of the doing duty officer, in addition to his own staff salary and office or other allowances. In like manner, in the infantry, a wing officer being ordered to assume charge of the other wing in addition to his own, or of the adjutant or quartermaster's office, or an adjutant being directed to assume charge of the quartermaster's office, would simply draw the office, contract, or charge allowance of the appointment.

Re-engagement of Soldiers.

Head Quarters, Camp, Jan. 4.—With the sanction of the Govt. of India, the C. in C. is pleased to direct that, from and after the date of receipt of this order, soldiers who wish to renew their engagement in the British cavalry and infantry shall not be permitted to re-engage into the following corps, unless they are actually serving in one of those corps and re-engage in their own regiment:—20th Hussars, 21st Hussars, 2nd batt. 10th foot, 1st batt. 19th foot, 2nd batt. 21st foot, 2nd batt. 24th foot, 2nd batt. 25th foot, 38th foot, 3rd batt. 60th foot, 79th foot, 96th foot, 104th foot, 105th foot, 106th foot.

2. Special cases may be referred for the consideration of the C. in C.

3. Attention is directed to G.O. No. 49 of 1868, requiring that the transfer of soldiers on re-engagement must receive the previous sanction of the C. in C., or of the C. in C. in Madras or Bombay.

The Army Sanitary Commission, to whom Dr. Smith's proposal for removing the sewage of Calcutta was referred, have disapproved of it.

Adjutants' Leave.—The following is to be substituted for paragraph 5 of G.O. No. 182 of 1870:—"Leave to Europe.—Adjutants on obtaining leave to Europe on private affairs, who are permitted to retain their appointments for one year after four years' service in India, or for two years after eight years' service. They also retain them on proceeding on medical certificate to Europe." Order books to be corrected accordingly.

Leave and Allowances.—The Gov. gen. in Council has ruled that when an officer, though allowed by the Government or head of department which he serves to retain a lien upon an appointment, ceases to draw any portion of the salary or allowances of the appointment, another officer may be appointed substantively for a time only, and may draw the full pay of the office while so temporarily holding the substantive appointment.

Civil Furloughs.—The following civil servants have obtained furlough to Europe and leave of absence, on medical certificate (in January), under the Rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified:—Mr. S. A. Reade, assistant engineer, 1st grade, Hyderabad, for three months, for the purpose of studying the native languages, with effect from such date as he may avail himself of it. Mr. W. D. Brockman, executive engineer, 2nd grade, Oude, for twenty months, with effect from the date on which he may avail himself of it. Capt. W. Battye, attached to the Meywar Bheel Corps, has one month's preparatory leave from Feb. 1, to enable him to appear before a medical board in Bombay, with a view to obtaining furlough to Europe. Dr. M. Thomson, Chemical Examiner to Government, N.W.P., has the usual subsidiary leave to enable him to reach the port of embarkation preparatory to proceeding to Europe, with effect from Jan. 10, 1871.

Military Furloughs.—The following officers have obtained furlough to Europe and leave of absence, on medical certificate, under the rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified (in January):—Lieut. col. (brevet col.) W. Fullerton (deputy judge advocate, Sirhind division) to Bombay, for one month, from date of availing himself of it, preparatory to embarkation, on private affairs. Capt. W. F. Bartleman (adjt. 10th N.I.) to Calcutta, from Dec. 20, 1870, to Jan. 20, 1871, on urgent private affairs. Major O. L. Smith, of the Bengal staff corps, district superintendent of police, 1st grade, Fyzabad, Oude, to Australia and Europe, for two years, on private affairs, embarking at Bombay. Lieut. col. (brevet col.) H. Hoseason, of the Madras staff corps, commandant, 1st infantry, Hyderabad contingent, for two years. Lieut. gen. G. Campbell, C.B., R.A., on private affairs, for fifteen months, from date of embarkation at Bombay. Major R. B. Baker, 39th foot, from date of embarkation. Capt. H. O. Cumberlage, officiating wing officer, 24th N.I., to Bombay, for one month, from date of availing himself of it, preparatory to embarkation, on private affairs. Capt. H. W. Webster, officiating wing officer, 30th N.I., to Bombay, for one month, from date of leaving regiment, preparatory to embarkation, on private affairs. [This cancels the leave granted to Capt. Webster in G.O., March 26, 1870.] Capt. W. G. Keppel, doing duty with the 4th Goorkha regiment, to Bombay, for one month, from date of availing himself of it, preparatory to embarkation, on private affairs. Capt. E. G. V. Holloway, attached to the 6th Madras N.I., to Bombay, from Dec. 18, 1870, to Jan. 17, 1871. Asst. surg. J. Knox, 5th N.I., to Bombay, from Dec. 4, 1870, to Jan. 14, 1871, preparatory to applying for furlough to Europe. Vet. surg. H. Farrell, to Bombay and the Neilgherries, from July 6, 1870, to Jan. 6, 1871.

Examinations in the Native Languages.—The following officers have passed the prescribed standard, and are declared qualified in the vernacular for the educational department:—Mr. W. E. Wade, head master, Rohtak Zilla School; Mr. C. E. Kirkpatrick, head master Guzerat Zilla School. The following gentlemen have passed the examinations prescribed for junior officers in the commission of British Burmah:—Under the rules dated Oct. 17, 1868, 1st branch, Burmese language, lower standard: Mr. E. INDIAN APPEALS BEFORE THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

IFTIKAROONISSA BEGUM AFZUL MUHUL v. ANJAD ALLY KHAN ND OTHERS.—This appeal from Oude, which was commenced on ebruary 3, was resumed and concluded on February 4. Sir Roundell Palmer, Q.C., and Mr. J. D. Bell were for the appellants; Mr. eith for the respondents. The appeal was brought by special permission of her Majesty against a judgment of the Commissioner of Oude, he having refused to allow the appellant a sum claimed as ower out of the estate of her deceased husband, known by the name f Nawab Mooneesweeroodowlah. The deed of dower was stolen at he time of the Mutiny, but afterwards restored. Lord Justice ames, after consulting the other members of the committee, gave udgment, and said their lordships would recommend to her Majesty that the appeal should be dismissed with costs, thereby firming the decision of the Commissioner of Oude on the question f dower.

GUTHRIE v. ABOOL MOZUFFER.—This appeal, which was part heard n Feb. 4, was resumed and concluded on Feb. 6. It was an ex arte application to their lordships. Sir Roundell Palmer and Mr. eith were for the appellants. The appeal was from a judgment of he High Court of Judicature in Fort William, in Bengal, bearing ate the 30th of November, 1863—more than seven years ago—and rose out of an action of ejectment. Their lordships deferred udgment.

SHAH MUNEERODDEEN KHAN v. ODASEE KOOER AND OTHERS.—UDGMENT.—This was an appeal from the same Court as the preeding case, and the judgment was given so long ago as July, 1862. Ir. Leith was for the appellant, and Mr. J. D. Bell for the respondents. The suit was in the nature of an action of ejectment. The present appeal had been pending more than seven years. Lord Justice ames gave a very brief judgment. It was not necessary for their ordships to go into the stringency of the enactments referred to, nd they did not find any special circumstance in the case that the roperty seized was the property of a rebel. Their Lordships would ecommend that the appeal should be dismissed with costs.

RAI IBRAM BULLEE v. AGHA HOSSEIN KHAN.—JUDGMENT.—This s an appeal from a decision of the Financial Commissioner of ..., dated the 18th of September, 1866, affirming a decree of the evenue Commissioner given in the same year. The appeal was in eference to some villages which had been mortgaged, and fraud, onspiracy, and duress were alleged. Lord Justice James, in giving udgment, said the Courts below had opportunities of judging of the llegations made, and their lordships saw nothing in the case to disurb the finding of the Courts. The appeal would be dismissed vith costs.

RAJENDRO NATH HALDAR v. BROJENDRO NATH BANERJEE.—JUDGMENT.—This appeal from India—the last during the present sittings —related to the validity of a will. Sir J. Colvile gave the judgment f the committee, allowing the appeal, and reversing the opinion of he Court below.

Miscellaneous.

ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY, REGENT'S-PARK.—A meeting of this soiety was held last Saturday; Mr. Edmund F. Moore, Q.C., in the hair. Amongst the donations reported were samples of the plant roducing the "Rheea" fibre, presented by the India-office. The ecretary laid on the table specimens of the same plant grown in he Society's garden, with samples of the prepared fibre and fabrics nade of the same, and explained the cultivation of the plant and reparation of the fibre, which the Indian Government were encouaging by the offer of a prize of £5,000 for the improvement of mahinery for extracting the fibre.

FALMOUTH, GIBRALTAR, AND MALTA TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—It is nnounced by the Falmouth, Gibraltar, and Malta Telegraph Comany that, in consequence of their cable having been repaired, direct ub-marine communication with Egypt, India, Singapore, and Java re re-established. Arrangements have been made between the Falnouth Company, the Indian Government Telegraph Department, nd the Indo-European Company for the adoption of a remunerave tariff for messages to India. This revision, the directors state, ill cause a temporary increase of the rates to places beyond India, ut negotiations are in progress for shortly effecting a considerable eduction of the charges to Penang, Singapore, and Java.

MILITARY.—The Indian relief troopship Crocodile, Captain Parkyn, as nearly completed the shipment of her stores. She will embark few soldiers on Wednesday, and leave on Thursday for Queensown, to embark the remainder of her troops for Alexandria. The eamship Atalanta, with troops for Madras, arrived at Port Said on he morning of February 9, all well, and proceeded through the anal. The Times Malta correspondent writes under date of Valetta, ebruary 3:—"Her Majesty's Indian transport Serapis, Captain H. . Grant, arrived here yesterday evening at 6.30, from Alexandria, having on board 1,093 time-expired men and invalids. She leaves at 4 o'clock this afternoon for Portsmouth, if the repairs found necessary in her machinery can be effected by that time."

SUEZ CANAL.—The Post is informed that overtures have recently been made to Sir Daniel A. Lange by persons of the highest distinction in this country with a view to induce him to form a board of English directors in London in connection with the Suez Canal, in order to give them, in conjunction with himself, a voice in the management of the company's affairs, and at the same time an additional amount of capital. Although Sir D. Lange could not concur with all the reasons which were put forward, he frankly expressed his readiness to assent to any legitimate arrangement of the kind suggested, but said that he would not wish to take any steps in the matter without the full knowledge and consent of M. de Lesseps, who is in Paris.

THE ARMY ESTIMATES.—The Army Estimates were issued on Saturday morning. The increased expenditure will involve a charge of £2,886,700 over the Estimates of last year. The horse artillery has been increased by six batteries, twenty garrison batteries have been converted into field batteries, and the remaining garrison batteries increased in strength. The artillery depot has also been largely increased. The nine regiments of cavalry are taken at a full war strength of men, and all the regiments will consist of four squadrons. The troops of the engineer train have been strengthened, and one troop added for telegraph equipment. All the battalions of the Foot Guards and 23 battalions of Infantry have an establishment of 850 rank and file as being first for active service. The Army Service Corps has been increased by three companies. The Army Hospital Corps has also been augmented. The Ceylon Rifle Corps will be reduced by two companies on the withdrawal of the troops from Labuan, where they will be replaced by a police force.

DEATH OF CANON MELVILL.—We regret to announce the death of the Rev. Canon Melvill, of St. Paul's, which took place last Thursday at the residentiary house in Amen-court. The deceased, who was in his 73rd year, was of a Cornish family. He was sent to a private school kept by Mr. Bright at Walthamstow, and afterwards went to St. John's College, Cambridge; there he was second wrangler and first Smith's prizeman. He was immediately made a fellow of Peterhouse, and rapidly obtained other appointments. Ten years afterwards he married, and became incumbent of Camden Chapel, Camberwell; his fame as a preacher, which had been great in the University, spread rapidly in the metropolis. He was next appointed to the Principalship of the East India College at Haileybury, near Hertford, which he held until the dissolution of the College, about twelve years ago. He was elected to the Golden Lectureship in St. Margaret's Church, Lothbury, which he held until 1856, when he resigned it on being appointed to the canonry of St. Paul's Cathedral. In 1863 he was appointed by the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's to the rectory of Barnes, Surrey, which he resigned last year, to the great regret of his parishioners.

A NEW GUN CARRIAGE.—A modification of Captain Moncrieff's gun carriage was tried on Friday afternoon at the Royal Arsenal proof butts. It is similar in principle to the recently adopted Moncrieff carriage for barbette batteries, but the system has been very much simplified and improved by the carriage itself being dispensed with, and the trunnions of the gun placed in the elevator, at the other end of which is the counterpoise, which raises it to the firing position above the battery. The trials on Friday were of a private and preliminary character, the only spectators being Captain Moncrieff and a few friends; but though the mechanism was in a crude state, and one part of the gear had been damaged in removal from the factory, the result of the experiments was amply satisfactory. The carriage tried was that adapted to the 7-inch breech-loading gun, and as the ordinary wooden bed of a siege gun-carriage is used for the elevator to work in, the principle is described as a conversion of the service system. The cost of manufacture has been greatly diminished by the abolition of the iron carriage, the value of the apparatus tried on Friday being only £150, while those hitherto manufactured for the 10 and 12-inch guns have cost from £800 to £1,000 each.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.—A measure which will largely accelerate promotion in the ranks of the Royal Artillery, and thereby increase the popularity of that service, has just emanated from the War-office in the shape of a Royal warrant to govern pay, position, and pensions of the army and all Government establishments. In this it is provided that master gunners shall be placed at the head of Class 1 of non-commissioned officers, and that their total pension shall not exceed 2s. 6d. per diem. This will seriously affect the present master gunners, who, according to the existing regulations, may accumulate pensions at the rate of a penny a day for each year's service, added to their allowance as non-commissioned officers, and eventually retire on 5s. per day or more. There will now be no inducement for them to remain year after year until they are too old for employment in other occupations, and the non-commissioned officers and men of junior rank have the encouraging prospect of a healthy promotion which will enable a large proportion of the most intelligent and well-conducted among them to reach the higher grades of the service. The opportunities of advancement thus afforded will also, it is hoped, induce more men of a superior class to join the Royal regiment. A new description of case shot for rifled ordnance (hitherto the most unsatisfactory of artillery projectiles) has been tried at the Royal Arsenal and at Shoeburyness with great success, as it fulfils the principal desiderata of case in breaking up easily at the requisite moment, and scattering its contents over a very large area. The new case shot, the inventor of which is Mr. Widgery, a foreman in the Royal Laboratory, has been ordered for manufacture in large quantities.

Imperial Parliament.

House of Commons, Feb. 9.—The Indian Budget.—Mr. Grant Duff gave notice for Friday, February 24, to move that the House should resolve itself into a committee to consider the revenue accounts of India. (Hear, hear, and a laugh.)

Army Purchase.—Mr. Trevelyan gave notice for Tuesday, the 21st, to move: "That the purchase and sale of commissions in the army should be abolished, and that the constitution and existing management of the Horse Guards is incompatible with an efficient reorganisation of our military system." (Loud cheers.)

The Black Sea Conference.—Sir C. W. Dilke gave notice for to-morrow to ask whether the papers relating to the Conference which were to be laid upon the table would contain all the communications received by her Majesty's Government respecting the proposed action of the other Powers consequent upon the circular note of Prince Gortchakoff.

Army Organisation.—Mr. Cardwell gave notice that on Thursday next he should move the Army Estimates in Committee of Supply, and should ask leave to bring in a Bill for the better regulation of the Army and the Auxiliary Land Forces of the Crown. (Cheers.)

House of Commons, Monday, Feb. 13.—India.—In reply to Colonel Sykes, Mr. Grant Duff said that all the papers and correspondence connected with the inquiry of the Bonus Compensation Committee at the different Presidencies in India would be laid on the table.

Army Estimates.—Mr. Cardwell, in reply to Sir John Pakington, said that he would not ask for a vote on the Army Estimates till after the reorganisation and scheme of the Government had been proposed. The course he proposed was to make the statement in committee, report progress afterwards, and then introduce the Bill, allowing a week for its consideration.

LEGAL EDUCATION.

The Law Times observes that the subject of Legal Education in all its ramifications has for some time occupied a considerable amount of public attention. The general opinion seems to be in favour of the view advocated by the Legal Education Association, viz, of a compulsory examination for all students; and it is to be regretted that the Benchers do not at once recognise the demand of the public, and, availing themselves of the appliances at their command, resolve that no student shall, after a certain date, be called, unless he has passed an examination. The Benchers have all the requisite machinery at hand to carry out this resolution, but they seem by their tardiness to recognise public opinion disposed to let this, one of their greatest privileges, pass out of their hands. They have six Readers, who have been selected with care to discharge the duties in the several departments of the law. There is no excuse, therefore, for any student who has not prepared himself to pass the examination. But the hitch seems to be in the omission to make attendance at three at least of the lectures and classes compulsory upon the students. There is one department of law where this compulsory test ought not to be omitted any longer, because the evils resulting from the neglect are more serious than any other. We allude to the Hindu, Mahomedan, and Indian laws. There are several gentlemen, either civil servants on leave in England or natives of India, who are members of the several Inns of Court, and it is to be regretted that the Benchers should call these gentlemen without exacting from them some test that they possess something more than a mere smattering of the native laws which they will be called upon to administer or assist in administering in India. We always feel regret when we hear of gentlemen intending to practise or to enter the Civil Service in India being admitted to the profession without giving some evidence of their capability to discharge the duties of the judicial office, which, sooner or later, they are destined to fill. The natives have, in a forcible manner, already shown their repugnance to having these laws administered by men who are ignorant of their first principles. The Benchers, we are sure, will, in this view of the matter, hesitate to clothe with the character of barrister gentlemen who have never attended the lectures and classes of three Readers at least, including the Reader on Hindu, Mahommedan, and Indian Laws, unless in very special cases. We hope soon to hear that the Benchers have taken some steps to remove this stigma from their administration of the Inns of Court. The consequences of this ignorance of these laws are much more serious in India than they are at home. Gentlemen going out there in the character of barristers are presumed to have some knowledge of the native laws, and the natives soon discover the mistake, and are much disgusted and very prone to resist what they regard as a trick upon their credulity. These observations are verified by the fact that a very considerable amount of the time of the High Courts in India is occupied in hearing appeals from the Mofussil, upon points which, if the Judges of the Courts of First Instance were acquainted with the first principles of the law, would never arise. The expense and other evils consequent upon this state of things occasion great dissatisfaction amongst the natives.

Mails to India, &c.

The Mails to all parts of India, via Southampton, are now made up at the General Post Office, London, every Saturday at 8 A.M., and those via Brenner and Brindisi every Friday, at 6 P.M.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

Ameer Khan.—Ameer Khan, the alleged Wahabee conspirator, whose imprisonment by order of the Executive Government has been the subject of much litigation in Calcutta, and whose case has now been brought before the Privy Council, was liberated on the 10th ult., but, when a few paces from the gaol door, was apprehended on a warrant. He was to be tried for treason at Patna on the 20th Jan. Mr. Anstey has been retained in the Wahabee case at Patna on behalf of the defence.

Sir W. Merewether. — The Commissioner in Sind, from latest accounts in the Sindian appears to have reached Sukkur. Thence he was to proceed to Larkhana, the Meerpoor districts, and then to Jacobabad. After his return to Kurrachee he will visit Shikarpore. Sir William Merewether, in order to place himself in a position to furnish all particulars in detail for the guidance of Sir Henry Durand, visited (says our contemporary) places in Sind lately which were never trodden by the foot of a European.

CHALLENGE to the WORLD.—The Bristol Daily Times and Mirror, August 5th, has the following:—"Messrs. J. C. Swan and Co., of 16, Queen-square, in this city, have invented a pocket microscope, which is a marvel in all that such an instrument should be. It has great power, remarkable definition, and does not require focussing. The cheapness of the article will make it exceedingly popular when its merits are more widely known. It is called the 'Bristol Microscope,' and is a great credit to the inventor, as much for its extreme simplicity as its power."—The Western Daily Press says:—"The Bristol Microscope has a magnifying power of 20,000 times," &c., &c.—The Western Daily Telegraph says:—"The Bristol Microscope is the most compact and useful scientific instrument we have ever seen; it possesses extraordinary power, and is very easily managed," &c. The price of the Bristol Microscope is only 2s., or, free by post, with printed directions, for twenty-eight stamps.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

For the cure of debility, biliousness, liver and stomach complaints, this inappreciable medicine is so well known in every part of the world, and the cures performed by its use are so wonderful, that it now stands pre-eminent above all remedies, more particularly for the cure of bilious and liver complaints, disorders of the stomach, dropsy, and debilitated constitution. In these diseases the beneficial effects of the Pills are so permanent that the whole system is renewed, the organs of digestion strengthened, and a free respiration promoted. They expel from the secretive organs and circulate the morbid matters which produce inflammation, pain, fever, debility, and physical decay, thus annihilating, by their purifying properties, the virulence of the most painful and devastating diseases.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. WOOD stated that Dr. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, being the Inventor was deliberately untrue, which he regretted had been sworn to. Eminent Hospital Physicians of London stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the discoverer of Chlorodyne; that they prescribe it largely, and mean no other than Dr. Browne's.—See Times, July 12, 1864.

The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

This INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which it is found eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec. 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered the patient recovered.

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

Beware of spurious and dangerous compounds sold as CHLORODYNE, from which frequent fatal results have followed.

See leading article, Pharmaceutical Journal, Aug. 1, 1869, which states that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the Inventor of Chlorodyne; that it is always right to use his preparation when Chlorodyne is ordered.

CAUTION.—None genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, January 28; Agra and Madras, January 26; Calcutta, January 25.

THE Bombay papers give a few more particulars touching the loss of the General Outram. That ill-fated steamer had hardly got clear of Goa on her way from Carwar to Bombay, when it came on to blow hard from the south-west, followed ere long by a heavy sea, which ultimately threw her on her beam ends. "Sea after sea broke over her, and in a few minutes she went down," at about 3 A.M. of the 15th January. From that time till after 9 A.M., when the Phlox steamer came to the rescue, the survivors had kept themselves afloat on bales, casks, spars, and so forth. No one seemed to know what had become of the cabin-passengers, so suddenly did the ship go down. They were probably drowned in their berths. According to the captain there was no sign of imminent danger before the event. To the names of Europeans lost, as given by us last week, must be added that of Mrs. Carr, who perished with her husband, Major W. Carr. Three of the crew and about thirty native passengers were lost. Some idea of the lives lost on the Malabar coast during the same gale may be formed from the fact of the steamer Elphinstone having picked up by the way only thirty-three men out of crews amounting in all to about a hundred.

MR. DAVIES, the new Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, has passed through Lahore on his way to that part of the frontier where his predecessor had purposed meeting Sir W. Merewether, the Commissioner of Sindh. It has long been supposed that the meeting in question had been planned with the object of ultimately annexing Sindh to the Punjab—a measure whose expediency speaks for itself. Sindh, a mere accidental excrescence of the Bombay Presidency, belongs by its geographical and strategic position to the Punjab. According to the Times of India however, the true object of this meeting has less to do with any scheme of annexation than with the view of reconnoitring a certain border plain about thirty miles westward of Dera Ismael Khan. It lies high on the main road to Ghuznee, near the source of the Goormul river, and of course on the British side of the Suliman Range. This Shum plain, as it seems to be called, offers a good strategic point for a strong outlying post commanding the lower or Quetta entrance into Afghanistan. The reported intention of the Government to occupy it with troops from both Sindh and the Punjab looks very like a step towards placing the whole frontier under one command.

THE Indian papers publish the correspondence between the Indian Government and the Secretary of State with regard to the new department of Agriculture and Commerce. In accordance with the India Office reply, dated September 30, 1870, the new scheme is gradually acquiring shape. Its passage through the Council is said to be far from smooth. Of its main purposes we gave a sketch last week. One of its chief recommendations in the eyes of the economical will be the very small amount of additional cost involved in its execution. In point of fact a good deal of the work now irregularly distributed among several departments will be concentrated under a new manager, and the pay of his establishment made up by clippings from the other offices. When these and other details have been finally settled, the new department will go to work with a fair prospect of advancing the public weal.

THE Civil Service of Bombay feel much aggrieved at the number of good appointments to which the Indian Government has the credit of promoting any but Bombay Civilians. The value of these thirteen prizes from which they are so unkindly excluded ranges from about £3,800 a-year, for the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh or Mysore, to £6,600 for the Resident at Hydrabad. In the memorial they have presented to the Supreme Government they complain of this one-sided dealing as a grievance and a discouragement to the service to which they belong. If their facts are trustworthy, their case does seem a little hard.

WE are sorry to see that Colonel Malleson has, after all, been compelled to take sick leave to Europe, in consequence of his late accident. During his absence Mr. J. D. Gordon, Judicial Commissioner of Mysore, will have charge of the young Maharajah. Mr. Gordon was formerly Private Secretary to Lord Lawrence. Mr. Ross D. Mangles is to act, we hear, for Mr. Gordon.

WHILE the ex-Nawab of Tonk is pleading his cause at home, his son, Ibrahim Ali Khan, has been formally installed in his place. This crowning blow to the father's hopes was dealt on the 19th January by Colonel Brooke, Political Agent for Rajpootana.

THE Indian Government has aimed what the Bombay Gazette thinks a heavy blow at jobs, by decreeing that, "as a general rule," no one over twenty-five years old shall enter the Uncovenanted Service. Is our contemporary serious?

The Indian Paper Currency Act, which passed through the Council on the 20th January, has received the Viceroy's assent. So has the Cattle Trespass Act.

LORD NAPIER, according to a recent telegram, is going or gone to Cachar to take measures for restoring peace on the North-Eastern frontier. Mr. Edgar has been heard of, and was expected to meet the relieving force about the 12th of this month. It is said—in the telegram—that some of the 4th N.I. were guilty of misconduct before the Loshai raiders.

One feature of Mr. Cardwell's scheme for reorganising and enlarging the Royal Artillery appears on the face of it open to grave objection. His short way of adding to the strength of the horse artillery in England is to withdraw five horse batteries or thirty guns from India. The wisdom of this move, especially under existing circumstances, does not seem very clear. England's right arm in India may be said to consist of her artillery, and we certainly were not aware of her having grown too strong in respect of that useful member. No such reduction formed part of those lately ordered in the Indian Army. Why then should this reduction be deemed expedient now? If India can spare these thirty guns at a time of strange political disquietude both there and here, could she not have been saved the cost of them for many years back? It is also proposed to break up two Indian brigades of horse-artillery and distribute the batteries among the other brigades, each of which would thus contain ten batteries instead of eight. This is an odd way of correcting an undoubted fault. A brigade of eight batteries being already much too unwieldy, the excess will be remedied by further additions. It would have better served all practicable ends to have cut each of the original brigades into two.

We are glad to see that the teachings of what may now be called the late war have left some fruitful impressions on the official English mind. Our military forces are no longer to be a mass of disconnected fragments. We are increasing the strength of our artillery in all needful directions. Our weapons are being improved up to the latest results of modern science and actual experience. Our officers are to enter and rise in the service according to the most approved methods of testing competency, and both officers and men are at length to learn in mimic warfare all that our German kinsfolk have lately been practising in the field. It is pleasant to hear that the Prussian system of yearly campaigns across country, to which part of the Prussian successes is manifestly due, is really about to be introduced into our own army. Hitherto we have only made a feeble and farcical pretence of copying that system; but the farce will henceforth give way to soldierlike earnest. Next autumn, after the harvest, if not sooner, we may look to see bodies of troops of all arms sent out, thoroughly equipped, to manœuvre against each other for days together in the open field, under generals furnished with nothing but a few brief instructions as to the ultimate object of their manœuvres. It is easy to see that only in this way can their own generalship, the quality of their troops, and the efficiency of their supply services be thoroughly tested. Arrangements will of course be made to compensate farmers and others for any damage done to their property; but the cost will be nothing in comparison with the extent of the public gain. Thorough instruction in all outpost duties will also henceforth become an essential feature of military drill. Let us hope that our Indian army will also benefit by these reforms. Of late years marching in India has fallen into comparative disuse, and the practice of massing troops for mimic warfare about stations like Umballa and Lahore has been tried only in a fitful and imperfect way. Lord Napier will add to his former services by applying at stated seasons in various parts of India the system of prolonged campaigning which Sir Sydney Cotton long since demanded in vain. There would be policy in such a step, apart from its overt recommendations.

Lord Lansdowne's Committee on the employment of Royal Engineer officers have done wisely in recommending a wide recourse to the services of the Royal Engineers in peace time for purely civil purposes. If it be true that the ordinary peace-duties of that body are quite insufficient for the numbers employed, one of two things ought to follow: Either their numbers should be reduced, or the Government should employ them in civil work of a kind best fitted to keep their hands in against the occurrence of some warlike conjuncture. The latter alternative being vastly preferable in their case to the former, we have no fault to find with the substance of a report founded on the opinions of such men as Sir W. Mansfield, Sir H. Durand, Lord Lawrence, Colonels Strachey, Taylor, and Dickens, and Sir W. E. Baker. All these witnesses agree in advocating the greater employment of military engineers on civil works, in accordance with the lessons taught by their Indian experience. It would be the height of folly to regulate the numbers of the Royal Engineers by the ordinary demands of peace, and to let such a body rust for want of useful work would of course appear to be an act of stupid wastefulness. In India, at any rate, the latter blunder has never been committed. It has been owing, as Lord Lawrence declares, to "their continuous employment on important and difficult works in time of peace," that military engineers in India have always "proved their great capacity and usefulness in war." During the Mutiny their services, in his opinion, were pre-eminently great. According to Sir W. Mansfield, "our best military engineers have been those who have executed the most important civil works, such, for instance, as Generals Sir John Cheape and Sir Robert Napier." Sir H. Durand dwells on the higher tone imparted to an official body by the discipline which makes an officer a synonym for a gentleman, in a country "where men must be trusted as they are in India." Colonel Strachey thinks that military engineers should "be bound to serve the State in all branches of engineering duty, both for civil and military purposes," and would even regard their military duties as wholly secondary to their civil. Colonel Dickens speaks of the Royal Engineers as furnishing the best men for the Public Works Department of India, and recommends the placing no limit of time or numbers on the transfer of officers from the military to the civil branch.

In a separate memorandum Sir L. Simmons urges the need of prompt action in the direction thus clearly pointed out. At present the public Works Department contains 257 Engineer officers working side by side with 126 other officers and 533 civil engineers. But as the old Indian officers pass away, their places are being filled by officers on the amalgamated list, who under existing rules can only serve seven years in India. It takes some two years to prepare an officer for a post which among other things demands a fair acquaintance with native languages and customs. Under such conditions the services of the Royal Engineers would ere long be lost to the Public Works of India, and their places be wholly occupied with men engaged for special Indian service. The rules proposed by the Committee would avert an issue so undesirable, by enabling engineer officers to remain in the Public Works Department as long as they please or as their services may be needed. According to Sir L. Simmons the due supply of engineers for India could be kept up by an addition of sixty-four cadets a year to the number of students at Woolwich, instead of the much larger number of pupils required to pass through the new Civil Engineering College. The rivalry between the too colleges seems to him alike needless and fraught with danger to one or the other. We do not see the force of his reasoning on this latter point; he might as well argue that the rivalry of Cambridge would hurt Oxford. There is room, we imagine, for both schools of engineering, and it is only fair to presume that this question had long been carefully considered by the Indian Government, before it resolved on founding a special college in England for civil engineers. The best way of carrying out the Committee's conclusions in favour of military engineers for India would be to make the new college the one source of home supply for all the engineering wants, civil or military, of the Indian Government. But it is idle, we fear, to ask that so great a step shall be taken towards undoing the muddle caused by the original blunder of amalgamating the Royal and Local armies.

Our correspondent "Centurion" furnishes Colonel Sykes with a powerful lever for his next attempt to get justice done to certain officers of the old Indian Army. What is sauce for the goose ought to be sauce for the gander, and the claimants of bonus-compensation have a case that is simply unanswerable from the standpoint of common justice. With all deference to the Times, we would remind it that the Bonus system in the Company's Army was absolutely far more legal than the over-regulation purchase system in the Queen's. Must we once more point out to the reading public that, all legal quibbling apart, the Court of Directors, acting of course with the full concurrence and in the name of her Majesty's Ministers on the Board of Control, gave their formal sanction in 1838 to the Bonus system as then worked, on the special ground of its improving the efficiency of the service through its influence in quickening promotion? What the claimants of compensation for prospects destroyed by the reconstruction of the Indian army are still pleading, is the right, not merely to recover their previous outlay, but to get something like a fair equivalent for the bonuses they would otherwise have received in their turn. Some of our readers will be glad to hear that another memorial, urging this claim, is now going round for signature among those specially concerned.

A good many signatures have already been obtained; but those who have not yet signed should lose no time in swelling the number of petitioners.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, February 21, 1871.

WHITE AND BLACK.

The Neilgherry Excelsior relates a tiger-shooting story that is deserving of notice on more accounts than one. A tiger was tracked and wounded by a Colonel Christie. The animal retired into the jungle and was discovered shortly after by two of the native shekarries. These men worked their way through dense brushwood, and were about to take aim at the infuriated beast, when, as so frequently happens in such cases, the wounded tiger rushed out upon them, and mangled one of the poor fellows in so fearful a manner that his life was despaired of. The two shekarries were apparently the only two men of the party who had the courage to undertake so desperate a service, as that of crawling through heavy jungle to despatch a wounded tiger is known to be. If the Colonel Christie mentioned by the Neilgherry Excelsior is a sportsman, and has had to deal with wounded tigers before, he possibly, and very properly, saw no necessity for putting himself in a position where the odds are in favour of the tiger eating the sportsman. For no sportsman, unless unduly excited by the chase, would follow a wounded tiger on foot through heavy jungle. If he should do so, the tiger has by a long way the best of it. How came it, then, that the two natives were allowed to do and dare that which Colonel Christie himself apparently declined? But having done what was, if a foolhardy, at least a gallant deed, it does seem hard that the Neilgherry Excelsior has not only not a good word to say on behalf of the two native shekarries, but positively goes out of its way to sneer at the unfortunate man who was seized, and who is described as "half dead with fright and pain" when found. The natives of India, as we all know, were once addicted to many very curious and barbarous customs. The teachings of an ancient faith made them fond of exposing their dying relatives on the banks of the Ganges till the rising flood extinguished the last flickering breath of life. They still have, probably, a hankering fondness for widow-burning and hook-swinging. But we have no right to suppose because of these strange customs which were once theirs, that they are insensible to bodily pain, nor to be surprised if they evince fear, and not satisfaction, after a tiger has been doing his best to tear them in pieces. Had a tiger been making his breakfast off the legs of the Editor of the Neilgherry Excelsior, in what condition, we should like to know, does this gentleman imagine he would have been found? Many years will probably have to elapse before a certain type of Englishmen will learn to look on the natives of India as human beings who have many feelings and attributes in common with the rest of their species.

ARMY REFORM.

Mr. Cardwell's programme of military reconstruction must have been a welcome surprise even to those who had least misgivings as to his own readiness to meet the popular demand for something bold and practical. There were so many counter influences to take into the reckoning, that one hardly dared to anticipate so large a concession to the claims of common expediency. But the Minister for War has made a rare hit. He has not only taken the wind out of Mr. Trevelyan's sails by his bold proposal to abolish purchase, but he has somehow gained the assent of the Duke of Cambridge to the most sweeping measure of military reform ever yet brought forward by a Minister of State. It was evident that no scheme of reform would be more than a mere makeshift, which should ignore or palter with the great purchase problem, and leave the Militia in the hands of the Lords Lieutenant. Mr. Cardwell has in both instances taken the bull by the horns. Commissions in the Militia will be granted by the Crown, and the purchase of commissions in the Line is absolutely to be abolished. Officers now serving will be reimbursed on retirement the full market value of their commissions, according to the average prices of the last ten years. The rank of ensign will be done away. First commissions will be granted to successful candidates from Sandhurst, to university men, to a few non-commissioned officers, and to qualified Militia officers of two years' standing. Young men entering regiments as cadets may also qualify for commissions. Promotion above the rank of captain will go by selection, according to the judgment of the Commander-in-Chief, and be accelerated by a system of compulsory retirement. The strength of the regular army is fixed at 135,000—including 27,000 in the colonies. The strength of the field artillery is increased to 336 guns, mainly of the new 16-pounder pattern. The Militia and Volunteers will be placed together in districts under one head, and the Volunteers when out with the Regulars will be subject to the Mutiny Act. The affiliation of the Regulars with the Militia will be carried out by means of local recruiting and great freedom of interchange between the officers of either service.

Into the details of his scheme Mr. Cardwell did not enter, and we shall be curious to hear what he has to say on certain points of obvious difficulty, but of first importance in the future. How will he manage to combine short service at home with long service in India, for example? That difficulty might be solved in a moment by re-establishing a separate army for India; but in view of old prejudices against such a course, we fear that nothing half so statesmanlike or thorough will be attempted for years to come. And how about the pay and prospects of officers in a non-purchase army? The abolition of purchase almost necessarily entails some increase in the officers' pay, and some aid to promotion in the shape of retiring pensions. Some part of the cost of this will no doubt be met by the proposed abolition of ensigncies and cornetcies, if no attempt be made to replace them by more lieutenants and captains. One third at least of the commissioned ranks in the British army could easily be spared, if the remainder henceforth consist of good working officers, as efficient for their purpose as our artillery and engineer officers already are.

From one of Mr. Cardwell's proposals some advantage ought indirectly to accrue to the many old Indian officers who have so long pleaded in vain for a like concession to their own service. We refer of course to his scheme for reimbursing retiring officers in the extra regulation-value of their commissions. This concession once made, it will hardly be possible to withhold the very same boon from retired officers of the Indian Army, who claim fair compensation for the Bonus or prescriptive value of their commissions. If the one boon be granted on whatever plea, we cannot see how the Government can any longer refuse the other. Every argument that holds good in the one case tells yet more strongly on behalf of the other, for if ever any practice was openly encouraged and formally sanctioned by the Government of the day, it was the practice of paying bonuses to retiring officers of the old Company's army.

THE IRRAWADDY ROUTE TO CHINA.

The republication of Major Sladen's recent address to the Glasgow Chamber of Commerce, on the question of a trade route from British Burmah to Yunan in Western China, is a welcome contribution to the literature of an important subject.* In India and among the Indian interests at home, it has long been admitted that an inland trade with Western China might easily be established, if only we could hit upon some practicable route. The merchants of Calcutta are mostly in favour of connecting that capital with China, either by the line of the Brahmapootra, through Assam, or else by way of Cachar and Manipore to Bhamo on the Irrawaddy. The friends of Rangoon on the other hand have divided their choice between the water route up the Irrawaddy to Bhamo, and thence inland to Talifoo, and the land route north-eastward from Rangoon to Kianghung in the south-eastern corner of Burmah Proper. The first of these routes was ably advocated by Sir Arthur Cotton in 1867 before the Royal Geographical Society, but the gist of his arguments seemed to lie in the alleged insignificance of Rangoon as a commercial outlet, and the assumed necessity for nine hundred miles of land traffic thence to the Yangtsee. The first assumption must have amused every one who had any local or derived acquaintance with the splendid capabilities of Rangoon itself and its easy means of intercourse with Calcutta; while the second was evidently based on the equally groundless assumption that the only practicable road from Rangoon was the overland line to Kianghung, better known as Captain Sprye's route. In point of fact the water-route up the Irrawaddy to Bhamo leaves only a hundred miles of land-journey to one of the trade-centres in Yunan, and steamers of moderate draft can ascend the great Burman river to Bhamo all the year round. The Calcutta line to Bhamo on the other hand, or to any other point on the Upper Irrawaddy, would involve a long and difficult land-journey of several hundred miles, whichever of the alternative routes might be adopted.

Between such a route through regions to a great extent barbarous and roadless, and the line recommended by Major Sladen there ought not, we think, to be a moment's question, Trade with Western China being assumed as possible through a country lying outside our own frontier, it does seem idle to ignore the self-evident advantages of water-carriage ready made for nine hundred miles of the noblest river that flows through any part of our Indian Empire, merely, as it seems, because the rise of Rangoon might somehow threaten the commercial pre-eminence of Calcutta. The course of trade will never be guided by preconceived ideas about the relative importance of different outlets. Rangoon is already the seat of a foreign trade worth ten millions a-year, and the inland trade of British Burmah has more than doubled itself within the last four years. As General Fytche pointed out in 1869, "any trade that may come to Bhamo will certainly pass down the Irrawaddy, and any idea of its being diverted towards Assam, through the difficult country between Bhamo and Sudya on the Brahmapootra, or viâ Manipore and Cachar, is totally out of the question." Now Bhamo, as Major Sladen reminds us, was the old outlet for Chinese trade with Burmah, and from Bhamo it would take but four days to convey the produce of China down to Rangoon in steamers suited to the purpose. From Rangoon that produce could be shipped direct for Europe, or conveyed in four days to Calcutta. Well, therefore, might Major Sladen ask whether any merchant who found this route open to him would prefer to send his goods on a long and expensive land journey to Calcutta, in order that most of them might be forwarded thence to Europe down the difficult Hooghly. To an unprejudiced observer the question would seem to need no answer.

Dismissing the Assam and Cachar routes as just now impracticable, let us look for a moment at Captain Sprye's proposed line of rail, tramway, or ordinary road from Rangoon to Kianghung on the Cambodia. This line also has yet to be made through four or five hundred miles of thinly-peopled country, to a point where the French trade up the Cambodia would come into rivalry with British enterprise on terms wholly favourable to the former. Half of this route would lie through the unexplored, barren, and almost uninhabited Shan States. The line, says Mr. Findlay, who traded several years in Burmah, would have to cross four great rivers and ever so many smaller streams, besides several ranges of jungle-covered hills. It would lead after all to the poorest part of Yunan, which already has cheap and easy communication with Canton. The Bhamo route on the other hand would reopen the old immemorial highway for trade with the richest part of Yunan, and would tap the wealthiest and most populous provinces of China. The great mineral wealth of Northern and Central Yunan—observes General Fytche—"is well known, as also the enormous wealth of the neighbouring provinces of Sechuen and Kwei-Chow, the most populous in China, and their gigantic trade in tea, silk, rhubarb, tobacco, sugar, hemp, oil, varnish, and other commodities, and that vast capacity of all those provinces to consume European manufactures; a large proportion of which trade we shall gain, when once the route by Bhamo is fully reopened." Mr. Cooper, the well-known traveller, has publicly avowed his firm conviction that the trade with Sechuen will at once return to its old channel, so soon as the Bhamo and Talifoo route, closed by the late rebellion in Yunan, shall have been reopened.

When will the whole of this route be fairly opened? The answer to this question depends chiefly on the goodwill and good faith of the Burman monarch and his officers. On the side of Yunan and its Panthay rulers there is nothing to fear. The Panthay Governor of Momein has promised to help us so far as he can. The Yunan Government are quite ready to send goods to Bhamo instead of Mandalay, if they can only be assured of a market in the former place. From the Shan tribes subject to Burmah no further hindrance may be expected; while the Kakhyen chiefs beyond the Burman border have all either engaged or offered to promote traffic through their hills. Burmah itself is bound by more than one treaty to grant British subjects free passage through its length and breadth, and the establishment of a British Agency at Bhamo and a British Court of Justice at Mandalay have secured us a foothold for the attainment of further advantages. It only remains for the Burman Government to carry out its pledges, and prove by friendly acts the sincerity of its friendly professions. Hitherto, in the belief of Major Sladen, the cessation of trade between Bhamo and Yunan has been owing quite as much to Burman jealousy and distrust of British enterprise as to the progress of a Mohammedan rising against the old Chinese Government of Yunan. The Burman officials could no doubt at this moment easily reopen the trade by Bhamo with South-Western China, in spite of any obstacles caused by that rising. But they have hardly yet learned, we fear, to look at the question with the eyes of British merchants eager for new fields of profitable energy. Their schooling however has already begun, and Burman obstructiveness must in time give way to the steady pressure of Western ideas, backed up by the efforts of prudent diplomacy. The time can no longer be far off when the opium of Behar will pass through Rangoon up the Irrawaddy into Western China instead of taking its long, perilous, and costly way through the Straits of Malacca to Shanghai, and when China in her turn will cease to forward the rich produce of her Western Provinces to Europe and India by the devious channel of the Yangtsee, in preference to the older and shorter road through Momein and Bhamo to the Bay of Bengal.

BONUS COMPENSATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—Let me draw your attention to the debate last night, the 16th of February, upon the abolition of the purchase sys tem in the English army, and to the Government scheme to effect it, as set forth by the Minister of War.

By this scheme it is provided that, not only shall the officers of the Home service be reimbursed upon retirement the regulation value of their respective commissions, but that the fancy sums which they may have paid over and above this in the purchase of their rank shall be returned to them, in every case, without one farthing's deduction!

I draw your attention to this in order to contrast it with the treatment we, the officers of the Indian army, have received at the hands of Government.

On what possible plea, I ask, can the Ministers of this country any longer refuse to refund the value of our commissions?

If justice is not absolutely dead in the official heart, and honesty a thing unknown within that stony organ, the claims which Colonel Sykes has advocated for years in the House of Commons, and the validity of which were triumphantly confirmed last year, by a majority of its members assembled, must be at last settled.

In comparison with the enormous sum required to compensate for the abolition of the purchase system in the English army, a mere trifle will suffice in our case; but I trust there will be no more attempts at compromise, but that the sums to which we should have been entitled had not Government abolished our purchase system will be simply returned to us.—Your obedient servant, Centurion.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE INDIAN ARMY.

The Bombay Gazette entirely agrees with the Calcutta Reviewer that England must have two systems—a home defensive force adequate to all emergencies, and an army for foreign service, that these must be made to fit the one into the other, and that the Indian portion of the foreign service corps must be to all intents and purposes mainly local. This will become manifest the moment the military question is seriously grappled with, since the English people will not stand long terms of service in the colonies, and India cannot pay for the perpetual passing and re-passing of short service men between Bombay and the British Channel. In many other respects, also, is a Local European Army highly desirable; but it will be through the question of expense that the Home Government will come to recognise the expediency of restoring what was so hastily destroyed. On the other branch of the subject, the organisation of the native army, we heartily join the Reviewer in his attack on irregularism—which is chiefly seen in its organisation, in the tenacity with which old parade forms are retained, in the reduction of English leadership to a minimum, all true allegations; and not seen in any attempt to rival French or Prussian systems of drill. But when the writer says that "Irregularism has gone down in France before the Mobile Regularism of Prussia," he runs the risk of creating an erroneous impression, and lays himself open to attack, for there was not in the French armies anything analagous to the irregular system as reduced to the perfection of absurdity in India. As far as officers are concerned there were more in a French than there were in a Prussian regiment, and of course more in a British infantry regiment than in any similar body throughout the wide world. Irregularism in India must be tried without reference to the war now in progress, because on neither side can anything so ridiculous be found. We may also venture to think that the writer has erred in comparing the Indian to the Continental armies on the point of mobility. He cannot seriously contend that in India we should have corps d'armée which could be put down anywhere, with as much rapidity and in as great or even relatively as great force as the French or Prussian armies. In order to rival either we should have to keep up a force little short of a million of men, and increase our railways to an extent beyond the dreams of the most sanguine narrow gauge projector among us. To compare the movement of concentration on the Rhine with our little points upon the frontier, exalt the promptitude and magnitude of the first and laugh at the slowness and exiguity of the second is to create a wrong impression. But if it is meant that brigades or divisions in India should always be ready to move at a moment's notice, we entirely agree with the Reviewer. In that respect, as well as in all others, the Indian army stands in terrible need of a thorough reform. But at the best there must be frequent delay in striking a blow, because the distances are so immense, and because no dislocation of the forces could be made to meet all cases. Nevertheless, we need not go on as we do now, acting as if we were thoroughly convinced that the Quakers are right, that the Age of Peace has come, that the army in India—except as a machine for providing places and extorting salaries from the treasury—is a fifth rate consideration, something kept up for form's sake, but totally out of place in this golden age of Universities, High Courts, Narrow-gauge Railways and Native Newspapers. The army, what there is of it, ought to be effective, well armed and equipped, adequately officered, posted judiciously, placed under a soldier Minister of War, the absurd and profligate commands of Madras and Bombay being abolished; and, as far as possible, the guns, arms, equipments, ammunition, stores, clothing, should be made in India, so that India should become self-dependent, and the strong arm of British power from the Cape of Good Hope to the Yellow Sea, from the Gulf to the Euxine.

SOLDIERS' WIVES AND CHILDREN IN INDIA.

The Englishman, despite the views promulgated by high authority in reference to the advantages likely to accrue by the removal of the Lawrence Schools in Calcutta to the more bracing and healthy climate of a hill locality, holds to the opinion that such a residence is the only truly safe one for children in India, and the statistics we quote, if statistics are of any value at all, bear us out. It is an important fact also that the health and life of European women and children in this country have not been improved for many years, although sanitary arrangements and advancement have progressed with rapid strides. Indeed, with reference to the men it has very properly been noticed that much fallacy has crept into expressed opinions of the increased healthiness of India, as obtained by the sanitary measures now adopted, and from the improvements that have been effected in the building of barracks and arrangement of cantonments. We certainly acknowledge that deaths occur less frequently in this country; but when our invaliding lists are looked over, and our returns of discharged men and deaths at home, the result of diseases more or less attributable to tropical service, which have originated or been aroused by a residence in this country, are calculated, we shall find that the benefit secured so far is very partial. Dr. Bryden has himself acknowledged that we have done but little to avert the outbreak and virulence of cholera, and in 1869 his table of figures proved that, with all our advancement and expenditure of money, the mortality of that year was greater than it had been for the ten previous years. As we fail to obtain results as satisfactory as we could wish, is it politic to "feed the fire" when there is no necessity? Either let the women and children remain at home, or be kept out of the plains in the hot, rainy, and sickly seasons. The short period of enlistment, which has been already so strongly advocated, will have an additional advantage by prohibiting or checking matrimony in the first period of service. It will not be a harsh proceeding to separate man and wife for such a short time, and we sincerely trust that such a clause may be introduced. To remedy the existing misery some system of invaliding should be adopted, or, at any rate, some depot formed at an approachable hill station, to which the women and children could be sent without difficulty or ruin to themselves. We would ask the favour of some more privileges also for this at present uncared-for class of fellow-beings, the supply of beer from the regimental canteen, and the means of supplementing their husbands' rations by the purchase of sound meat and bread at cost prices. More consideration might be bestowed upon the selection of quarters with reference to the number of inmates forced to occupy them. Rank must necessarily be respected, but life and health deserve also some consideration, and a soldier's wife and five little ones permitted to come to this country, or to remain in it, humanly require a larger space for habitation than a single staff sergeant.

ZANZIBAR.

The Times of India observes that as it seems scarcely probable that Mr. Churchill will return to his post at Zanzibar, the appointment of Acting Resident there assumes considerable importance. Many times we have urged the importance of the study of Arabic and Persian by Bombay officers aspiring to political employment, in order that the four or five Arabic or other Mussulman Residencies in these seas may always be occupied by men well acquainted with the Arabic character, and familiar with the records of the Gulf, the Mekran coast of southern and eastern Arabia, and the African colonies, which, even as far south as Mozambique, have had continuous, though infrequent, transactions with Bombay since the times of the early Portuguese navigators. Mr. Churchill, being an accomplished Arabic scholar, and having taken the post by the consent of the former Indian incumbent, Colonel Playfair (a Madras officer) could scarcely be regarded as an intruder at Zanzibar. But there ought always to be in the Bombay political service men whose claim to that and the other posts to which we refer should be incontestable on the ground of their superior knowledge of the language used, and their acquaintance with the idiosyncracy of the Mussulman officials or princes who have to be dealt with there. For the acting, if not the permanent, post at Zanzibar, there should be no difficulty in selecting a suitable man from the Bombay services. There is a medical officer in this Presidency who previously held the acting post for a considerable period, and who must be familiar with the various parties whom Syud Burgash can scarcely keep in order. The officer who was the last permanent Political Agent at Muscat, and who must have influence which would be useful at Zanzibar from his acquaintance with Syud Thowanee's family and adherents, is also probably available, though at present filling an inland Indian appointment. There is, again, another and younger Bombay officer who has already served a fair apprenticeship in one of the Arabian appointments, who, by his command of the language, political tact and experience would be eligible for the African post. There may at home be other Bombay Arabic speaking officers whose claims should be considered as possible successors of Mr. Churchill; and we trust that, in any case, this political charge—the skilful management of which is of so much importance to Western India, so intimately connected with affairs of Oman and the Gulf, and not remotely with those of Aden and the Red Sea—will not be consigned to some Foreign-office nominee, or fall to the lot of some Calcutta or Simla courtier or courtier's client. Such things have been.

ADDRESS OF THE OUDE TALOOKDARS TO MR. DAVIES.

"To R. H. Davies, Esquire, C.B., C.S.I.

"Honoured Sir,—Of the deep-felt joy with which the present occasion inspires us words are but poor interpreters. Nor do we know how fittingly to thank Almighty God for having vouchsafed to us, so soon, the occasion of assembling in this hall to bid you God-speed on a higher and nobler career, earned by your constant and untiring solicitude for the good of the country over which you were delegated to rule, especially when we remember that for this our grateful hearts had unceasingly prayed.

"The manifold blessings which you have conferred on the people of Oude, ever since you arrived in this province, will abide in their memory for generations to come. Whether we think of your care for the general prosperity of the country, or of your solicitude to encourage merit, and to honour the deserving, we have equal reason to be grateful to you. We have had the pleasure, on repeated occasions, of discharging the agreeable duty of thanking you publicly for the obligations which you have from time to time conferred upon us; and it is, therefore, the less necessary to recapitulate them here. But we cannot omit to mention that, by carrying the Talookdars' Succession Act successfully through the Legislative Council, and thus consolidating and giving legal confirmation to our rights and privileges, you have laid us under a debt of gratitude which neither we, nor our successors, will ever be able to repay.

"The occasion of meeting you for the last time as our Chief Commissioner was not one on which we could have assembled here without a feeling of profound grief at our own loss, had you not, with kind anticipation, provided for us ample source of consolation by leaving as your successor our old and honoured friend and patron, General Barrow, C.B. The joy that we felt at your promotion, and the grief of bidding you farewell, have raised feelings in our mind which we do not know how to express. We shall therefore content ourselves with offering you on our own part, and that of the people of Oude in general, our hearty congratulations, and we shall conclude our present address with the prayer that, as long as the sun and the moon may revolve in their spheres, so long may last the power and glory of our gracious Queen and her Government; that the blessings of her rule may extend wider and wider, and that you, whom she has chosen to rule a portion of her Indian subjects, may rise higher and higher in the estimation of our gracious Sovereign, and be honoured with her favours.—We are, &c.,

"The Talookdars of Oude."

STATION TALK.

Julpigoree, Jan. 16.—The monotony of this out-of-the-way station has lately been enlivened by the arrival of his Excellency the Right Honourable the Commander-in-Chief and the Headquarters Staff. On Wednesday, the 11th of January, Lord Napier of Magdala, accompanied by Brigadier-General Bourchier, Colonels Thesiger, Dillon, and Lumsden, Captain Thompson and Captain Fitz-George, inspected the 2nd Regiment N.L.I., under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Oakes. The regiment was drawn up in review order, and having received his Excellency with the usual salute, marched past in quick time, then at the double, and was afterwards put through a series of field movements by Colonel Oakes. The other officers were then called to the front in succession, and were directed to put the regiment through various evolutions. At the conclusion of the inspection the regiment was formed in quarter column, and his Lordship addressed them as follows:—"Colonel Oakes,—It affords me much pleasure to make the acquaintance of your regiment, one of the distinguished regiments in the Indian Army. I will not say the most, but certainly one of the most. I am well acquainted with its antecedents, and know how loyal it has always proved itself, especially during the Mutiny. It also gives me great pleasure, gentlemen, to see my old friend Colonel Oakes at the head of it, an officer who has done good service with me both above and below ground." His Excellency then made a spirited address in Hindoostanee to the native officers and men, commenting on their previous service, and exhorting the younger soldiers to emulate the example of their comrades. The regiment was then dismissed, after which his Excellency inspected the hospital most minutely, and appeared much pleased with the arrangements. He spoke to all the patients in turn, addressing a few kind and cheering words to each. He then visited the lines and barracks, and in the evening he dined at mess with the officers of the regiment. On the following morning a sham fight took place. Lieutenant-Colonel Shawe was ordered to proceed at six A.M., with three companies, and occupy a position in the vicinity of the Rajbarree, while Lieutenant-Colonel Oakes with the remaining five companies marched from cantonment at eight A.M. to attack him. His Excellency the Right Honourable the Commander-in-Chief and Staff, together with the ladies and gentlemen of the station, accompanied the latter party. After about an hour's march the advanced guard fell in with the enemy's skirmishers, who opened a dropping fire from behind a deep ditch and the jungle in which they were concealed. As the attacking force advanced sharp firing occurred on both sides, the enemy clinging tenaciously to his strong position, but on his left being threatened he began to withdraw slowly towards the fords of the river in his rear. After crossing the river he retired towards Julpigoree, hotly pursued by his adversary. When near the station the fight terminated, both forces being ordered to their quarters. The officers who commanded the opposing forces were questioned by Lord Napier concerning the morning's proceedings, and Lieutenant-Colonel Shaw was requested to furnish a report, with a sketch of his position and line of retreat. In the afternoon, at the special request of his Excellency, who gave eight prizes, soldiers' games took place, including swimming, jumping, wrestling, single-stick, &c., and one man seemed to afford much amusement by imitating the cries of various wild animals. In the evening the whole station were invited to dine with his Lordship at the mess-house of the regiment, his own camp being but a small one. As many as twenty-eight persons, including five ladies, sat down to dinner. The next morning Lord Napier and his staff left for Cooch Behar, to the regret of all.—Englishman Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

Legislative.—The Calcutta Examiner hears that a Bill has come off the legislative anvil, and will be immediately introduced, for subjecting meat and other markets, and also slaughter-houses, to municipal control.

A Good Thing.—The Indian Daily News has been informed that a native prince, or shazadah, who appears to be a political pensioner, some time ago sent a nuzzeranah to her Majesty's Secretary of State for India. His Grace is said to have declined to accept it.

A Native Movement.—An association of native engineers has been established in Calcutta, under the name of the Indian Engineers' Association. One of its principal objects, it is whispered, is the regeneration, and if this is impossible, the abolition, of the Department of Public Works.

Police.—The Indian Daily News understands that Colonel Pughe, the inspector-general of police, Lower Provinces, now on leave, is expected to return to India shortly, and that Colonel Patterson, the officiating inspector-general, on being relieved, proceeds to England.

Caste Rules.—In Calcutta one Hindoo prostitute has brought an action against another, because the latter brought a European into her house and drank wine with him, and thus endangered her caste standing. She could follow her profession without the slightest reproach to her caste, but she might not eat or drink with a European.

Coal at Juggiapettah.—Colonel Applegath's search for coal at Juggiapettah promises success. At any rate that officer has "expressed a firm belief" that coal exists there, and in consequence of this the Government have sanctioned the detention of the sappers and miners, now working under his orders, for a further period of one month.—Pioneer.

Mourning for Sir H. Durand.—With the approval of the Viceroy in Council, the Financial Commissioner of the Punjab has suggested that, as a mark of respect to the memory of the late Lieutenant-Governor of the province, civil officers and officers of the Punjab Frontier Force shall wear mourning for one month, until, that is, the 15th February next.

Rajah of Puttiala.—The ceremony of the investiture of the Maharajah of Puttiala with the Star of India, at Calcutta, has been further postponed, and will not take place until about the close of February. The reason is that the presence of Lord Napier of Magdala is requisite, and his Excellency would be unable to be in Calcutta before the 20th of that month.

Public Works.—It is reported, says the Englishman, that Colonel F. H. Rundall, at present chief engineer to the Government of Bengal, in the Irrigation Department, will shortly be transferred to the office of Officiating Inspector-General of Irrigation, and Deputy Secretary of the Public Works Department to the Government of India, on the departure of Colonel Anderson, the present incumbent.

COOLIES FOR BRAZIL.—So the Brazils want to import labour from British India? This is flattering to the Bengal coolies, but we hope that the insidious poison will not be allowed to work. Sarsaparilla hunting in the Brazils is a different kind of work to raising sugar in the West Indies. This the coolie would soon discover for himself, but the experience would be, even for experience, high-priced.—Pioneer.

THE FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.—It is reported (in the Englishman) that the charge and control of the Money Order Office in Calcutta has been taken away from Mr. Fink, the late incumbent, and that Mr. Sterndale has been appointed, Mr. Fink being reduced from the 3rd to the 4th grade. Baboo Sama Churn Day, 2nd assistant comptroller general of accounts, has been promoted from the 4th to 3rd grade of financial officers.

MISFORTUNES NEVER COME SINGLY.—Within the last twenty days Colonel Whitney, of Alipore, commanding the 11th Native Infantry, fell down and broke one of his legs; a few days afterwards his horse was stolen from his syce on the maidan, and now we hear that he has been eased of his military clothing to the value of Rs. 200, and that not the slightest trace of the thief has yet been obtained.—Englishman.

LAHORE.—Table-turning and spirit-rapping are puzzling the natives of Lahore. Accordingly, the President of the Anjuman-i-Punjab has circulated a notice convening a meeting for the discussion of the mystery. "Considerable and increasing excitement," says the notice, "is prevailing. It seems to be the duty of the Anjuman to take this opportunity of inviting all opponents of popular delusions, whether of imposture or self-deception, to meet, with the view of expressing their opinions on the subject."

CIVIL.—The Financial Commissionership of Oude is abolished. Colonel Barrow, C.B., the late incumbent, having succeeded Mr. Davies as Chief Commissioner, his former appointment will not be filled up, and a saving of Rs. 36,000 a-year is thus effected. It is presumed by the Englishman that the change is rendered possible by the more minute supervision which the new department of revenue and agriculture will bring upon local questions of revenue in the Non-regulation Provinces.

NAVAL.—H.M.S. Forte, carrying Admiral Cockburn's flag, has come up the Hooghly, as far as Prinsep's Ghat. The Pioneer tells us that "whole fleets of dinghies, with visitors on board, are plying between the shore and the frigate, and there is a shadowy rumour going about Calcutta that some act of hospitality, possibly taking the form of a ball, is being contemplated to welcome the vessel's arrival. The Viceroy visited the ship on Tuesday, accompanied by the Admiral."

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF THE PUNJAB.—It is probable, says Indian Public Opinion, that Mr. Davies may stay a little longer in Lahore than was at first anticipated, in order to allow time for Sir William Merewether to reach Dera Ghazi for the intended conference on border matters. The Pioneer says—"The Murrees and Bhoogtees, although, by the death of Sir Henry Durand, they have renewed for a short time their lease of turbulent life, must expect to see his successor and Sir William Merewether in conference for their suppression before the next month is over."

COTTON IN THE N.W.P.—The Pioneer greatly fears all hopes of the North-West ever becoming a field for the production of first-class or even second-class cotton must be abandoned. We hear on all hands of the unfavourable issue of experiments. Nature, in giving to the climate of these provinces its general dryness and its occasional frosts, has imposed too peremptory a veto. If this be the clear result from all the trials which have been ordered, we think it should be candidly recognised, and such costly experiments at once brought to a close.

MILITARY CONVICTS.—Her Majesty's Government has given its sanction to the retention in India of all soldiers sentenced to penal servitude for insubordination, to undergo the punishment in military cells or prisons in this country. There are, we learn from the Englishman, at this instant awaiting passage to England "some thirteen misguided men who, in the vain hope of escaping from India and military discipline, have allowed themselves to commit overt acts of insubordination, of which criminal folly they will now have ample time for repentance during long years of hateful labour in an Indian military prison."

A QUESTION OF ETIQUETTE.—The Pioneer understands that the Governor-General in Council has declined to interfere in an appeal of Mr. J. H. W. Arathoon, barrister-at-law, against remarks made by Mr. W. C. Capper in his judgment in Chota Lall Shaw versus Lyness. Mr. Capper, when officiating Judicial Commissioner in Oude, expressed his belief that Mr. Arathoon's argument would be repudiated by the Benchers of his Inn and by every member of an honourable Bar. Against these remarks the learned counsel appealed first to the Oude Government, and then, failing to obtain redress, to the Government of India. Not only "does the Governor-General in Council see no reason to interfere in the matter," but "his Excellency considers it most undesirable to interfere in any case with the discretion of judges in commenting upon arguments advanced before them by barristers; the exercise of such a discretion affords a check on impropriety, which is often much needed."

AMEER KHAN.—The investigation of Ameer Khan's case is going on at Patna before the magistrate. "The prosecution on behalf of the Crown is being conducted," says the Indian Mirror, "not by professional gentlemen, but by several members of the Covenanted and Uncovenanted Service—viz., Mr. J. O'Kinealy, officiating Magistrate of Mymensing; Mr. J. H. Reily, Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Bengal, Detective Department; and Lalla Isreepersaud, Deputy Magistrate, Patna. Mr. O'Kinealy, who is known to the literary world as a poet, and to the legal world as the commentator of an edition of the Indian Penal Code, is said to have a special knowledge of the Wahabees and their tenets."

POLITICAL.—Major-General W. F. Nuthall has been appointed Officiating Political Agent at Munipore. He is an officer of thirty-four years' service, the greater part of which has been passed in various onerous appointments, civil and military, in Arracan, where he was wounded, Burmah and Assam. He was specially selected by the late Lord Dalhousie to raise a regiment in Pegu on the annexation of that country, and received the thanks of the Governor-General in Council for his services with the Pegu Light Infantry on several occasions. He however was one of the unfortunate colonels to whom promotion to the rank of major-general brought loss of appointment and pay, but we are glad to find that his Excellency the Governor-General has taken the first opportunity of recognising his past services by nominating him for the appointment we have mentioned.

ALLEGED REDUCTION IN THE POLICE.—It is said that the Government of India has in contemplation some further reductions in the police department by abolishing the jail guards. "It has hitherto," says the Indian Daily News, "been the practice to guard the inside of the jails by the jail warders, and the outside of the premises by policemen under the direct control of the Inspector-General of Police. The Government now intends to do away with the latter, and to substitute in its stead the old system of Burkundas guards, to be placed under the control of the jail authorities. The measure has already been carried out in certain districts experimentally. There are at present about 2,000 policemen employed on the special duty of guarding the jails, whose services are now to be dispensed with. The amount of saving to be effected is about two lakhs of rupees a-year, out of which about Rs. 150,000 are to be disbursed on account of the pay of the Burkundases to be employed in future, the net saving being estimated to be about Rs. 50,000 a-year. This proposition seems to have been originally made by Dr. Mouat, and approved of by the Government of India."

CALCUTTA COMMERCE.—The Commercial Guide to the imports and exports of Calcutta for the month of December last shows that, as compared with December, 1869, there was a decrease in the value of merchandise imported, amounting to Rs. 13,11,019, and in that of specie and bullion of Rs. 22,09,121. The principal decrease in the merchandise imported was under the heads of cotton twist, and yarn and piece goods, iron, and wrought metals. In the export trade of the month merchandise shows an increase of Rs. 50,87,624, and bullion a decrease of Rs. 92,151. Cotton and indigo are the two items which contribute principally towards the increase, the former figuring for Rs. 26,90,214, and the latter for Rs. 12,05,479. Sugar, opium, raw silk, gunny cloth, hides, skins, linseed, and mustard also all show a considerable increase. The amount of duty collected at the Custom-house shows a nett decrease of Rs. 1,35,841, entirely due to a falling off in the collections on salt and goods imported, as the exports give an increase of Rs. 89,603. In import tonnage there was an increase of five ships and 5,983 tons, and in export of six ships and 8,807 tons.

FINANCIAL.—It appears from the official statement of revenue and expenditure that there was a net increase in the receipts for the first eight months of 1870-71 over those of the corresponding months of 1869-70 of £1,436,666, and a net decrease in the expenditure of £1,511,851, the result being thus so far in favour of revenue to the extent of nearly three millions sterling.—The grading of the officers of the Military Finance Department will, it is believed, be based, in the first instance, upon the rates of staff pay enjoyed, with such after-modifications of staff as will have the effect of reducing the several offices of the three presidencies to six grades only:—First Grade, 2,000 Controllers; Second Grade, 1,000 Military Accountants; Third Grade, 800 Examiners; Fourth Grade, 600 Pay Masters; Fifth Grade, 300 Deputy Masters; Sixth Grade, 200 Assistants. The object of this grading is to permit of the employment of officers, according to special capacity, at the will of the head of the department; an admirable idea if industry and ability are paid as well as recognised. It would, however, appear to be the idea of the Controller-General of Military Finance that the officer should carry with him the staff of his grade, neither more nor less, whether employed in a higher or lower grade. This we hold to be a mistake, as offering a premium on mediocrity. We have only to suppose an assistant in the Military Finance Department employed upon the duties of Controller, in the receipt of Rs. 200, a month, and the Controller discharging those of an assistant in consideration of receiving Rs. 2,000, to realise an absurd, but, nevertheless, exact illustration of the practical consequences of the plan. But we very much prefer to believe that no such impracticability has emanated from the clear head of General Broome.

Accident to Lady Mayo.—Lady Mayo, accompanied by Miss Milman and two other ladies, last Saturday afternoon met with an accident in Lall Bazaar-street, which necessitated her ladyship's lighting from her gharry and taking shelter in Mr. Police Superintendent Percy's quarters in the police compound. It appears that the road aforesaid was, as usual, obstructed with carts laden with jute, which was to be deposited in a jute screw opposite the police-office, and that the conveyance in which her ladyship was came in collision with one of the carts with such violence as to damage the vehicle so as to render its further use impossible. Her ladyship was detained in the police compound for half an hour until a sowar, who had been despatched, returned with another conveyance, in which Lady Mayo and her party proceeded on their way to the Sealda station, intending to proceed to Barrackpore by the E. B. Railway. The carter, whose conveyance was also damaged, received from her ladyship six rupees towards the repairs of the damages he had sustained. None of the ladies, we are happy to say, suffered any personal injury.—Calcutta Examiner, Jan. 23.

Military.—Several changes are said by the Indian Daily News to be in contemplation in the Military Finance Department. Amongst others, and the first, Major Bruce will be relieved for the present from Madras, either by an official from Bengal or Bombay. It is rumoured that a conference will be held in Calcutta for the re-organisation of the Indian Army, and that several officers of the Bombay and Madras armies will be invited to attend the same. We give the rumour as we heard it.—Poona Observer, Jan. 24.—A Calcutta contemporary says that the Government of India, in the Military Department, has referred all the correspondence, on the subject of road steamers, which are now being experimentally introduced in India, for the consideration of the Commander-in-Chief, who has been requested to give an expression of his Excellency's opinion as to their applicability for military purposes. The services of Colonel Baigrie have been placed at the disposal of the Government of India. This, it is presumed, means that that gallant officer will before long be appointed to some fitting post. "Captain Peacock, of the Viceroy's Body Guard, proceeds home on sick leave, and Captain Lawrence has been offered a civil appointment. It is rumoured," adds the Indian Daily News, "that the command of the guard will be given to Captain Lockwood, of Lord Mayo's staff. The rumour is at least doubtful, as Captain Lockwood needs a change from India rather than in it. Lieutenant Deane, it is said, will be re-appointed Adjutant. Colonel Delane, who naturally winces under a command of three score and ten warriors, will probably apply for a corps of Irregular Cavalry."

The Government Normal School for Female Teachers.—Mr. Woodrow, the Inspector of Schools of the Central Division, has published the following rules for the admission of native ladies as students in the Government Normal School for Female Teachers:—"The students must be of respectable parentage,—Brahmans, Baidyas, Kayastha, or Navashaks. Students must be received into the institution on the written applications of their friends or guardians. Students will be of two classes,—in-students who board on the premises and out-students who live with their friends and do not board in the institution. In-students will receive stipends of Rs. 12 a month, and will reside in the school. In-students who are widows will be allowed to bring their children with them if under ten years of age. In-students will receive a moderate allowance once a-year to enable them to visit their friends. In-students will not be permitted to leave the premises except at such times and under such conditions as their friends may declare in writing. Out-students who are widows will receive stipends of Rs. 10 a month, and if they live in localities traversed by the school conveyances will be daily brought to school and taken back to their homes at the expense of the school. While any stipends are not taken up by widows, married women will be considered eligible to receive half-stipends as out-students, provided they are placed in the school with the consent of the husbands, and belong to bona fide poor families. Candidates coming from the country will have the preference over those from the city. The half stipends to married women will be granted from year to year, and be subject to the provision that they will be resumed at the close of any year, if required, for students who are widows."

Imports.—Calcutta, Jan. 25.—The market during the week has continued very quiet, and we have therefore nothing of interest to communicate. Our dealers do not yet appear to have any pressing requirements for goods, and they keep out of the market in the expectation of getting in later on at reduced rates. Importers, however, do not show any signs of weakness, and if shipments from home continue on the reduced scale lately telegraphed, it is not likely they will be induced to accede to lower than present unremunerative rates. The only goods which have met with any inquiry are the lower makes of Grey Jacconets, and in these goods a steady business has been done last mail. The Twist Market has been depressed during the week, and at the close of business yesterday some sales of 40's were reported at very low prices. To-day and to-morrow the market remains closed on account of native holidays.

Exports.—Calcutta, Jan. 25.—Saltpetre: During the week about 200 tons of Calcutta-washed Saltpetre have been sold at Rs. 7-12 per maund for shipment. Stock is about 8,000 bags. Rice: A fair amount of business has transpired during the week in Table kinds, at prices ranging from Rs. 2-12 to 3-8 per maund. There is some inquiry for Ballam kinds, and some transactions have been made at Rs. 2-4 to 2-6. We have heard of no transactions in Moonghy kinds. Linseed is in good demand both for shipment to America and Great Britain, but we have heard of no change to report owing to the scarcity of supplies. Rapeseed: None in the market, and consequently we have heard of no transaction to report; we quote the prices 3-14 to 4-6. Poppyseed: A limited business has been done during the week at Rs. 4 to 4-1. Teelseed: The market is bare of stock. Jute: Since the date of our last a moderate business has transpired in the market at prices ranging from 3-10 to 5-8. Raw Silk: During the week about 7 maunds of plain Jungypore Silk have been sold at Rs. 19-8, and about 11 maunds of R. C. Jungypore at Rs. 19-10 per factory seer. Silk Piece Goods: Nothing doing; stock, 10,000 pieces.

Madras.

The Madras Government has cancelled a regulation under which Australian dealers arriving with horses at the port of Madras were bound to submit them in the first instance to the Remount Agent.

The Madras Civil Service.—The Junior Civilians of Madras held a meeting last week to consider the advisability of memorialising the Supreme Government with regard to certain points on which general dissatisfaction is felt. It was finally resolved that the following subjects should form the prayer of the memorial:—1st, that the minimum furlough allowance be fixed at £500; 2nd. That the rate of acting allowances be restored to thirty per cent.; 3rd. That the Government of India be requested to employ Junior Civilians of the Madras service in the neighbouring provinces of Mysore and Coorg, and in the Secretariat of the Government of India.—Pioneer.

Native Improvements on a Statue of Chantrey.—At the upper end of the audience chamber of the palace of Tanjore there stands a statue of the late Rajah, executed in white marble, and said to be the work of Chantrey. The sculptor had, however, carved him with his head bare, so the natives have fitted on a pasteboard turban with tassels and ornaments, but as it fits badly, it is generally seen cocked on one side, which gives the whole a very comical appearance. His feet too are bare, but being of one piece with the pedestal, native ingenuity has not yet accomplished the feat of shoeing. The statue (No. 404) is among the objects photographed by Captain Lyon, from whose "Notes" the above description is extracted.—Pioneer.

MILITARY.—The headquarters and left wing of H.M.'s 29th Madras N.I. arrived at Poonah on the evening of Jan. 22, under the command of Colonel A. K. Gore. It consisted of one field officer, one major, one captain, one surgeon, seven native officers, twenty-three havildars, twenty-three naiques, and three hundred and fifty rank and file. They were to leave on the 27th for Secunderabad.—The Bangalore Herald hears that Colonel McCallum, Deputy Judge Advocate of the Ceded Districts (Bellary), succeeds Colonel Sherard, who holds a similar appointment in the Mysore Division. The latter officer goes home next month, it is added.—The paragraph of the Madras Times, with regard to the result of the Gilbert court-martial, is as follows. It makes no allusion to the intended (or expected) reference of the case to the Horse Guards:—"We learn by telegram that a court-martial has found Ensign Gilbert guilty of the charge brought against him, and has sentenced him to be cashiered; and that the Commander-in-Chief in India has confirmed the finding and the sentence."

THE GODAVERY WORKS.—The Examiner understands that something like a serious conspiracy against the liberty of the Godavery River is now afoot in Government House, Calcutta. Colonel Keatinge, Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, who has just been visiting the upper waters of that most independent river, is at present a guest of Lord Mayo's, as is also, we believe, Colonel Haig, D.P.W., Secretary to the Central Provinces Government, who accompanied Colonel Keatinge in his visit to the turbulent stream, profoundly secret measures to coerce which into navigability are, it is said, now being matured under the domed roof of the winter retreat of the Viceroy. We understand that Colonel Haig is immediately to be appointed to the charge of the Godavery Works. A correspondent of the Indian Daily News, signing himself "Bunkum," writes to our contemporary to warn all editors against praising the Godavery scheme. The Godavery, he assures us, will never be a navigable stream "without an expenditure that would construct at least three good railways." Then, having spent what would make three good railways in endeavouring to convert "a hill stream into a mountain river," it would, says "Bunkum," "need as much money to keep the hill stream open for navigation." The immense sums already laid out on the scheme would, he further asserts, have made "a capital canal all the way from Nagpore to the Cuttack coast or to Cocanada."—Pioneer.

SNAKES.—The Madras Medical Journal has generally a capital snake story of a scientific character, and this month is as those that have gone before. But fancy a "lover of snakes!" Such an one the Medical Journal says is Mr. Nicholson, assistant-surgeon R.A., who has recently published a book which supplies our medical contemporary with the text of the article to which we refer. It says:—"It may be an unreasonable prejudice, but there is no denying the fact that reptiles are no favourites with mankind in general. Here and there we find individuals who love lizards, snakes and frogs, and turn them into pets; but they are rare exceptions. Mr. Nicholson is one of the few friends of a much-hated order of reptiles, and this book entitles him to a high place in the list of lovers of snakes." Here, too, is a little useful information to lovers of snakes. You must look for them, if you wish, in dry nullahs leading down to tanks, tussocks of grass in wet paddy fields, the neighbourhood of houses, old galleries of white ants' nests, and the hollows of old trees. The author gives this valuable advice to those who have to hold a venomous snake by the neck. "It must be remembered that the great mobility of the maxillaries will often enable a snake to turn round on your fingers when you think he is quite secure; therefore take care to place your finger and thumb on either side of the neck, never above and below it." * * * The author says, "There is a very little danger about handling the snake; nerve is all that is required. I have very little of it myself, and can never handle venomous snakes with confidence. I have often envied the nerve of a friend in Rangoon, who handles cobras with perfect freedom; he puts his hand into a narrow-mouthed basket containing several cobras, and picks out the one he wants without the slightest objection on the part of the snake, beyond the usual hard swearing." And again, "keep him occupied with an object in front of him, and you may do anything to him; place your right hand above his hand, and you can bring him flat to the ground, swearing hard, but without any attempt at resistance."

THE FAMINE IN SINDE AND RAJPOOTANA.

Sir William Merewether has presented to the India Government a report of two years' famine in Rajpootana, but more particularly with reference to the districts of Thurr and Parkur, across which so many of the poor Marwarees passed to Sinde. The districts, Major Tyrwhitt reports are a vast desert when the rain fails, though fruitful and pleasant at other times. The rain did fail in those terrible months beginning about September 1868, and droves of poor emaciated people began to flock—literally flock—into Sinde. Major Tyrwhitt seems to have set to work at once, and with immense energy, to provide work, and to induce the people to do what was entirely beyond their experience. About the middle of July rain fell, and the people returned home. This is called the "first advent."

For some months after this opportune fall of rain all seemed bright and prosperous in Thurr and Parkur, but in the fatal month of September of the following year locusts appeared, and "did eat up every herb of the land." The picture is dreadful. For miles and miles "the country was carpeted with locusts." "Such a season," Major Tyrwhitt says, "as that of 1869 is not in the memory of the oldest inhabitant of Thurr, both as to rain and calamity of various kinds, and it will be for ever memorable." About the middle of September this awful "second advent"—we hope the words are not a travestie of a very different use of the terms "first and second advent"—began, "hundreds and hundreds of the poor people came in dreadfully emaciated," and—observe the awful fact—"hundreds through exhaustion fell, and where they fell they died, there to be devoured by the birds, jackals, wild dogs, &c." This is the fearful picture supplied in the necessarily bare and business-like terms of an official return. What the full reality was one scarcely dares to think, but one scarcely can help thinking that of the "hundreds and hundreds who fell and died, and were devoured," there must have been hundreds who simply fell and were devoured, without those consoling words "and died" intervening. No art of fiction writer could have added to the awfulness of that picture of Major Tyrwhitt's. The bare fact is appalling. The picture, however, ought to be made of use. The drought and locusts may come again; shall we be better prepared for them if they come this year? We really fear not. As a people we work hard when an evil does come; Major Tyrwhitt, and his assistant, Lieutenant Mayhew, worked splendidly, but we never are prepared for anything—famine, war, or any conceivable calamity. We act on the principle of—"let it come, and when we see exactly what it is then we can meet it"—a course that has cost us more than we ever can compute of human life; the money in such a case is not worth talking about. Something certainly should be done in time to prevent such another tragedy.—Friend of India.

CIRCULAR OF THE MOFUSSIL COMPANY.

The Circular of the Mofussil Company, Limited, of Saturday's date, contains the following information regarding the weather and the crops from the cotton districts:—

BROACH, Jan. 26.—Favourable reports of the weather and crop during the week reach me from all quarters, and it seems tolerably certain that the produce of this year will exhibit considerable improvement upon that of the last. The first arrivals in Broach are, however, as I anticipated, rather stained, and of a medium class only; but the latter yield, maturing when the cold clear weather now prevailing shall have been succeeded by the dews of February, will afford a much better selection. Supplies are scanty, and rates continue most extravagant; several contracts have been made at Rs. 220-2 F.P. and all charges, and the prices of kapas in the villages have an upward tendency. Generally speaking great doubt and uneasiness as to the future course of the market exists in the minds of dealers, and having suffered severely last season for their folly in trusting to a contingency that never occurred, it is hoped they will now be somewhat inclined to watch events a little, but the few transactions at Rs. 220 seem meanwhile to be operating to dispel their newly acquired caution. In Randere and Surat, where the first carts of kapas has proved of desirable quality, rates are even higher than at Broach, and the equivalent of Rs. 225 H. P. B. is asked, but buyers refuse to operate at this figure. At Ahmedabad a local demand for spinning purposes exists, and a few lots of Laria have been taken up at Rs. 220 H. P. B.

Sheagaum, Jan. 26.—The weather continues clear and fine. Upwards of 250 candies arrived in this market for sale during the week, and no doubt supplies will increase should such favourable weather continue. The bulk of the arrivals is of very fair quality, but in a few doeras stain and black leaf are perceptible since the last rains.

Khamgaum, Jan. 26.—Since my last report the weather here has been fair and bright, and the rain happily appears to have gone entirely; supplies in our market have been very scanty lately, owing to the interruption of communications and churkaing, but we hope soon to see large quantities of cotton and kapas coming in. Rates are ranging very high just now, and are likely to continue so for some days, owing to the approaching settlements of the Bussent time-bargains.

Oomrawuttee, Jan. 26.—Since last report the weather has been fine. Supplies in our market have increased considerably, and about 200 candies a day are now coming in. Inferior qualities are gradually disappearing. More than half of our supply is very fair cotton. Reports from all quarters give an abundance of cotton everywhere, and we expect fully a half more in our market than we had last year received.*

Akote, Jan. 26.—With regard to the crops the weather is all that could be desired. From information received from Coombies during the past week it appears that slight damage has been done to the cotton on the plants by the late rains; they say some will be a little stained, but the quantity will be inconsiderable. Arrivals to this market for the past seven days amounted to 1,060 bojas, the greater portion of which was fulfilment of contracts made some time back.

Wurdah, Jan. 26.—Since my last report the weather has been fine, and promises to continue so, about 250 candies have arrived during the week, of fair quality. I regret to add, however, that adulteration is found to some extent. The arrivals at Hinguughaut continue of very poor quality, rates being equivalent to Rs. 218 per candy on Bombay terms.

Dharwar, Jan. 25.—There is really nothing to report from this for the week past, except the purchase by a native firm of a few candies, both descriptions, the Sawginned at a cost of Rs. 200-2, and the Compta at Rs. 175 f. o. b. Carwar, and these figures may be taken as the price of to-day. The latter end of last week witnessed a change in the weather, and it is now all that could be desired for the growing crop, and I hope soon to be able to report the appearance of new kapas in the market.

Miscellaneous.

Cotton, &c., for England.—The steamship Blythewood, Captain Miller, sailed on January 20, for Liverpool, via the Suez Canal, with 4,413½ bales of cotton, 717 bales of wool, 1,300 cwts. of galls, 300½ cwts. of coir yarn, &c. Mr. Cooper went as a passenger. The ship Mabel, 1,259 tons, Captain Wright, sailed on January 24, for Liverpool, with a cargo of 6,572 bales cotton, 222 bales wool, 963¼ cwts. linseed, 298¾ cwts. coir yarn, 206 cwts. hemp, 381 cwts. horns, 150 cwts. bones, and 26 bales cowhides.

Illicit Manufacture of Salt.—With reference to a Financial Order of the Supreme Government, the Government of Bombay has appointed Mr. W. G. Pedder to enquire into the whole question mooted in the order regarding the illicit manufacture of salt in that presidency. The above mentioned officer has been desired by the Bombay Government to send in, as early as practicable after the completion of his enquiries, a report, which, together with the opinion of the local Government, will be shortly submitted to the Government of India.

Arrival of the "Abyssinia."—The Abyssinia, one of the breastwork monitors built for the defence of Bombay, arrived in the harbour on the afternoon of Monday, January 23, and was, until evening, quite an object of interest to the visitors at the bunder. The general report of her passage is that there was fine weather, except in the Bay of Biscay, where the sea was quite tempestuous, and that the vessel throughout the whole passage "behaved" very well. The other monitor for Bombay, the Magdala, was expected in soon. She left England a few days before the Abyssinia. The Abyssinia measures 1,849 tons, and has 200-horse power of engines, carries two double-gun turrets, and is driven by twin-screws.

Military.—The head-quarters of the 11th Regiment N.I. marched from Poona for Sattara on the morning of the 24th Jan. The Standing Medical Committee was to assemble at the office of the Deputy Inspector General, B. M. S., Bombay, on the 26th Jan., to examine Staff Surgeon-Major Cogan, Captain Sinclair, 38th Regiment, and such other officers as might appear before it. Within a few days, says the Pioneer, Nusseerabad may expect to see three distinguished visitors—the Bishop of Bombay, Major General Malcolm, C.B., and Lieutenant-Colonel Crommelin, C.B., to inquire, respectively, into the state of the souls, the soldiers, and the soldiers' barracks of the station. The latter appear to possess just now the greatest interest for the general public, and Colonel Crommelin's report on the new barracks will, when it appears, find an expectant public. The detachment 2nd Grenadier Regiment N. I. arrived here from Bombay on Friday evening last by special train, under the command of Captain J. G. McRae. It consisted of one major, one subadar-major, ten havildars, seven naiques, one hundred and fifty-three rank and file, four drummers, two bheesties, and three jemadars.—Poona Observer, Jan. 24.—Lieutenant and Adjutant E. W. Golding, her Majesty's 95th Regiment, is about to succeed to a company, by purchase, in that regiment, vice Mulock, who retires. Ensign Sir A. Campbell, nephew to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, will succeed to the lieutenancy, and Lieutenant DeSalis will probably be appointed to the adjutancy of the regiment.—Poona Observer, Jan. 26.—The 11th Regiment Native Infantry, which arived here last week, left for Sattara this morning under the command of Colonel C. T. Pallin. We understand that since its arrival at Poona the regiment was ordered to stand fast. This order it is said was owing to the disbandment of the 28th Regiment Native Infantry, which is now stationed at Sholapoor, but as the 11th Regiment has at last left for its original destination (Sattara) and not for Sholapoor, as was rumoured, the report regarding the disbandment of the 28th Regiment would appear to be without any foundation.—Poona Observer, Jan. 24.—The Artillery have all left Jhansie, and there is not a gun left at the station but the one which fires at twelve o'clock, to enable the inhabitants to keep their watches up to time. The 106th Regiment is still at Jhansie, and they have no idea when they will receive orders to leave it. It is pleasant enough just now—very cold indeed; but when the hot weather and rains set in, then comes the tug of war with fever and dysentery, and every form of disease which is induced by malaria. General Olpherts is expected to pay the station another visit shortly.—Deccan Herald, Jan. 25.—The s.s. Bellona, 1,480 tons, Capt. J. Wilkinson, arrived on Jan. 26 from Hong Kong with the following military details:—Colonel Hight, wife and two children, Lieutenant H. Baber, Assistant Surgeon Baethhouse, and 400 rank and file.

Imports.—Bombay, Jan. 28.—The market for all descriptions of imports continues dull. Business has to some extent been affected by the distrust which has seized the bazaar dealers with respect to up-country buyers, amongst whom several failures have occurred during the week; and the dealers are now requiring cash on delivery. Grey Goods: The market has continued dull throughout the week, with no change in prices. Shirtings: about 10,000 pieces 39-inch 6 lbs. were sold at Rs. 4-1½ to 4-3½; of 6½ lbs., about 5,000 pieces were taken off at Rs. 4-7 to 4-10; in 7 lbs., about 12,000 pieces changed hands at Rs. 4-10½ to 5. Bleached Goods have been dull. Dyed and Printed Goods ditto; the following are the sales which have been effected:—viz., about 5,600 pieces White Ground Prints, at Rs. 4 to 4-12; and about 4,000 pieces Blue, Green, and Yellow Prints, at Rs. 3-10. Turkey Red Goods dull; the sales which have taken place are as follows, viz.:—About 1,000 pieces Cambrics, at Rs. 3-14 to 4-9; and about 1,200 pieces Mulls, at Rs. 3-12. Grey Yarns: The market has continued dull throughout the week, with little or no change in prices. Metals: Ditto; we have to report the following sales, viz.:—About 250 cwts. Copper Braziers, at Rs. 44; about 1,000 cwts. Copper Ingots, at Rs. 39½ to 39¾; about 500 cwts. Iron Nail Rod, square, at Rs. 20½; about 500 cwts. Yellow Metal Braziers, at Rs. 37-3 to 37-4; about 1,000 cwts. Steel, in tubes, at Rs. 7-11; and about 100 cwts. Lead Pig, at Rs. 10-10.

Exports.—Bombay, Jan. 28.—Cotton: By the telegrams received during the week the Liverpool market has been pretty steady, closing firmer on the 26th, the date of our latest telegram, at an advance of ¼d., Fair Dhollerah being then quoted at 6¼d. The political telegrams of the 24th, however, report that M. Jules Favre had arrived at Versailles, with proposals for the capitulation of Paris, conditionally that the garrison should leave with the honours of war. Although the proposal was declared by Count Bismarck to be inadmissible, it is felt that the surrender of Paris will come at no distant date, and with it probably the termination of the war. Since the receipt of these telegrams a large business has been done, but prices generally have not advanced more than Rs. 3 to 5 on last week's quotations. The purchases for export made in Bombay in the week aggregate about 6,500 candies, among which there were—of Old Cotton, about 2,000 candies of Dholleras and Bhownuggur, at prices ranging from Rs. 175 to 189, according to quality; 600 candies of Dharwar Sawginned, at Rs. 193 to 195; and 300 candies of Veravul, at Rs. 171 to 173½; and of New Cotton, 1,600 candies of Oomrawuttee, deliverable in February, at Rs. 190 to 200½; 400 candies of Paizpore, at Rs. 194 to 195; 300 candies of Khandeish, at Rs. 182 to 186; 300 candies of Akote, at Rs. 204 to 206; and 250 candies of Hingunghat, at Rs. 216 to 220. The market closes firm, with a good business doing.

East India Association.—Indian Commerce.—A discussion took place on the 13th current at a meeting of the East India Association, held in the theatre of the Society of Arts (Sir Bartle Frere in the chair), after an address delivered by Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji, on "The Commerce of India." The speech dealt rather with the balance of trade between India and this country than with Indian commerce in general. Mr. D. Naoroji's opinions, as coming from a Parsee gentleman who was at one time professor in the Elphinstone College at Bombay, were uttered with some confidence; but the lecturer spoke with great fluency, and exhibited extensive knowledge of the subject he treated, thus gaining the attention of his audience at once. Mr. Dadabhai holds to an idea which many will think fallacious—viz., that India is becoming poorer in consequence of the sum she remits to England for the home charges, added to the remittances of the European employés in India. He supported this notion by pointing to the excess of exports from India over imports. Dr. Hyde Clarke urged, on the other hand, that the immense remittances of silver to India, which amounted in about a quarter of a century to two hundred millions, are not reconcilable with India's decreasing wealth. Mr. Capels (late member of Council at Bombay) having spoken on the same side as the last speaker, Mr. Eastwick, M.P., observed that the main object of this discussion was evidently to draw the attention of Parliament to the subject. He believed, however, that India was in a flourishing condition, and the people were, on the whole, contented, notwithstanding the grievance of the income-tax; and he considered the suggestions that had been made for advancing loans from this country a very questionable proceeding. The Chairman said the large amount of money which India annually paid to England might be considered as the payment which that country made for good government. He considered that the people of India, so far from complaining of this as a burden, willingly paid it for the benefit which they received, and were glad to receive, from England. The point to be considered was whether we could make this tax somewhat more easy to India. The discussion was adjourned.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

CURRENCY NOTES.

Jan. 20.—With a view to afford increased facilities to the public in obtaining cash for Government currency notes at important places where at present no paper currency offices exist, the Gov. gen. in Council has determined to establish agencies of the paper currency department at certain selected stations which will from time to time be notified in the Gazette.

The agencies will in every case be placed at the Government Treasury, and will be under the superintendence of the Treasury officer.

3. A limited amount of notes and coin will be supplied to each from the head office of the circle of issue; and all applications for exchange, whether for notes or silver coin, will be granted without restriction, so far as these funds permit.

4. There is no legal obligation to cash any notes at these agencies; but they are established in order to provide facilities for exchange to the public beyond the requirements of the law.

MARRIAGE REGISTRARS.—The following gentlemen are appointed marriage registrars in Calcutta:—The Revs. J. Richards and J. Ross.

MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONERS.—The Gazette of India contains the appointment of the following gentlemen to be municipal commissioners for the town of Darjeeling:—Dr. T. Duka and the Rev. G. M. Wilson, M.A.

CONSULAR.—H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. in Council recognises the appointment of Mr. W. Mundt to officiate as Consul for his Majesty the Emperor of Austria and for the North-German Confederation at the Port of Bassein during the absence of Mr. J. H. Bandow, or until further orders.

PASSAGES.—The Right Hon. the Gov. gen. in Council has decided that an officer on the abolition of his appointment is to be considered, when rejoining his corps or station, or proceeding to another appointment with the same or less staff salary, as travelling on duty at the public expense.

BONDS GIVEN BY OFFICIALS.—In exercise of the power conferred by the Court Fees' Act, 1870, section 35, the Gov. gen. of India in Council hereby remits throughout British India the fees with which bonds and other instruments executed by salaried officers of Government to secure the due performance of their duties are chargeable under that Act, Schedule 2, No. 6.

DRESS.—The Commander-in-Chief is pleased to direct that the following is to be considered the head dress of commissioned officers serving in the barrack department as barrack-masters:—Helmet: Plain white, same shape as the Hawkes' patent cork helmet, with black leather chin strap, turban white. Forage Cap: For officers belonging to the staff corps, as laid down in G.O. 219 of 1869; for others the same as for infantry with a plain black mohair band.

NATIVE MEDICAL PUPILS.—The Right Hon. the Governor-general in Council having had under further consideration para. 42 of G.G.O. No. 550 of 1868, so far as it concerns native medical pupils only, is pleased to modify the conditions therein laid down, and to rule that the prescribed period of training, viz., four years, should not of necessity be divided, as now, equally between a regimental hospital or civil dispensary and a medical college, but that the period allotted to the college course may be extended up to three years. The period to be passed in a hospital or dispensary will be proportionately reduced, but under no circumstances is it to be less than one year.

EMERGENT MEDICAL REQUISITIONS.—An instance having occurred of unauthorised extra hospital furniture for the preservation of hospital clothing having been made upon the requisition of a deputy inspector general of hospitals, the Government of India is pleased to rule that the power granted to deputy inspectors general of hospitals (both British and Indian medical service), to make emergent requisitions, is limited strictly to requisitions on medical and sanitary grounds.

SOLDIERS' GREAT COATS.—In supersession of G.G.O. No. 960 of Oct. 3, 1870, the Right Hon. the Governor-general in Council having been pleased to decide that all soldiers discharged as invalids or time-expired men, whether returning to England or proceeding to the Colonies, will be allowed to take with them from their regiment or depot a condemned cloak or great coat, it is ruled that whenever great coats and cloaks are condemned by Regimental Boards, such of them as are not altogether unserviceable are to be retained in regimental or battery store for the use of such time-expired men and invalids.

REDUCTIONS IN THE FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.—In continuation of the Resolution No. 3,698, recorded in the Financial Department on September 29, 1870, the Gov. gen. in Council has resolved to abolish one of the two Assistantships to the Secretary to the Government of India in the Financial Department, and to sanction the appointment of an Assistant to the Deputy Accountant-general in the Central Provinces, who shall ordinarily be in the fifth class of the Financial Department. In accordance with this resolution, the schedule showing how the offices in the department should be ordinarily distributed among the first five classes will stand is published for general information in the Calcutta Gazette.

INTERPRETERS.—The following letter from the Military Department to the Controller of Military Accounts, No. 126, dated Sept. 3 last, is published for information and guidance:—"I am directed to acknowledge your letter, No. 596G, dated July 14, and reminder, No. 859G, dated Aug. 23, on the subject of the claim of ——— to the allowance of five rupees a-day for having performed the duties of an interpreter to a European Court of Requests, of which he was president, at ———, on Dec. 4, 1869, and, in reply, to acquaint you that the interpreter's allowance is to be restricted to officers who are not members of the court. The five rupees per diem, I am to observe, is granted for the services of an officer as interpreter, whose duty does not otherwise call upon him to attend the court, but who is required to do so when no member of the court is available. The claim of ——— is therefore inadmissible under this ruling."

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned candidates are reported to have passed the Lower Standard in Hindoostanee on the dates specified:—Asst. Apothecary A. B. Eates, E battery 16th brigade R.A.; Dec. 5. Lieut. R. D. E. Lockhart, C battery F brigade R.H.A.; Colour sergt. D. Baird, 2-12th foot; Private T. Moore, 2-12th foot; Corporal T. Pearson, 1-14th foot; Hospital Apprentice C. E. Davis, 1-17th foot; Colour sergeant W. McLellan, 26th foot; Private J. Lyness, 26th foot; Lance corporal J. Lukeman, 2-60th foot; Lance sergeant M. Murphy, 62nd foot; Drummer J. Clinton, 62nd foot; Asst. surg. J. S. Gunn, M.B., 9th N.I.; Conductor W. Crawford, ordnance department; Jan. 2. The following candidates have also passed the tests specified:—High Proficiency in Arabic: Capt. P. D. Henderson, 2nd M.L.C. Higher Standard in Hindoostanee: Ensign A. S. McRae, 36th foot; Lieut. B. Smith, doing duty 4th N.I., 107th foot; Capt. H. L. Young, doing duty 9th N.I., general list, infantry.

DUTIES OF MAGISTRATES.—The Central Committee for the Examination of Assistant Commissioners and Extra Assistant Commissioners, and the Judges of the Chief Court, have drawn the attention of Government to the fact that many judicial officers fail to comply with the provisions of Sec. 195, Criminal Procedure Code, which requires magistrates, at the time of trial, and when the evidence is not taken down by them, to record a memorandum of the substance of what each witness deposes. These memoranda are reported to be often written after the evidence has been taken, thus not being an independent record in the hand of the magistrate, but a mere abstract of the evidence, recorded by a subordinate ministerial officer. Under the authority vested in the local Government by Sec. 196 of the said Code, the Hon. the Lieut.-Governor is pleased to direct that from the date of this order all native judicial officers shall in criminal trials take down the evidence of witnesses in their own handwriting in full. Should they be prevented by any sufficient reasons from taking down the evidence of any witness, in such case they shall record the reason of their inability to do so, and shall cause the evidence to be taken down in writing, from their dictation, in open court.

NEXT SOLDIERS' INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION.—In continuation of G.O.C.C. of Nov. 2 last, it is hereby announced that, with the approval of the Government of India, the next Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition, which will be held at Lucknow in February next, will be open to all British troops in the Bengal Presidency. 2. The major-general commanding the Oude division will be good enough to nominate a central committee of management, and fix and notify the date of opening of the Exhibition. 3. Commanding officers of corps, intending to compete, will at once appoint regimental committees to act in concert and direct communication with the central committee, and to aid and encourage their men in contributing to the Exhibition. 4. State assistance, to the extent sanctioned in paras. 3 and 9 of G.O. dated Oct. 11, 1865 (page 215 of standing orders), will be given, and the balance credit of the late Exhibition at Meean Meer will be available for the purposes of the present one. 5. As a rule articles should be sent for competition only once, though they may be offered for sale a second time. Thus, those articles which have competed in previous exhibitions are not to be sent to the forthcoming one, except for sale. 6. There is no limit on the weight of goods to be sent to these annual exhibitions. It must be understood, however, that the quantity allowed to be carried at the public expense is to be restricted to the authorised scale. 7. The necessity of economy in preliminary expenses is to be impressed upon the several committees.

Interior Economy, Native Regiments.—The C. in C. is pleased to direct that in place of being designated by numbers the companies of native infantry shall be henceforth distinguished in each regiment by letters from A to H for all purposes of interior economy. On parade they will be numbered from right to left, the company actually on the right being number one. This alteration will come into effect from January 1, 1871.

Circulation of Currency Notes.—The Governor General in Council is desirous of affording such increased facilities for the conversion of currency notes as can be given without imposing on the Government the cost of making remittances of specie. With this view, it is notified that, so far as may be practicable, due regard being had to the primary obligation to discharge in cash all notes at the place of issue and at the principal office of issue of the Presidency, the coin reserve at each office of issue will be held available for cashing currency notes of any circle. The amount up to which each office of issue is prepared to cash the notes of other circles will be notified daily at such office for public information. It is hoped the arrangements now made will admit of notes of all circles being ordinarily convertible at the office of issue in the interior, and at one at least of the Presidency towns; it cannot, however, be expected that the offices of the two great towns, Calcutta and Bombay, between which places there is an active exchange, will, under ordinary circumstances, be able at the same time to cash notes other than those which by law they are bound to cash on presentation. It is further notified that the head commissioner of currency at Calcutta and the commissioners at Madras and Bombay have been authorised to sell drafts at their discretion on such offices of issue as have accumulations of coin which it is desirable to reduce. Particulars as to the places on which drafts are available from time to time can be learnt on application to the officers named. The Governor General in Council is pleased to authorise the Madras currency office, till further orders, to cash freely the notes of all circles or presidencies.

Court-Martial on Soldiers.—At a General Court-Martial, assembled at Bareilly, on Nov. 5, 1870, Private William Clark, 2nd battalion 25th regt., was arraigned on the following charges:—First charge: That he, William Clarke, on the 27th day of August, 1870, being a soldier of H.M.'s British army, serving at Bareilly, a place in H.M.'s dominions in India, at a distance of upwards of 120 miles from the Presidencies of Fort William, Fort St. George, and Bombay, respectively, did, at Bareilly aforesaid, attempt to commit culpable homicide amounting to murder, by doing an act, that is to say, discharging a gun loaded with gunpowder and shot, at Dhokul Sing, with the intention of causing the death of the said Dhokul Sing, and thereby did cause grievous hurt to him by wounding him in several places on his right leg, and on his body, the said act being then and there done by the said William Clarke whilst he was not deprived of the power of self-control by any grave and sudden provocation; and not being done by him in the exercise in good faith of the right of private defence of person or property; and not being done by him as or being a public servant, or aiding a public servant acting for the advancement of public justice; and not being done by him without premeditation in a sudden fight, in the heat of passion, upon a sudden quarrel; and the said Dhokul Sing not taking the risk of death with his own consent. Second charge: That he, William Clarke, on the 27th day of August, 1870, being a soldier of H.M.'s British army, serving at Bareilly, a place in H.M.'s dominions in India, at a distance of upwards of one hundred and twenty miles from the Presidencies of Fort William, Fort St. George and Bombay, respectively, did, at Bareilly aforesaid, without grave and sudden provocation, voluntarily cause grievous hurt to Dhokul Sing, by discharging at the said Dhokul Sing a gun loaded with gunpowder and shot, and thereby wounding him, Dhokul Sing, in several places on his right leg and on his body, from the effects of which wounds he, the said Dhokul Sing, was during the space of twenty days and upwards, in bodily pain, and was unable to perform his duties as a soldier. Finding: The Court finds that the prisoner, Private W. Clarke, is, of the first charge, "not guilty;" of the second charge, "not guilty." Approved and confirmed. At a General Court-Martial, assembled at Peshawur, on Friday, Nov. 11, No. 1,970, Private A. Hitch, 1st battalion 5th Fusiliers, was arraigned on the following charges:—First charge: Having, at Peshawur, Sept. 21, been drunk. Second charge: Insubordination, accompanied with personal violence, in having, at Peshawur, on or about Sept. 21, used violence against Corporal and Lance Sergeant A. Buckland, 1st battalion 5th Fusiliers, by striking him in the face with his clenched fist, the said Lance Sergeant being his superior officer, and being in the execution of his office. Finding: The Court finds that the prisoner is guilty of both the charges. The Court sentence the prisoner to suffer penal servitude for the term of ten years. The Court do further sentence him to be discharged from her Majesty's service, and also to be marked with the letters B. C. Confirmed.—(Signed) Napier of Magdala, General.—At a court-martial at Morar (Col. Holroyd, president), on the 10th December, Private George McClain, 1st batt. 11th regt., was charged with insubordination, accompanied with personal violence, in having struck with his clenched fist Capt. Wilby Albony Liot, R.A., his superior officer, who was in the execution of his office; and, secondly, with having been drunk on the same occasion. He was found guilty, and sentenced to suffer penal servitude for ten years. There was a recommendation to mercy, and the Commander-in-Chief remarks in approving the proceedings—"I regret that I cannot comply with the Court's recommendation to mercy in the case of insubordination with violence to a superior officer."—The official intimation of another case of insubordination has just reached us. A court-martial at Lucknow (Lieut. col. R. B. Macleod, president), on the 31st October, tried Private John Young, of her Majesty's 62nd regiment, for insubordination, accompanied with personal violence, in the following instances:—First. In having, at the cells of the regiment, used violence against Captain Arthur Lloyd Reade, of the same regiment, by throwing a vessel of water over him, the said Captain Reade being his superior officer and being in the execution of his office, and at the same time used insubordinate language towards him, to the effect, "There, you may take that to the General." Second: In having offered violence against Captain Reade, by throwing his boots and a brush at him. Being found guilty he was sentenced to suffer penal servitude for the term of twenty years, to be discharged with ignominy from her Majesty's service, and to be marked with the letters B.C. This has been approved and confirmed. —At a district court-martial at Ferozepore on Oct. 24 (Major W. C. Hamilton, president), Sergt.-major John Collins, 39th Regiment, was charged with conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having permitted and encouraged the sale of liquor from the sergeants' mess of his regiment to private soldiers, and in having been cognisant of a practice existing in the sergeants' mess of his regiment of selling liquor to private soldiers, and having failed to report the same to superior authority. He was also charged with perjury. The Court found him guilty of the first charge, with the exception of the words "and encouraged," in the first instance, and guilty of the second charge; and sentenced him to be reduced to the ranks, and to be imprisoned with hard labour for one hundred and sixty-eight days. In approving and confirming the proceedings the Commander-in-Chief remarks—"The sergeant-major has abused the confidence placed in him, and instead of setting an example to the non-commissioned officers and men of his regiment, of soldier-like and upright conduct, has deceived his commanding officer, and permitted a practice which may have led many men into crime. I regret that I cannot comply with the Court's recommendation to mercy." —At a General Court-Martial, at Chukratta, Nov. 14 (Colonel C. Caulfield, president), Private Michael Halloran, 55th regiment, was charged with attempting to commit culpable homicide, amounting to murder, by pushing Michael Murphy over a precipice, knowing that the said act was so imminently dangerous, that it must in all probability have caused the death of the said Michael Murphy, and thereby did cause grievous hurt to him, by causing concussion to the brain, dangerous to life, and wounds on his head. He was charged in another count with causing grievous hurt. The Court found him guilty of the first charge, and not guilty of the second, and sentenced him to penal servitude for six years. The proceedings have been approved and confirmed.—At a General Court-Martial, at Umballa, on Dec. 3 and 5 (Col. W. R. Cumming, president), Quartermaster George Masters, 20th hussars, was charged with having been in a disgraceful state of drunkenness in public on the railway platform, and used grossly insulting language regarding Captain Arthur Westby Brodhurst and Lieutenant Cecil Mangles, both of the same regiment, to the effect following:—"I want to listen to what this gentleman, Capt. Brodhurst, is saying, and this other young gentleman (meaning the said Lieutenant Mangles) too; they (meaning the said Captain Brodhurst and the said Lieutenant Mangles) are are a lot of scoundrels." He was found guilty, with the exception of the words "disgraceful" and "grossly," and sentenced to be severely reprimanded. This has been approved and confirmed, the Commander-in-Chief remarking—"In consideration of the long service, especially the field service, and the previous good character of Quartermaster G. Masters, I accept without reserve the finding of the Court, who must have given much weight to the plea of the prisoner, that his condition was due to the state of weakness he had fallen into through the injuries caused by his fall from his horse." The sentence of the Court, together with these remarks, conveying a severe reprimand, will be read to Quartermaster G. Masters, in the presence of the regimental and garrison staff.

THE INDIAN PAPER CURRENCY.

Extracts from a Resolution by the Government of India, Financial Department, dated Jan. 13, 1871, on a report by Colonel Hyde, the Head Commissioner of Paper Currency, on the operations of his department during the year 1869–70 :—

The Governor-general in Council observes from this report that the monthly average value of Government currency notes in circulation in each year since their introduction has been as follows, viz. :—

	Monthly average Circulation.		Increase.		Circulation on October 31.		December 31.		March 31.
1862–63 ...	4,419,428	...	—	...	4,580,000	...	4,520,000	...	4,926,000

Fort William, Jan. 11.—The Governor-general in Council is desirous of affording such increased facilities for the conversion of currency notes as can be given without imposing on the Government the cost of making remittances of specie.

With this view, it is notified that, so far as may be practicable, due regard being had to the primary obligation to discharge in cash all notes at the place of issue and at the principal office of issue of the Presidency, the coin reserve at each office of issue will be held available for cashing currency notes of any circle.

The amount up to which each office of issue is prepared to cash the notes of other circles will be notified daily at such office for public information.

It is hoped that the arrangements now made will admit of notes of all circles being ordinarily convertible at the offices of issue in the interior, and at one at least of the Presidency towns; it cannot, however, be expected that the offices of the two great towns, Calcutta and Bombay, between which places there is an active exchange, will, under ordinary circumstances, be able at the same time to cash notes other than those which by law they are bound to cash on presentation.

It is further notified that the Head Commissioner of Currency at Calcutta and the Commissioners at Madras and Bombay have been authorised to sell drafts at their discretion on such offices of issue as have accumulations of coin which it is desirable to reduce. Particulars as to the places on which drafts are available from time to time can be learnt on application to the officers named.

ANNUAL ADMINISTRATION REPORTS.

The Secretary of State for India is very dissatisfied with the present style of the Annual Administration Reports from the different presidencies and provinces in India. He has written a despatch to the Viceroy to the following effect :—

"MY LORD,—I desire that your Excellency in Council will call the immediate attention of the various local Governments in India to the subject of the careful preparation and punctual despatch of the Annual Administration Reports. I wish it to be distinctly understood that the preparation of these reports constitutes a most important part of the duty of a Government, and that it is very desirable on all accounts that each report should exhibit a comprehensive view of administrative progress. Of the eight reports submitted, those of the Punjab and British Burmah are the most complete and satisfactory; those of the North-West Provinces and the Central Provinces are not open to objection. Of the rest, I will only add that the report for Bombay is very much the worst. An Administration Report, to be of any value, should afford to the reader an adequate view of the resources of the territory under the Government, and of the working of the various departments of the Administration. It should also contain a clear and condensed statement of the more important questions which have engaged the attention of the Government during the year. The report of the Punjab for the year 1868-69 may be fairly taken as a model of what I wish the reports to be. I consider that the preparation, or at least the editing, of the report should be entrusted by the Government to one of its Secretaries or Under-Secretaries, so that it may bear the impress of one mind. It should be accompanied by statistical tables, and by a map indicating the situation of the places named, and be preceded by an introduction explanatory of the plan on which the report has been prepared, and detailing the events of interest which occurred during the year. On taking up the report for Bombay, a reader would naturally expect to obtain some valuable information on the important subject of cotton cultivation. The details which he would find are of the most meagre and unsatisfactory kind. I mention this as one instance in which a report has utterly failed in attaining the object which was in view when the submission of these documents was originally directed. I must also draw the attention of your Excellency in Council to the great want of punctuality which exists in the transmission of these reports. I desire, in future, that they may always be sent to me in the month of January, so that they may reach this office during the month of February at the latest."

GUARANA.—The following is a description of Guarana, a new rival to tea and coffee. The fruit is scarcely as large as a walnut, and contains five or six seeds, which are roasted, then mixed with water, and moulded into a cylindrical form resembling a large sausage, and finally dried in an oven. Before being used it is grated into a powder, very like powdered cocoa in appearance. Two spoonsful of the powder are mixed in a tumbler of water. This drink is regarded as a stimulant to the nerves, and, like strong tea or coffee, is said to take away the disposition to sleep. The active chemical principle is an alkaloid which Dr. Stenhouse has shown to be identical with theine. The same alkaloid prevails in tea, coffee, and cocoa, as well as in the maté of South America and the guarana of Brazil. Guarana is a nervous stimulant and restorative.

ARRIVAL OF THE "SERAPIS."—Her Majesty's Indian troop relief steamship Serapis, Captain Grant, arrived in Portsmouth Harbour on the morning of February 14, from Alexandria and Malta, with the following officers, passengers, and troops on board, from Bombay, via Suez and Alexandria :—Major Fitzgerald, 49th Infantry, in military command of all troops on board; Lieutenants Adams and Inness, Assistant-Surgeon Ironside, and Veterinary-Surgeon Kettle, Royal Artillery; Surgeon Grant, 2nd batt. 1st Infantry; Captain Flood, 1st batt. 2nd Infantry; Lieutenant Barnard, 1st batt. 3rd Infantry; Captain Moffatt, 1st batt. 9th Infantry; Lieutenant Artley, 1st batt. 11th Infantry; Captain Thompson and Lieutenant Lindsay, 1st batt. 14th Infantry; Lieutenant Burnett, 2nd batt. 19th Infantry; Captain Turner, Lieutenants Green and Demphill, 26th Infantry; Lieutenant Doyne, 38th Infantry; Ensign Fulton, 59th Infantry; Lieutenant Grenfell, 2nd batt. 50th Infantry; Captain Dundee and Lieutenant Goding, 62nd Infantry; Captain Brind and Lieutenant Pidcock, 103rd Infantry; Captain Goad, 107th Infantry; Ensign Knott, 3rd batt. Rifle Brigade; Major Sullivan, unattached; Lieutenant Kenwick, Staff Corps; Surgeon Miller, Assistant-Surgeons Derby, Pardon, and White, Medical Staff; Assistant-Paymaster Howell, R.N.; 763 invalided soldiers, 26 time-expired soldiers; 83 soldiers' wives, 164 soldiers' children, and two naval invalids.

OUDE AND ROHILKUND RAILWAY.—It is announced that the privilege of making payments in full on the shares of the Oude and Rohilkund Railway Company will be withdrawn on and after Feb. 27.

SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH TO INDIA.—Since the restoration of the Falmouth Company's Cable on February 11, messages have been regularly received from India, Singapore, and Java, via the Red Sea, within two to four hours of absolute time.

THE ALBERT ASSURANCE RECONSTRUCTION PLAN.—It is understood that the 1st of March has been appointed by Lord Justice James for hearing the case of the Albert Life Office Reconstruction Plan, prepared by the committee, of which Mr. James Thomson is chairman.

A NEW LINE OF STEAMERS TO INDIA.—The Eastern Steamship Company (Limited), recently registered, purpose establishing a line of screw steamers to trade between London and Calcutta, and have already contracted with the Barrow Shipbuilding Company for four steamers of 3,500 tons each.

BANK OF BOMBAY.—The sixth report of the New Bank of Bombay, issued on Jan. 18, has been received. The profits available for distribution to December 31 amounted to Rs. 170,126, out of which a dividend at the rate of five per cent. per annum was declared, absorbing Rs. 150,000, and leaving Rs. 20,126 to be carried forward.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £400,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 15th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta £344,200, to Bombay £50,000, and to Madras £5,800. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 10⅜d. will receive about 76 per cent.; on Bombay at that price in full.

THE REIGN OF LAW.—The following is an extract from a letter I lately received from a friend of mine who is on the Geological Survey of India:—"The Duke of Argyll and his Council have determined that the leave-rules, which are good enough for the natives, are good enough for us, although they are not sufficiently good for educated Europeans, such as the Staff Corps and Civil Service, and this they have resolved on, in spite of the Indian Government. If we could only get fair leave and pension rules, the same as men of the same rank and education receive in the other services, I do not think I should be tempted to give up field-work." May I be allowed to inquire whether this is a new illustration of "The Reign of Law?"—TANTALUS.—Nature.

TELEGRAPH RATES.—The sending of telegrams to India and the Far East is becoming more of a luxury than ever. It appears that the telegraphic companies have once more raised their rates. The charge on messages to India has again been increased from £3 to £3. 10s., and £4 to £4. 10s. respectively. A message of twenty words to Penang will henceforth cost £5. 17s., to Singapore £6. 13s., and to Java £7. 15s. It is useless, we suppose, to protest against these frequent changes, which do not even offer the consolation of being changes for the better. If the receipts of the companies should not be actually diminished by these enhanced rates, it can hardly be doubted that such enhancements defer the prospects of that gradual increase in profits which the lower rates would in time have secured. —Home News.

MILITARY EXERCISES.—It is understood that the War Office authorities, being impressed by the reports of certain officers who have witnessed the Prussian system of exercising soldiers in time of peace, have determined on adopting a similar plan of sham campaigns. The idea is to divide the available force, which will embrace as many men as can be got together at one place, into two armies, under separate command; and, after furnishing all the officers with a rough plan of the intended operations and a map of the country over which it is proposed to manœuvre, to let them work out the details according to their individual judgment, umpires being appointed to criticise every movement and prevent the absurd situations which occasionally occur in sham fights at Woolwich and Aldershot. These manœuvres will probably be deferred till after the harvest, when the damage done to the land over which the troops will have to pass will be only nominal and the compensation small. Open tracts of country will be made available as far as is practicable; and already Dartmoor and the moors of Scotland are spoken of as suitable to the purpose. The campaigns will extend over several days, so as to effectually test the commissariat, military train, and other services with which each division will be furnished as completely as in actual warfare.

CIVIL EMPLOYMENT OF ROYAL ENGINEERS.—Lord Lansdowne's committee on the best way of employing the officers of the Royal Engineers has just issued a report which may possibly affect the future of the new Civil Engineering College. It proposes to employ the Royal Engineers on many kinds of civil duties, on the plea that their military efficiency would thus be greatly increased. Wherever they have hitherto been thus employed, they are said to have fully answered the expectations suggested by "their character and previous training." Since a large number of engineer officers must always be held ready at home and abroad for military requirements beyond the need of the moment, why should not some of them in peace time be employed wholly or partially in civil duties? A material saving to the State would thus be effected, for, of course, their civil pay would be regulated by their military, and when the particular works that demanded their services are finished, they could always be remitted to their military duties. After specifying the kind of work that would best promote their military training—all work, for instance, connected with the control of large bodies of workmen, or the development of a country's resources, the committee recommend that departments needing help of the kind indicated should apply at the War-office for the services of some qualified officer, before seeking for help elsewhere. As a natural corollary to all this, the Indian Government is invited to meet, "from a source preferable to any other," the demands of the Public Works Department for an increased supply of competent engineers. For such a purpose it will of course be necessary to increase the number of cadets yearly passing out of Woolwich. In their draft regulations on this subject the committee recommend that those engineer officers in civil employ, for whom substitutes may be required in their proper service, shall be placed on a reserve list, and their pay be wholly drawn from the Civil Department to which they for a time belong. If after ten years of civil employment they do not resume their military duties, they are to have no further claim to pay or employment under the War Office, but their promotion will be regulated by that of their next juniors in the military list, and their retiring pensions will be calculated as if the whole of their service had been performed in the Civil Department. All officers on the Reserve List will be liable to be recalled to military service by the Secretary of State for War, or the Viceroy of India, as the case may be. They will also be required to keep up their military training, and to serve, at need, for about two months in five years, in a camp of instruction, or a school of military engineering. Those who are only lent to a civil department will be so liable at the rate of one month in each year. Among the opinions quoted by the Committee are those of Sir W. Mansfield, Sir H. Durand, Lord Lawrence, Colonel Dickens, R.A., Colonel Strachey, Colonel Taylor, C.B., and Sir W. E. Baker, of the Indian Council; all of whom are strongly in favour of utilising as far as possible the services of the Royal Engineers for civil purposes. All agree that their military efficiency is increased by their civil experience. Lord Lawrence pays a very high tribute to their distinguished services during the Mutiny. Colonel Stanley dwells on the need of maintaining, through civil employment in peace time, a large reserve of officers ready for the demands of war. Colonel Dickens would let any officer of two or three years' standing be seconded for civil employment, but would give the seconded officer the choice of belonging permanently, without recal, to the civil branch of the Service. In a separate minute, Sir L. Simmons points out the danger of a needless competition between the new Engineering College and the Military Schools at Woolwich and Chatham. The question of supplying engineers for Indian service should, he thinks, be reconsidered, and the desired end obtained by opening Woolwich to candidates for the Public Works Department of India.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, Feb. 16.—ARMY REFORM.—Mr. CARDWELL rose, in a crowded House, to propound the new scheme of the Government on Army Organisation. After an allusion to the amount of the estimates for the present year, and the great increase of £2,886,700 over those of last year, he stated that it was not proposed to resort to compulsory service, either with or without substitutes; but the Bill would contain a provision that in cases of great emergency compulsory service should be resorted to. It was proposed to amalgamate the whole of the land forces, and to abolish the system of purchase. Commissioners would be appointed to purchase the commissions of retiring officers at the ascertained over-regulation prices which had been customary in the regiment, half-pay officers being dealt with on the same principle. This would involve an estimated expenditure of from £7,600,000 to £8,400,000, which would be spread over a series of years. First commissions would be granted in several ways. Admissions to Sandhurst would be obtained by competitive examination; and good conduct at Sandhurst would entitle to commissions; but Government would consider whether it would not be expedient to institute an order of cadets. Then the class of University men who now received commissions would continue to receive them, and the general public would obtain them by competitive examination. Promotion would be by selection through the Commander-in Chief, subject to the approval of the Secretary for War. Measures would be taken to give greater local connection to the regular army. The power of Lords Lieutenant of counties to grant commissions would be withdrawn, and all commissions would emanate from the Crown, but reference would be made to the Lord-Lieutenant. With regard to the Volunteers, a more careful organisation was necessary if that body was to be made efficient, and with this view a sum of £40,000 additional would be paid to the officers of that force, and when the volunteers were out with the regulars, they would be subject to the Mutiny Act.

The Volunteers and Militia of each district would be under the general command of a colonel of the staff, who would have from 15,000 to 20,000 men under his command. The total number of men, including the regular army, the militia, the volunteers, and the reserve, would this year be 470,717. After Mr. Cardwell had concluded, Sir John Pakington said it was impossible to discuss so large a scheme without some time for consideration; and the discussion was then postponed.

House of Commons, Friday, Feb. 17.—Indian Finance.—Mr. Grant Duff said it might facilitate the despatch of business if he now gave notice of the intentions of the Government with respect to a matter in which a good many members on both sides of the House were interested. He had to announce that it was the intention of her Majesty's Government, on the earliest possible day after determining the most convenient mode of proceeding, to move for the appointment of a committee on Indian finance. (Hear, hear.) He believed that the appointment of such a committee would not only give satisfaction to some hon. members, who were very desirous for an enquiry into the financial condition of India, but also that such an inquiry would tend to remove various misapprehensions that had arisen.

Indian Finance and Administration.—Mr. Fawcett, in moving for a select committee to inquire into the affairs of India, said he had no assurance that the committee to be moved for by the Under Secretary for India would embrace all the questions he was desirous of having investigated. He desired a committee to inquire into the present position and future prospects of the revenue and expenditure of India, the organisation of the public works department, the relations of the Government with the higher and primary education, the army organisation and expenditure, the position of the Local Government and the constitution of the Indian Council, and into the whole expenditure of Indian money in this country. He brought forward his motion in no spirit of hostility to the Government; it was the system, and not the conduct of the administrators of it, that he wished to investigate.—Mr. R. N. Fowler seconded the motion.—Colonel Sykes having spoken in support,—Mr. Grant Duff said the last thing the Government wished to do was not to keep its promise. If they went into all the subjects the hon. member for Brighton had alluded to, it would require not one or two committees, but half-a-dozen. It was his opinion that all parties in India would be satisfied with the committee which the Government proposed to give.—Sir C. Wingfield said that there was a wide-spread feeling that the mismanagement of past years had been caused by the hurried and high-handed way in which a three per cent. income tax had been imposed upon the country.—Mr. Fawcett then expressed himself willing to withdraw the word "general" from the notice, and moved it in an amended form.—Mr. Gladstone said he was glad the hon. member was content to take a committee on the financial state of India, though, in saying that, he did not mean to represent that there were not other objects of inquiry. Were the committee to be overloaded by such subjects of inquiry, its object would be defeated; and even as the committee now stood, this inquiry would be sufficient to give ample occupation to any committee of the House. It was not intended that the committee should be delayed for a fortnight, and he hoped that they would be able next week to redeem their promise. He would ask the hon. member not to press his motion, as in the course of next week they would set about giving practical effect to it.—Mr. Fawcett then withdrew his motion.

House of Commons, Monday, Feb. 20.—Army Promotion.—Mr. Cardwell, in reply to Lord Eustace Cecil, said that the subject of army promotion was under the consideration of eminent military officers; and, when a decision was arrived at, due notice would be given to all concerned. As regarded officers who wished, under the new system, to enter the army, they would have to do so either by a competitive examination at one of the universities or at a military college.

The Army Organisation Scheme and Estimates.—Mr. Cardwell, in reply to Sir J. Pakington, relative to the order of procedure on the Army Organisation Bill and Army Estimates, said he agreed with the right hon. gentleman that it was most important that full time should be given for for the consideration of the Bill. It had not yet circulated, but he hoped it would to-morrow morning. He was desirous that the House should have an opportunity of considering the subject before it was called on to give an opinion upon it. He thought that the second reading of the Bill would afford a good opportunity for full discussion of the question. He wished to make all progress with the Bill, but he thought hon. members should have a fair opportunity of considering it. He would therefore propose to fix the second reading for Thursday week.—In reply to a further question from Mr. White, Mr. Cardwell said he proposed that the Bill should be the first order, and the Army Estimates the second on the same day.

Army Commissions.—Mr. Cardwell, in reply to Mr. Guest, said that it was the intention to indemnify the relatives of officers dying in action from a public fund. When the Bill is passed they will not receive any such benefit out of a private fund. What they would recover would be the same as it is now. This would apply by Clause 1,069 of the Royal Warrant.—In reply to Mr. Bristowe, Mr. Cardwell also stated that those gentlemen who had passed out of Sandhurst would have precedence of those who had passed their examinations for direct commissions. Those who had passed out of Sandhurst would stand on the list of commissions A and B. All commissions would be without purchase, and those given without purchase would have no right to be sold.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

PENSIONS AND GRATUITIES.—The Gov. gen. in Conncil publishes the following rule:—The remuneration, whether by fees or by salary, which is given to a public officer for performing, in addition to the duties of his own office, those of sub-registrar of assurances, comes within the class "local allowances," and should not be taken account of in computation of pension. The rule applies equally to other similar cases of additional remuneration given for special duties, where the remuneration is such that it is always given in full to the person who actually performs the duties, and no part of it is drawn by an absentee.

CHALLENGE to the WORLD.—The Bristol Daily Times and Mirror, August 5th, has the following:—"Messrs. J. C. Swan and Co., of 16, Queen-square, in this city, have invented a pocket microscope, which is a marvel in all that such an instrument should be. It has great power, remarkable definition, and does not require focussing. The cheapness of the article will make it exceedingly popular when its merits are more widely known. It is called the 'Bristol Microscope,' and is a great credit to the inventor, as much for its extreme simplicity as its power."—The Western Daily Press says:—"The Bristol Microscope has a magnifying power of 20,000 times," &c., &c.—The Western Daily Telegraph says:—"The Bristol Microscope is the most compact and useful scientific instrument we have ever seen; it possesses extraordinary power, and is very easily managed," &c. The price of the Bristol Microscope is only 2s., or, free by post, with printed directions, for twenty-eight stamps.

THE HISTORY of INDIA, from the Earliest Period to the Close of Lord Dalhousie's Administration in 1856. By JOHN CLARK MARSHMAN.

"Mr. Marshman's has the merit of being a history which it is easy to read and to remember—indeed, it is perhaps the only very readable History of India yet given to the public. Every epoch in Indian annals has been more fully treated of by Mr. Marshman's predecessors in historical inquiry, but the book is original in offering in a moderate compass a comprehensive summary of all the incidents which are most memorable in connection with our control of the Empire. The Third Volume, moreover, is especially valuable, from the fact that the Author's personal recollections carry him back to nearly all the great events which are recorded in it. . . . We may safely commend it to our readers as a work which may be perused with advantage, not less by those who are familiar with Indian history than by those who are ignorant of the subject, and go to Mr. Marshman as their first guide."—The Times.
